PAUL O'KEEFE[1] & others[2]

v.

C & C HOSPITALITY, LLC d/b/a C. F. MCCARTHY'S & others[3]

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER ON DEFENDANTS' PARTIAL MOTIONS TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO MASS. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6) (Paper Nos: 37, 37.3, 37.4)

This matter arises out of the January 29, 2022, death of John Joseph O'Keefe, III ("JJ").[4] Defendant and moving party, Karen Read ("Read"), was previously charged with several crimes in connection with JJ's death. During the pendency of Read's criminal case, plaintiffs Margaret O'Keefe ("Margaret," JJ's mother), John O'Keefe, II ("John," JJ's father), Paul O'Keefe ("Paul," JJ's brother and personal representative of JJ's estate), and Kayley Furbursh ("Kayley," JJ's niece) filed this civil lawsuit asserting claims against Read for Wrongful Death (Count III), Negligent and/or Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts X, XI, and XII), and Negligent, Reckless, and/or Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress (Count XIII).

The plaintiffs also asserted claims for Wrongful Death (Counts I and II), and Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, and IX) against C&C Hospitality,

LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's, G&S Hospitality, LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's (collectively, "C.F. McCarthy's") and Waterfall Bar & Grill, LTD d/b/a Waterfall Bar & Grill ("Waterfall"). These defendants are corporate entities that owned bars that allegedly served Read alcohol in the hours leading up to the events at issue.

Read filed a motion to dismiss all emotional distress claims asserted against her. C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall joined on Read's motion to dismiss, similarly seeking to dismiss the emotional distress claims asserted against them.[5] For the foregoing reasons, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to Kayley's claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

BACKGROUND

The following facts are drawn from the plaintiffs' complaint and accepted as true for purposes of this motion.[6]

On January 28, 2022, Read patronized C.F. McCarthy's from 8:51 p.m. through 10:29 p.m. She consumed seven alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Read then patronized Waterfall from 10:54 p.m. that night through 12:10 a.m. the next morning. She consumed two alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Her blood was drawn on January 29, 2022, and testing revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

[5] C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall's motions are technically motions for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12(c), as they previously filed answers to the plaintiffs' complaint. However, a "defendant's rule 12(c) motion is actually a motion to dismiss that argues that the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted" (quotations omitted). Jarosz v. Palmer, 436 Mass. 526, 529 (2002). Thus, the court will apply the same legal framework for C.F. McCarthy and Waterfall's motions as that used in assessing Read's motion to dismiss.

[6] The court also considers facts contained in matters of public record, pursuant to Marram v. Kobrick Offshore Fund, Ltd, 442 Mass. 43, 45 n.4 (2004). These facts are reserved for discussion below.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM

revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

During the timeframe relevant to the instant lawsuit, Read and JJ were in a dating relationship. JJ was with Read that evening, and they had been arguing. After leaving Waterfall, Read got into a motor vehicle with JJ and drove to a residence at 34 Fairview Road in Canton while intoxicated. After arriving at the residence, JJ exited Read's vehicle. Read then drove her vehicle and hit JJ. JJ was knocked to the ground, suffering serious injuries that ultimately led to his death.

Read fled the scene and drove to JJ's residence at 1 Meadows Avenue in Canton. At approximately 4:30 a.m. on January 29, 2022, Read woke up JJ's niece, Kayley, who lived with JJ. Read began discussing JJ's death with Kayley and talked about striking him with her vehicle. "Kayley heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Read also called multiple people between 4:30 a.m. and 5:00 a.m. on January 29, 2022, while in Kayley's presence. At the time, Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who had previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent.

Read left JJ's residence at approximately 5:07 a.m. on January 29, 2022. She arrived at 34 Fairview Road at approximately 6:03 a.m. and discovered JJ buried in snow. JJ was pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 am. "At relevant times after 7:50 am on January 29, 2022, defendant Read went to the grieving house of JJ, feigned comfort to JJ's family, and used the opportunity to, amongst other things, remove the offending weapon, her vehicle, and/or destroy relevant evidence." Complaint, paragraph 47.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Subsequently, over the course of several years, Read made many public statements. "She knowingly and deliberately changed her story and fabricated a conspiracy knowing the same to be false. She publicly communicated this false 'narrative' thereby frustrating Justice for JJ. Such false narrative caused the Plaintiffs aggravated emotional distress." Complaint, paragraph 52.

DISCUSSION

The defendants argue that the emotional distress claims should be dismissed for multiple reasons: 1) distress claims are subsumed by the wrongful death statute; 2) the plaintiffs' claimed distress was not contemporaneous with JJ allegedly being struck by Read's vehicle; 3) there was no extreme or outrageous conduct direct towards the plaintiff that resulted in severe harm; and 4) Kayley's claims for emotional distress fail as a matter of law. The court will address each of these arguments in turn.

A. Standard of Review

To survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12 (b)(6), a complaint must contain "factual 'allegations plausibly suggesting (not merely consistent with)' an entitlement to relief." Iannacchino v. Ford Motor Co., 451 Mass. 623, 636 (2008), quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 557 (2007). The factual allegations must be "more than labels and conclusions" and "raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Iannacchino, 451 Mass. at 636, quoting Bell Atl. Corp., 550 U.S. at 555. In assessing a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6), the court accepts as true the well-pleaded factual allegations in the complaint and draws all reasonable inferences in the claimant's favor. See Fairhaven Hous. Auth. v. Commonwealth, 493 Mass. 27, 30 (2023).

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

The extent of the court's review generally is limited to the factual allegations in the complaint and any facts contained in any attached exhibits. See Eigerman v. Putnam Invs., Inc., 450 Mass. 281, 285 n.6 (2007). However, the court also may consider matters of public record, items in the record of the case, and documents cited and relied upon in the complaint. Schaer v. Brandeis Univ., 432 Mass. 474, 477 (2000).

B. Wrongful Death Statute and Emotional Distress Claims

The defendants argue that the plaintiffs' emotional distress claims are subsumed by the Massachusetts wrongful death statute, G. L. c. 229, § 2. Among other provisions, the statute identifies the following as recoverable damages:

> "the fair monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to receive the damages recovered, as provided in section one, including but not limited to compensation for the loss of the reasonably expected net income, services, protection, care, assistance, society, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice of the decedent to the persons entitled to the damages recovered."

G. L. c. 229, § 2.

Thus, the wrongful death statute contemplates some degree of emotional distress arising from a decedent's death. It addresses the loss of care, assistance, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice, all of which go to the relationship between a decedent and individuals pursuing claims under the statute.

The defendants argue that the independent emotional distress claims asserted by the plaintiffs are redundant to the plaintiffs' wrongful death assertions and consequently should be dismissed. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Cimino v. Milford Keg, Inc., 385 Mass. 323 (1982), the Supreme Judicial Court ("SJC") held:

> "The defendant's . . argument that the plaintiff's claim for emotional distress is 'preempted' by the wrongful death action (G.L. c. 229, s 2) misconstrues the common law cause of action for emotional distress. Emotional distress, as the concept has evolved in this Commonwealth, is a severe psychological shock directly resulting from

> experiencing or witnessing the effects of a defendant's conduct. . . . A claim for damages based on emotional distress does not include an administrator's claim for loss of consortium-which will be present in every wrongful death action such as this. Since emotional distress is a wrong to the plaintiff distinct from that done to [the decedent] and the statutory beneficiaries of the decedent, it is not a duplicative remedy and is not 'preempted' by the wrongful death statute." (quotations omitted).

Cimino, 385 Mass. at 334.

Here, the plaintiffs' direct emotional distress claims go beyond the mere fact that JJ died. Instead, they point to the alleged wrongs they suffered in their individual capacities. They aver that they suffered such harm in observing JJ just after his death, having Read attend family events in the immediate aftermath of JJ's death, and Read developing a public and false narrative that frustrated justice for JJ. These claims are separate from JJ's death and instead are specific to the distress the plaintiffs assert in their individual capacities, rather than their status as relatives of JJ pursuant to the wrongful death statute.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding emotional distress and the wrongful death statute.

C. Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress because their alleged distress did not occur contemporaneously with the accident giving rise to JJ's death. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Stockdale v. Bird & Son, Inc., 399 Mass. 249 (1987), the SJC stated:

> "In Dziokonski v. Babineau, 375 Mass. 555, 568 (1978), we held that 'allegations concerning a parent who sustains substantial physical harm as a result of severe mental distress over some peril or harm to his minor child caused by the defendant's negligence state a claim for which relief might be granted, where the parent either witnesses the accident or soon comes on the scene while the child is still there.' Two years later, in Ferriter v. Daniel O'Connell's Sons, 381 Mass. 507, 518, we held that the wife and children of an employee allegedly injured through his employer's negligence could maintain an action for negligent infliction of emotional distress, even though they first observed the employee in a hospital immediately after the accident. We said that '[a]

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

> plaintiff who rushes onto the accident scene and finds a loved one injured has no greater entitlement to compensation for that shock than a plaintiff who rushes instead to the hospital. So long as the shock follows closely on the heels of the accident, the two types of injury are equally foreseeable.' Id."

Stockdale, 399 Mass. at 251.

Thus, a family member is entitled to emotional distress damages when they either witness the decedent's actual injury or "come upon the injured [kin] promptly after the injury." Nancy P. v. D'Amato, 401 Mass. 516, 520 (1988).

The plaintiffs allege that Read discovered JJ buried in the snow at approximately 6:03 a.m. on January 29, 2022, and he was subsequently pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 a.m. that day. Margaret, John, and Paul each aver that they "learned of JJ's admission to [ ] Hospital immediately and came upon JJ's body at the Hospital shortly thereafter." Complaint, paragraphs 82, 88, 95, 102, 109, 116, 123, 131, and 139. Against this backdrop, the complaint alleges sufficient facts that JJ's parents and brother arrived promptly at the hospital upon learning of JJ's death and thus have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley's negligent infliction of emotional distress claim stands on different footing, however. She alleges that she "learned of JJ's death or injury when defendant Read woke Kayley up approximately 4:30 am on January 29, 2022." Complaint, paragraph 147. Further, Kayley alleges she "heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Lastly, Kayley states that, as a result of Read's conversations in her presence, she "perceived the injuries caused to her guardian, uncle JJ, and perceived the injury producing event." Complaint, paragraph 151.

Taken together, the complaint does not allege that Kayley learned of JJ's death or injury at 4:30 a.m., but instead learned he was maybe injured at that time. There are also no averments

Superior Court - Plymouth

regarding when and the circumstances under which she first observed the deceased JJ. Her averments concern her perceptions of JJ's injuries, rather than her actual observations.

The case law cited by the parties addresses scenarios whereby a family member has observed another family member actually being injured or otherwise suffering shock after promptly encountering the injured family member. Kayley cannot make this showing. In making this assessment, the court acknowledges the following case law cited in the plaintiffs' opposition:

> "the determination whether there should be liability for the injury sustained depends on a number of factors, such as where, when, and how the injury to the third person entered into the consciousness of the claimant, and what degree there was of familial or other relationship between the claimant and the third person" (emphasis in original).

Dziokonski, 375 Mass. at 568.

Such language is inapposite here, as the Dziokonski court's decision turned on liability for negligent infliction of emotional distress and the parameters for when a family member arrived at the scene of an accident giving rise to a relative's injury. Stockdale extended the scope of Dziokonski to family members who promptly arrive at a hospital. Neither of these cases, nor any other cases provided by the parties, creates authority to find negligent infliction of emotional distress for family members who learn of a death beyond this prompt timeframe. Thus, Dziokonski's language about when JJ's injury "entered into the consciousness of the claimant" does not support Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to Margaret, John, and Paul's claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress and ALLOWED as to Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

D. Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for reckless infliction of emotional distress because there was no extreme or outrageous conduct directed towards them that resulted in severe harm.[7] In the context of such claims, conduct is "extreme and outrageous" if it "goes beyond all possible bounds of decency, and is regarded as atrocious, and utterly intolerable in a civilized community" (quotations omitted). Roman v. Trustees of Tufts Coll., 461 Mass. 707, 718 (2012). The standard of extreme and outrageous conduct is a high bar. Such conduct means more than "workaday insults, annoyances, or even threats and petty oppressions . . . . It means, for example, a high order of reckless ruthlessness or deliberate malevolence that . . . is simply intolerable" (quotations omitted). Conway v. Smerling, 37 Mass. App. Ct. 1, 8 (1994).

The plaintiffs allege that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death, which caused them to suffer emotional distress. In support of their opposition to the instant motions, they have produced a search warrant affidavit, which is a matter of public record that the court may consider in assessing whether the complaint plausibly suggests an entitlement to relief.[8]

According to the search warrant materials, on January 22, 2024, Detective Lieutenant Brian Tully ("Tully") of the Massachusetts State Police applied for a warrant to seize "[a]ny

[7] With reference to the defendants' arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct, the plaintiffs' opposition frames the issue in the context of reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. In the complaint, however, Magaret, John, and Paul do not assert claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Instead, at Counts, X, XI, and XII, they assert claims against Read for negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress. Thus, in ruling upon this motion, the court does not impute an additional cause of action for Margaret, John, and Paul that is not included in the complaint. As discussed below, Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

mobile device capable of communicating and cellphones used by Karen Read."[9] He filed a return of the search warrant on January 24, 2024.

Tully submitted an affidavit in support of the search warrant application. The affidavit comprises thirty-one pages and discusses Read's communications regarding JJ's death. Briefly stated, the affidavit largely describes actions by a local blogger, Aidan Kearney, who runs a series of social media websites under the name "Turtleboy."

The affidavit states that Kearney posted articles on social media accounts that reflected personal attacks on civilian witnesses, members of their families, and their friends. The affidavit also states that throughout various postings and videos, Kearney identified several individuals who socialized with JJ and Read, stated that they, not Read, were responsible for JJ's murder, and encouraged his social media followers to contact and harass these individuals. Additionally, the affidavit references certain comments Kearney directed to the O'Keefe family:

> "How much slack are we supposed to give you [John O'Keefe's family] . . . the time period for the grief, whatever, that we are giving you, like we are not going after you because of the grief, that is expired. It's expired because you're trying to send an innocent woman to jail for the rest of her life . . . I don't feel bad for you anymore.

Plaintiffs' Opposition, Exhibit A, paragraph 39.

Per the affidavit, Read communicated with Kearney through an intermediary, Natalie Wiweke Berhsneider. Through this intermediary, Read gave Kearney information concerning her case, some of which was potentially not available to the public, which Kearney then used in his social media postings. Read also shared personal information and pictures of many civilian individuals for whom Kearney argued were responsible for JJ's death.

[9] The court acknowledges that the substance of the search warrant affidavit is highly disputed. The court's references to such affidavit are viewed through the lens of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, which requires the court to view facts and draw inferences in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death.[10] Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had "expired" for "going after" the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard, the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress.

Primarily, the defendants' motions set forth generalized legal statements for extreme and outrageous conduct. As to a substantive argument, Read cites to Polay v. McMahon, 468 Mass. 379 (2014). Polay is arguably similarly because it dealt with "(1) filing false police reports and harassment prevention petitions against the plaintiffs; (2) verbally attacking the plaintiffs; and (3) monitoring and recording the plaintiffs' home on a continuous basis." Id. at 386. The SJC in Polay held that such action did not rise to the level of extreme and outrageous conduct. The court acknowledges that Polay shares parallels as to a dispute between individuals which escalated into allegedly harassing behaviors. However, given the extensive scope of media scrutiny and Read's relationship with Kearney, as alleged in the complaint and search warrant affidavit, the facts of this case rise above those at issue in Polay because of their public and pervasive nature.

[10] In making this assessment, the court is not ruling on whether Read's "narrative" was true or false. As with its consideration of the search warrant affidavit, the court is exercising its legal authority regarding the instant motions, which is limited to applying a plausibility standard with facts and inferences viewed in the plaintiffs' favor.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct.

E. Claims Asserted by Kayley Furbush

The defendants argue that the complaint does not assert sufficient facts that Kayley suffered emotional distress, and that it does not describe which conduct applies to which claim. As discussed above, Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress must be dismissed for failure to state a viable claim. However, consistent with Margaret's, John's, and Paul's claims, Kayley was also plausibly distressed by the public and pervasive nature of Read's alleged false narrative. The alleged facts surrounding Kayley's interactions with Read in the early morning hours on January 29, 2022, can also be plausibly characterized as extreme and outrageous. Such determination supports Kayley's claim for reckless infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. A claim for intentional infliction of emotion distress requires sufficient averments that Read "intended to inflict emotional distress or that [she] knew or should have known that emotional distress was the likely result of [her] conduct." Agis v. Howard Johnson Co., 371 Mass. 140, 144–145 (1976). With reference to the specific allegations of the complaint, Read's motion states that "Defendant's questioning what happened during a phone call with third parties, even if in Kayley Furbush's presence, is also not actionable conduct." This does not convey the full scope of what occurred during the early morning hours of January 29, 2022, in the manner alleged in the complaint. Instead, the complaint plausibly pleads that Read made multiple distressing calls about JJ's physical condition, namely being struck by Read's vehicle or

Superior Court - Plymouth

by a snowplow. Moreover, Read made these statements upon waking Kayley up at 4:30 a.m., which plausibly contributed to the distressing nature of that interaction.

Even if this court were to accept Read's position that she was merely engaging in telephone conversations, "[c]onduct otherwise reasonable may become tortious when directed at an individual known to be particularly susceptible to infliction of emotional distress." Boyle v. Wenk, 378 Mass. 592, 596 (1979). At time of this interaction, it can be inferred that Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent. Given such status, Kayley would be particularly vulnerable to distress caused by an additional loss of a parental figure. Thus, based upon Kayley's vulnerability and susceptibility, Read, at a minimum, knew or should have known that her conduct would cause Kayley to suffer emotional distress. This plausibly supports a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions to dismiss are DENIED as to their arguments regarding the sufficiency of Kayley's claims.

ORDER

Wherefore, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to their claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

Commonwealth v. Karen Read

Order on Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order

Before the Court is Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order Regarding Sharing of Cell Phone Data. After a hearing on March 28th, 2025, and a review of the submissions related thereto, the Motion is ALLOWED in part.

The Intervenor has raised significant concerns regarding confidentiality related to the Commonwealth's prosecution of Mr. Kearney in 2382-cr-00313 - specifically, his concerns over law enforcement's use and/or dissemination of data obtained by search warrant and extracted from Mr. Kearney's cell phones. The Court deems Intervenor's concerns sufficient to warrant further Court action, however, only as it pertains to data that is being produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 order in this case [Dkt. 615] , and only as it relates to the above-captioned case (2282-cr-00117). The Court acknowledges that other investigative materials or discovery beyond that covered by this Order are already the subject of the Court's prior Order [Dkt. 555] concerning counsel's obligations. And, Intervenor Kearney has also moved for an identical Protective Order in the pending case in which he is a Defendant (2382-cr-00313); that Motion is not currently before this Court.

With regard to the data extracted from Mr. Kearney's phones and produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 Order (the "DATA"), the Court ORDERS:

1. All agents of the Commonwealth, including but not limited to any members of any law enforcement agency or agent or contractor thereof, shall maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant.

2. This protective order shall take effect when entered and shall remain in effect unless terminated by entry of a Court Order.
3. Any person who violates this Order shall be in contempt of Court.

SO ORDERED this 31st day of March 2025.

Re: Paul O'Keefe et al. v. C&C Hospitality, LLC et al., Plymouth Superior Court, Civil Action No. 2483-CV-00692

Dear Mr. Diller:

I write on behalf of the Norfolk District Attorney's Office ("NDAO") in response to the subpoena that you issued in the above-referenced action on February 25, 2026, requesting records and access to Karen Read's cell phones; records of communications, including emails by or to Karen Read and/or Aidan Kearney; and records pertaining to the prosecution of Aidan Kearney. Pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1), this letter serves as the NDAO's written objection to the subpoena.

The NDAO objects to your requests on the grounds that they are overbroad, unduly burdensome, costly, and seek information that is publicly available. See Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (c) (for good cause shown the court should protect record holders from undue burden or expense, particularly when the material is available from some other source, duplicative, unduly cumulative, and in considering the importance of the requested material in resolving the issues); Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4) (additional considerations to the burdens of producing electronically stored data). The NDAO, a non-party record holder, emphasizes the undue burden particularly where the majority of the requests are obtainable from another source, namely defendant Karen Read. See generally Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (NDAO Notices of Discovery 34, 35, 47).

The NDAO objects to producing any information that would jeopardize pending criminal investigations; whose disclosure is proscribed by law, including grand jury materials, and documents that are sealed, impounded, subject to protective orders, or would contravene court orders, including previously raised confidentiality concerns and pending criminal cases. See Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (docket entries 636, 650); Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088] (docket -00313 entries 22, 47, 61, 62, 76).[1]

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Moreover, your request no. 5 and no. 12 appear to contravene the Plymouth Superior Court's March 1, 2026 order to the "Plaintiff's Emergency Moton for Temporary Restraining Order Pursuant to Rule 65 to Prevent Release of Evidence" (Gildea, J.) as well as the Plaintiff's pending request to intervene in Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088], where the issue of access to cellphones seized from Karen Read is pending a decision of the Court (Krupp, J.).

The NDAO objects to the subpoena to the extent that it calls for the production of materials that are protected by the work-product doctrine, the attorney-client privilege, or other applicable protections, privileges, or immunities against disclosure, including but not limited to internal communications and notes containing attorney work product and/or mental impressions. The NDAO further objects to searching sources of electronically stored information that are not reasonably accessible without the investment of significant time or expense. Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4).

Subject to the existing protective order of confidentiality and without waiving the foregoing objections, for your convenience the NDAO has attached the public court orders in Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] governing its decision. The NDAO is also producing a responsive motion transcript from December 17, 2024, in Kearney and a video clip of Karen Read, which was part of the video previously produced on January 9, 2026. Lastly, the NDAO has complied with request no. 10 as that material was denoted confidential and produced to the plaintiff and defendant Karen Read on January 9, 2026. The NDAO reserves all rights, including the right to recover its reasonable expenses in responding to the subpoena.

Sincerely,

/s/ Laura A. McLaughlin

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO COMPEL RESPONSES TO PLAINTIFFS' SUPPLEMENTAL KEEPER OF RECORDS SUBPOENA FROM AIDAN KEARNEY

NOW COME the Plaintiffs in the above-captioned matter, and respectfully request that this Honorable Court, pursuant to Rule 45 of the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure and other relevant rules governing discovery, issue an order compelling Aidan Kearney to provide responses and documents to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026. As of the date of service, Plaintiffs have yet to receive responses, objections, or any request for extension from Kearney.

I. RELEVANT BACKGROUND

On April 21, 2026, Plaintiffs served a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena on Aidan Kearney. Responses were due by April 30, 2026. EXHIBIT A. To date, Kearney has made no effort to respond, object, or request an extension. This Subpoena is directly tied to Plaintiffs'

underlying civil action filed on August 23, 2024, against Defendants Karen Read, C.F. McCarthy's, and Waterfall Bar & Grill seeking damages arising from the death of John O'Keefe III. The Complaint asserts claims against Defendant Karen Read for wrongful death (Count III), negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress (Counts X-XII), and reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress (Count XIII). EXHIBIT B.

Central to Plaintiffs' emotional distress claims is the allegation that Karen Read, acting through Aidan Kearney, orchestrated a coordinated public campaign to promote a false narrative surrounding John O'Keefe's death. Kearney, a blogger operating under the pseudonym "Turtleboy," served as Read's agent, mouthpiece, and primary instrumentality in disseminating this harmful content. Communications between Read and Kearney are therefore essential to proving the emotional distress claims.

On August 12, 2025, Karen Read filed a partial motion to dismiss. In ruling on said motion, the Court found the allegations sufficiently plausible to survive dismissal, stating:

> "When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death. Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had 'expired' for 'going after' the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress." EXHIBIT C.

In denying the motion to dismiss, Judge O'Shea endorsed the plausibility of the O'Keefe family's infliction-of-emotional-distress claims, finding that sufficient facts exist to support these claim. These claims remain active today and warrant full discovery.

Separate from this civil action, the Norfolk Grand Jury indicted Kearney on nine counts of witness intimidation, five counts of illegal picketing of a witness, and three counts of conspiracy to intimidate a witness. The Norfolk District Attorney's Office has conducted criminal investigations into both Read and Kearney. Through these investigations, the NDAO obtained forensic extractions from cell phones belonging to both Read[1] and Kearney. These extractions contain the very communications between Read and Kearney that Plaintiffs require to prove their claims.

On March 31, 2025, the Court entered a Protective Order governing the sharing of Kearney's cell phone data, directing all agents of the Commonwealth to "maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant." See EXHIBIT D.

Plaintiffs have pursued every available avenue to obtain the discoverable materials in the NDAO's possession. On February 24, 2026, Plaintiffs served the NDAO with a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena seeking materials related to Kearney. On March 6, 2026, the NDAO objected, citing the Protective Order and confidentiality concerns as the primary impediments to production. See EXHIBIT E. Notably, the NDAO did not assert that the materials lack relevance or discoverability. On March 4, 2026, Plaintiffs filed a Motion to Intervene in Commonwealth v. Kearney for the limited purpose of expanding the Protective Order to permit production of these materials to Plaintiffs. That motion remains pending.

Despite these efforts, Plaintiffs still lack access to communications and materials. Kearney's complete failure to respond to the Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026, necessitates this motion.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

[1] Plaintiffs have reached an agreement with Read's counsel regarding the production and handling of the phone extraction data pertaining to Read.

Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C) authorizes a subpoena commanding a non-party to produce documents. Where a non-party fails to respond, the party serving the subpoena may move for an order compelling production. Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B). "Failure by any person without adequate excuse to obey a subpoena served upon that person may be deemed a contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued." Mass. R. Civ. P. 45.

In interpreting the scope of discovery under the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure, the Supreme Judicial Court has followed the approach taken under the federal rules, and defined "relevant" evidence "broadly to encompass any matter that bears on, or that reasonably could lead to other matter that could bear on, any issue that is or may be in the case... discovery is not limited to issues raised by the pleadings, for discovery itself is designed to help define and clarify the issues...Nor is discovery limited to the merits of a case, for a variety of fact-oriented issues may arise during litigation that are not related to the merits." Cronin v. Strayer, 392 Mass. 525, 534 (1984), quoting Oppenheimer Fund, Inc. v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 351 (1978).

As such, discovery should ordinarily be allowed under the concept of relevancy unless it is clear that the information sought can have no possible bearing upon the subject matter of the action. See E.A. Miller, Inc., v. South Shore Bank, 405 Mass. 95, 101 (1989) (holding that litigants should be afforded an opportunity for discovery where a party has “made even a minimal showing warranting the requested discovery").

III. ARGUMENT

A. The Requested Materials Are Directly Relevant And Crucial To Plaintiffs’ Emotional Distress Claims

The materials sought through the supplemental keeper of records subpoena are directly relevant to Plaintiffs’ claims. Plaintiffs’ emotional distress claims rest on Karen Read’s coordinated campaign with Aidan Kearney to promote a false narrative and pit the Read’s against the

O'Keefe's. Publicly communicating this false narrative directly resulted in frustrating justice for John O'Keefe and caused additional harm to the already grieving O'Keefe family. Karen Read's primary vehicle for disseminating this false narrative was her relationship with Aidan Kearney, who operates under the pseudonym "Turtleboy." Aidan Kearney manages various websites and social media accounts through which he publishes the inflammatory and harmful content at Karen Read's direction and active collaboration. As part of its investigation into Aidan Kearney, the Commonwealth obtained search warrants and ultimately seized multiple electronic devices including cell phones, laptops, cameras, SD cards, etc. The Plaintiffs have a good faith basis to believe that the data contained on these electronic devices will prove Plaintiffs' allegations and multiple aspects of their claims. Without relief, Plaintiffs cannot timely authenticate these materials.

B. The Plaintiffs Require These Materials Urgently In Order To Conduct Discovery In Their Civil Case

With the discovery deadline fast approaching in the civil matter, the Plaintiffs have an urgent need for these materials. Plaintiffs have noticed the deposition of Aidan Kearney and Karen Read and require communications and device extractions to effectively for and conduct that deposition. Additionally, Plaintiffs require these materials to prepare their cases. Without such materials the Plaintiffs will suffer prejudice.

IV. REQUESTED RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Honorable Court: (1) GRANT this Motion to Compel; (2) ORDER Aidan Kearney to produce all documents and materials responsive to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena within ten (10) days of the Court's Order; and (3) GRANT such other and further relief as this Court deems just and appropriate.

PAUL O'KEEFE[1] & others[2]

C & C HOSPITALITY, LLC d/b/a C. F. MCCARTHY'S & others[3]

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER ON DEFENDANTS' PARTIAL MOTIONS TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO MASS. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6) (Paper Nos: 37, 37.3, 37.4)

This matter arises out of the January 29, 2022, death of John Joseph O'Keefe, III ("JJ").[4] Defendant and moving party, Karen Read ("Read"), was previously charged with several crimes in connection with JJ's death. During the pendency of Read's criminal case, plaintiffs Margaret O'Keefe ("Margaret," JJ's mother), John O'Keefe, II ("John," JJ's father), Paul O'Keefe ("Paul," JJ's brother and personal representative of JJ's estate), and Kayley Furbursh ("Kayley," JJ's niece) filed this civil lawsuit asserting claims against Read for Wrongful Death (Count III), Negligent and/or Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts X, XI, and XII), and Negligent, Reckless, and/or Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress (Count XIII).

The plaintiffs also asserted claims for Wrongful Death (Counts I and II), and Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, and IX) against C&C Hospitality,

LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's, G&S Hospitality, LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's (collectively, "C.F. McCarthy's") and Waterfall Bar & Grill, LTD d/b/a Waterfall Bar & Grill ("Waterfall"). These defendants are corporate entities that owned bars that allegedly served Read alcohol in the hours leading up to the events at issue.

Read filed a motion to dismiss all emotional distress claims asserted against her. C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall joined on Read's motion to dismiss, similarly seeking to dismiss the emotional distress claims asserted against them.[5] For the foregoing reasons, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to Kayley's claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

BACKGROUND

The following facts are drawn from the plaintiffs' complaint and accepted as true for purposes of this motion.[6]

On January 28, 2022, Read patronized C.F. McCarthy's from 8:51 p.m. through 10:29 p.m. She consumed seven alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Read then patronized Waterfall from 10:54 p.m. that night through 12:10 a.m. the next morning. She consumed two alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Her blood was drawn on January 29, 2022, and testing revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

[5] C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall's motions are technically motions for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12(c), as they previously filed answers to the plaintiffs' complaint. However, a "defendant's rule 12(c) motion is actually a motion to dismiss that argues that the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted" (quotations omitted). Jarosz v. Palmer, 436 Mass. 526, 529 (2002). Thus, the court will apply the same legal framework for C.F. McCarthy and Waterfall's motions as that used in assessing Read's motion to dismiss.

revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

During the timeframe relevant to the instant lawsuit, Read and JJ were in a dating relationship. JJ was with Read that evening, and they had been arguing. After leaving Waterfall, Read got into a motor vehicle with JJ and drove to a residence at 34 Fairview Road in Canton while intoxicated. After arriving at the residence, JJ exited Read's vehicle. Read then drove her vehicle and hit JJ. JJ was knocked to the ground, suffering serious injuries that ultimately led to his death.

Read fled the scene and drove to JJ's residence at 1 Meadows Avenue in Canton. At approximately 4:30 a.m. on January 29, 2022, Read woke up JJ's niece, Kayley, who lived with JJ. Read began discussing JJ's death with Kayley and talked about striking him with her vehicle. "Kayley heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Read also called multiple people between 4:30 a.m. and 5:00 a.m. on January 29, 2022, while in Kayley's presence. At the time, Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who had previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent.

Read left JJ's residence at approximately 5:07 a.m. on January 29, 2022. She arrived at 34 Fairview Road at approximately 6:03 a.m. and discovered JJ buried in snow. JJ was pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 am. "At relevant times after 7:50 am on January 29, 2022, defendant Read went to the grieving house of JJ, feigned comfort to JJ's family, and used the opportunity to, amongst other things, remove the offending weapon, her vehicle, and/or destroy relevant evidence." Complaint, paragraph 47.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM

Docket Number 2483CV00692

Subsequently, over the course of several years, Read made many public statements. "She knowingly and deliberately changed her story and fabricated a conspiracy knowing the same to be false. She publicly communicated this false 'narrative' thereby frustrating Justice for JJ. Such false narrative caused the Plaintiffs aggravated emotional distress." Complaint, paragraph 52.

DISCUSSION

The defendants argue that the emotional distress claims should be dismissed for multiple reasons: 1) distress claims are subsumed by the wrongful death statute; 2) the plaintiffs' claimed distress was not contemporaneous with JJ allegedly being struck by Read's vehicle; 3) there was no extreme or outrageous conduct direct towards the plaintiff that resulted in severe harm; and 4) Kayley's claims for emotional distress fail as a matter of law. The court will address each of these arguments in turn.

A. Standard of Review

To survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12 (b)(6), a complaint must contain "factual 'allegations plausibly suggesting (not merely consistent with)' an entitlement to relief." Iannacchino v. Ford Motor Co., 451 Mass. 623, 636 (2008), quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 557 (2007). The factual allegations must be "more than labels and conclusions" and "raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Iannacchino, 451 Mass. at 636, quoting Bell Atl. Corp., 550 U.S. at 555. In assessing a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6), the court accepts as true the well-pleaded factual allegations in the complaint and draws all reasonable inferences in the claimant's favor. See Fairhaven Hous. Auth. v. Commonwealth, 493 Mass. 27, 30 (2023).

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

The extent of the court's review generally is limited to the factual allegations in the complaint and any facts contained in any attached exhibits. See Eigerman v. Putnam Invs., Inc., 450 Mass. 281, 285 n.6 (2007). However, the court also may consider matters of public record, items in the record of the case, and documents cited and relied upon in the complaint. Schaer v. Brandeis Univ., 432 Mass. 474, 477 (2000).

B. Wrongful Death Statute and Emotional Distress Claims

The defendants argue that the plaintiffs' emotional distress claims are subsumed by the Massachusetts wrongful death statute, G. L. c. 229, § 2. Among other provisions, the statute identifies the following as recoverable damages:

> "the fair monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to receive the damages recovered, as provided in section one, including but not limited to compensation for the loss of the reasonably expected net income, services, protection, care, assistance, society, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice of the decedent to the persons entitled to the damages recovered."

Thus, the wrongful death statute contemplates some degree of emotional distress arising from a decedent's death. It addresses the loss of care, assistance, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice, all of which go to the relationship between a decedent and individuals pursuing claims under the statute.

The defendants argue that the independent emotional distress claims asserted by the plaintiffs are redundant to the plaintiffs' wrongful death assertions and consequently should be dismissed. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Cimino v. Milford Keg, Inc., 385 Mass. 323 (1982), the Supreme Judicial Court ("SJC") held:

> "The defendant's . . argument that the plaintiff's claim for emotional distress is 'preempted' by the wrongful death action (G.L. c. 229, s 2) misconstrues the common law cause of action for emotional distress. Emotional distress, as the concept has evolved in this Commonwealth, is a severe psychological shock directly resulting from

> experiencing or witnessing the effects of a defendant's conduct. . . . A claim for damages based on emotional distress does not include an administrator's claim for loss of consortium-which will be present in every wrongful death action such as this. Since emotional distress is a wrong to the plaintiff distinct from that done to [the decedent] and the statutory beneficiaries of the decedent, it is not a duplicative remedy and is not 'preempted' by the wrongful death statute." (quotations omitted).

Cimino, 385 Mass. at 334.

Here, the plaintiffs' direct emotional distress claims go beyond the mere fact that JJ died. Instead, they point to the alleged wrongs they suffered in their individual capacities. They aver that they suffered such harm in observing JJ just after his death, having Read attend family events in the immediate aftermath of JJ's death, and Read developing a public and false narrative that frustrated justice for JJ. These claims are separate from JJ's death and instead are specific to the distress the plaintiffs assert in their individual capacities, rather than their status as relatives of JJ pursuant to the wrongful death statute.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding emotional distress and the wrongful death statute.

C. Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress because their alleged distress did not occur contemporaneously with the accident giving rise to JJ's death. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Stockdale v. Bird & Son, Inc., 399 Mass. 249 (1987), the SJC stated:

> "In Dziokonski v. Babineau, 375 Mass. 555, 568 (1978), we held that 'allegations concerning a parent who sustains substantial physical harm as a result of severe mental distress over some peril or harm to his minor child caused by the defendant's negligence state a claim for which relief might be granted, where the parent either witnesses the accident or soon comes on the scene while the child is still there.' Two years later, in Ferriter v. Daniel O'Connell's Sons, 381 Mass. 507, 518, we held that the wife and children of an employee allegedly injured through his employer's negligence could maintain an action for negligent infliction of emotional distress, even though they first observed the employee in a hospital immediately after the accident. We said that '[a]

Superior Court - Plymouth

> plaintiff who rushes onto the accident scene and finds a loved one injured has no greater entitlement to compensation for that shock than a plaintiff who rushes instead to the hospital. So long as the shock follows closely on the heels of the accident, the two types of injury are equally foreseeable.' Id."

Stockdale, 399 Mass. at 251.

Thus, a family member is entitled to emotional distress damages when they either witness the decedent's actual injury or "come upon the injured [kin] promptly after the injury." Nancy P. v. D'Amato, 401 Mass. 516, 520 (1988).

The plaintiffs allege that Read discovered JJ buried in the snow at approximately 6:03 a.m. on January 29, 2022, and he was subsequently pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 a.m. that day. Margaret, John, and Paul each aver that they "learned of JJ's admission to [ ] Hospital immediately and came upon JJ's body at the Hospital shortly thereafter." Complaint, paragraphs 82, 88, 95, 102, 109, 116, 123, 131, and 139. Against this backdrop, the complaint alleges sufficient facts that JJ's parents and brother arrived promptly at the hospital upon learning of JJ's death and thus have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley's negligent infliction of emotional distress claim stands on different footing, however. She alleges that she "learned of JJ's death or injury when defendant Read woke Kayley up approximately 4:30 am on January 29, 2022." Complaint, paragraph 147. Further, Kayley alleges she "heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Lastly, Kayley states that, as a result of Read's conversations in her presence, she "perceived the injuries caused to her guardian, uncle JJ, and perceived the injury producing event." Complaint, paragraph 151.

Taken together, the complaint does not allege that Kayley learned of JJ's death or injury at 4:30 a.m., but instead learned he was maybe injured at that time. There are also no averments

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth

regarding when and the circumstances under which she first observed the deceased JJ. Her averments concern her perceptions of JJ's injuries, rather than her actual observations.

The case law cited by the parties addresses scenarios whereby a family member has observed another family member actually being injured or otherwise suffering shock after promptly encountering the injured family member. Kayley cannot make this showing. In making this assessment, the court acknowledges the following case law cited in the plaintiffs' opposition:

> "the determination whether there should be liability for the injury sustained depends on a number of factors, such as where, when, and how the injury to the third person entered into the consciousness of the claimant, and what degree there was of familial or other relationship between the claimant and the third person" (emphasis in original).

Dziokonski, 375 Mass. at 568.

Such language is inapposite here, as the Dziokonski court's decision turned on liability for negligent infliction of emotional distress and the parameters for when a family member arrived at the scene of an accident giving rise to a relative's injury. Stockdale extended the scope of Dziokonski to family members who promptly arrive at a hospital. Neither of these cases, nor any other cases provided by the parties, creates authority to find negligent infliction of emotional distress for family members who learn of a death beyond this prompt timeframe. Thus, Dziokonski's language about when JJ's injury "entered into the consciousness of the claimant" does not support Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to Margaret, John, and Paul's claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress and ALLOWED as to Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

D. Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for reckless infliction of emotional distress because there was no extreme or outrageous conduct directed towards them that resulted in severe harm.[7] In the context of such claims, conduct is "extreme and outrageous" if it "goes beyond all possible bounds of decency, and is regarded as atrocious, and utterly intolerable in a civilized community" (quotations omitted). Roman v. Trustees of Tufts Coll., 461 Mass. 707, 718 (2012). The standard of extreme and outrageous conduct is a high bar. Such conduct means more than "workaday insults, annoyances, or even threats and petty oppressions . . . . It means, for example, a high order of reckless ruthlessness or deliberate malevolence that . . . is simply intolerable" (quotations omitted). Conway v. Smerling, 37 Mass. App. Ct. 1, 8 (1994).

The plaintiffs allege that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death, which caused them to suffer emotional distress. In support of their opposition to the instant motions, they have produced a search warrant affidavit, which is a matter of public record that the court may consider in assessing whether the complaint plausibly suggests an entitlement to relief.[8]

According to the search warrant materials, on January 22, 2024, Detective Lieutenant Brian Tully ("Tully") of the Massachusetts State Police applied for a warrant to seize "[a]ny

[7] With reference to the defendants' arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct, the plaintiffs' opposition frames the issue in the context of reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. In the complaint, however, Magaret, John, and Paul do not assert claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Instead, at Counts, X, XI, and XII, they assert claims against Read for negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress. Thus, in ruling upon this motion, the court does not impute an additional cause of action for Margaret, John, and Paul that is not included in the complaint. As discussed below, Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

mobile device capable of communicating and cellphones used by Karen Read."[9] He filed a return of the search warrant on January 24, 2024.

Tully submitted an affidavit in support of the search warrant application. The affidavit comprises thirty-one pages and discusses Read's communications regarding JJ's death. Briefly stated, the affidavit largely describes actions by a local blogger, Aidan Kearney, who runs a series of social media websites under the name "Turtleboy."

The affidavit states that Kearney posted articles on social media accounts that reflected personal attacks on civilian witnesses, members of their families, and their friends. The affidavit also states that throughout various postings and videos, Kearney identified several individuals who socialized with JJ and Read, stated that they, not Read, were responsible for JJ's murder, and encouraged his social media followers to contact and harass these individuals. Additionally, the affidavit references certain comments Kearney directed to the O'Keefe family:

> "How much slack are we supposed to give you [John O'Keefe's family] . . . the time period for the grief, whatever, that we are giving you, like we are not going after you because of the grief, that is expired. It's expired because you're trying to send an innocent woman to jail for the rest of her life . . . I don't feel bad for you anymore.

Plaintiffs' Opposition, Exhibit A, paragraph 39.

Per the affidavit, Read communicated with Kearney through an intermediary, Natalie Wiweke Berhsneider. Through this intermediary, Read gave Kearney information concerning her case, some of which was potentially not available to the public, which Kearney then used in his social media postings. Read also shared personal information and pictures of many civilian individuals for whom Kearney argued were responsible for JJ's death.

[9] The court acknowledges that the substance of the search warrant affidavit is highly disputed. The court's references to such affidavit are viewed through the lens of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, which requires the court to view facts and draw inferences in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death.[10] Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had "expired" for "going after" the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard, the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress.

Primarily, the defendants' motions set forth generalized legal statements for extreme and outrageous conduct. As to a substantive argument, Read cites to Polay v. McMahon, 468 Mass. 379 (2014). Polay is arguably similarly because it dealt with "(1) filing false police reports and harassment prevention petitions against the plaintiffs; (2) verbally attacking the plaintiffs; and (3) monitoring and recording the plaintiffs' home on a continuous basis." Id. at 386. The SJC in Polay held that such action did not rise to the level of extreme and outrageous conduct. The court acknowledges that Polay shares parallels as to a dispute between individuals which escalated into allegedly harassing behaviors. However, given the extensive scope of media scrutiny and Read's relationship with Kearney, as alleged in the complaint and search warrant affidavit, the facts of this case rise above those at issue in Polay because of their public and pervasive nature.

[10] In making this assessment, the court is not ruling on whether Read's "narrative" was true or false. As with its consideration of the search warrant affidavit, the court is exercising its legal authority regarding the instant motions, which is limited to applying a plausibility standard with facts and inferences viewed in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct.

E. Claims Asserted by Kayley Furbush

The defendants argue that the complaint does not assert sufficient facts that Kayley suffered emotional distress, and that it does not describe which conduct applies to which claim. As discussed above, Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress must be dismissed for failure to state a viable claim. However, consistent with Margaret's, John's, and Paul's claims, Kayley was also plausibly distressed by the public and pervasive nature of Read's alleged false narrative. The alleged facts surrounding Kayley's interactions with Read in the early morning hours on January 29, 2022, can also be plausibly characterized as extreme and outrageous. Such determination supports Kayley's claim for reckless infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. A claim for intentional infliction of emotion distress requires sufficient averments that Read "intended to inflict emotional distress or that [she] knew or should have known that emotional distress was the likely result of [her] conduct." Agis v. Howard Johnson Co., 371 Mass. 140, 144–145 (1976). With reference to the specific allegations of the complaint, Read's motion states that "Defendant's questioning what happened during a phone call with third parties, even if in Kayley Furbush's presence, is also not actionable conduct." This does not convey the full scope of what occurred during the early morning hours of January 29, 2022, in the manner alleged in the complaint. Instead, the complaint plausibly pleads that Read made multiple distressing calls about JJ's physical condition, namely being struck by Read's vehicle or

Superior Court - Plymouth

by a snowplow. Moreover, Read made these statements upon waking Kayley up at 4:30 a.m., which plausibly contributed to the distressing nature of that interaction.

Even if this court were to accept Read's position that she was merely engaging in telephone conversations, "[c]onduct otherwise reasonable may become tortious when directed at an individual known to be particularly susceptible to infliction of emotional distress." Boyle v. Wenk, 378 Mass. 592, 596 (1979). At time of this interaction, it can be inferred that Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent. Given such status, Kayley would be particularly vulnerable to distress caused by an additional loss of a parental figure. Thus, based upon Kayley's vulnerability and susceptibility, Read, at a minimum, knew or should have known that her conduct would cause Kayley to suffer emotional distress. This plausibly supports a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions to dismiss are DENIED as to their arguments regarding the sufficiency of Kayley's claims.

ORDER

Wherefore, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to their claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

Re: Paul O'Keefe et al. v. C&C Hospitality, LLC et al., Plymouth Superior Court, Civil Action No. 2483-CV-00692

Dear Mr. Diller:

I write on behalf of the Norfolk District Attorney's Office ("NDAO") in response to the subpoena that you issued in the above-referenced action on February 25, 2026, requesting records and access to Karen Read's cell phones; records of communications, including emails by or to Karen Read and/or Aidan Kearney; and records pertaining to the prosecution of Aidan Kearney. Pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1), this letter serves as the NDAO's written objection to the subpoena.

The NDAO objects to your requests on the grounds that they are overbroad, unduly burdensome, costly, and seek information that is publicly available. See Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (c) (for good cause shown the court should protect record holders from undue burden or expense, particularly when the material is available from some other source, duplicative, unduly cumulative, and in considering the importance of the requested material in resolving the issues); Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4) (additional considerations to the burdens of producing electronically stored data). The NDAO, a non-party record holder, emphasizes the undue burden particularly where the majority of the requests are obtainable from another source, namely defendant Karen Read. See generally Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (NDAO Notices of Discovery 34, 35, 47).

The NDAO objects to producing any information that would jeopardize pending criminal investigations; whose disclosure is proscribed by law, including grand jury materials, and documents that are sealed, impounded, subject to protective orders, or would contravene court orders, including previously raised confidentiality concerns and pending criminal cases. See Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (docket entries 636, 650); Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088] (docket -00313 entries 22, 47, 61, 62, 76).[1]

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Moreover, your request no. 5 and no. 12 appear to contravene the Plymouth Superior Court's March 1, 2026 order to the "Plaintiff's Emergency Moton for Temporary Restraining Order Pursuant to Rule 65 to Prevent Release of Evidence" (Gildea, J.) as well as the Plaintiff's pending request to intervene in Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088], where the issue of access to cellphones seized from Karen Read is pending a decision of the Court (Krupp, J.).

The NDAO objects to the subpoena to the extent that it calls for the production of materials that are protected by the work-product doctrine, the attorney-client privilege, or other applicable protections, privileges, or immunities against disclosure, including but not limited to internal communications and notes containing attorney work product and/or mental impressions. The NDAO further objects to searching sources of electronically stored information that are not reasonably accessible without the investment of significant time or expense. Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4).

Sincerely,

/s/ Laura A. McLaughlin

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO COMPEL RESPONSES TO PLAINTIFFS' SUPPLEMENTAL KEEPER OF RECORDS SUBPOENA FROM AIDAN KEARNEY

NOW COME the Plaintiffs in the above-captioned matter, and respectfully request that this Honorable Court, pursuant to Rule 45 of the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure and other relevant rules governing discovery, issue an order compelling Aidan Kearney to provide responses and documents to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026. As of the date of service, Plaintiffs have yet to receive responses, objections, or any request for extension from Kearney.

I. RELEVANT BACKGROUND

On April 21, 2026, Plaintiffs served a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena on Aidan Kearney. Responses were due by April 30, 2026. EXHIBIT A. To date, Kearney has made no effort to respond, object, or request an extension. This Subpoena is directly tied to Plaintiffs'

underlying civil action filed on August 23, 2024, against Defendants Karen Read, C.F. McCarthy's, and Waterfall Bar & Grill seeking damages arising from the death of John O'Keefe III. The Complaint asserts claims against Defendant Karen Read for wrongful death (Count III), negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress (Counts X-XII), and reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress (Count XIII). EXHIBIT B.

Central to Plaintiffs' emotional distress claims is the allegation that Karen Read, acting through Aidan Kearney, orchestrated a coordinated public campaign to promote a false narrative surrounding John O'Keefe's death. Kearney, a blogger operating under the pseudonym "Turtleboy," served as Read's agent, mouthpiece, and primary instrumentality in disseminating this harmful content. Communications between Read and Kearney are therefore essential to proving the emotional distress claims.

On August 12, 2025, Karen Read filed a partial motion to dismiss. In ruling on said motion, the Court found the allegations sufficiently plausible to survive dismissal, stating:

> "When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death. Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had 'expired' for 'going after' the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress." EXHIBIT C.

In denying the motion to dismiss, Judge O'Shea endorsed the plausibility of the O'Keefe family's infliction-of-emotional-distress claims, finding that sufficient facts exist to support these claim. These claims remain active today and warrant full discovery.

Separate from this civil action, the Norfolk Grand Jury indicted Kearney on nine counts of witness intimidation, five counts of illegal picketing of a witness, and three counts of conspiracy

to intimidate a witness. The Norfolk District Attorney's Office has conducted criminal investigations into both Read and Kearney. Through these investigations, the NDAO obtained forensic extractions from cell phones belonging to both Read[1] and Kearney. These extractions contain the very communications between Read and Kearney that Plaintiffs require to prove their claims.

On March 31, 2025, the Court entered a Protective Order governing the sharing of Kearney's cell phone data, directing all agents of the Commonwealth to "maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant." See EXHIBIT D.

Plaintiffs have pursued every available avenue to obtain the discoverable materials in the NDAO's possession. On February 24, 2026, Plaintiffs served the NDAO with a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena seeking materials related to Kearney. On March 6, 2026, the NDAO objected, citing the Protective Order and confidentiality concerns as the primary impediments to production. See EXHIBIT E. Notably, the NDAO did not assert that the materials lack relevance or discoverability. On March 4, 2026, Plaintiffs filed a Motion to Intervene in Commonwealth v. Kearney for the limited purpose of expanding the Protective Order to permit production of these materials to Plaintiffs. That motion remains pending.

Despite these efforts, Plaintiffs still lack access to communications and materials. Kearney's complete failure to respond to the Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026, necessitates this motion.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

[1] Plaintiffs have reached an agreement with Read's counsel regarding the production and handling of the phone extraction data pertaining to Read.

Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C) authorizes a subpoena commanding a non-party to produce documents. Where a non-party fails to respond, the party serving the subpoena may move for an order compelling production. Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B). "Failure by any person without adequate excuse to obey a subpoena served upon that person may be deemed a contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued." Mass. R. Civ. P. 45.

In interpreting the scope of discovery under the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure, the Supreme Judicial Court has followed the approach taken under the federal rules, and defined "relevant" evidence "broadly to encompass any matter that bears on, or that reasonably could lead to other matter that could bear on, any issue that is or may be in the case... discovery is not limited to issues raised by the pleadings, for discovery itself is designed to help define and clarify the issues...Nor is discovery limited to the merits of a case, for a variety of fact-oriented issues may arise during litigation that are not related to the merits." Cronin v. Strayer, 392 Mass. 525, 534 (1984), quoting Oppenheimer Fund, Inc. v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 351 (1978).

As such, discovery should ordinarily be allowed under the concept of relevancy unless it is clear that the information sought can have no possible bearing upon the subject matter of the action. See E.A. Miller, Inc., v. South Shore Bank, 405 Mass. 95, 101 (1989) (holding that litigants should be afforded an opportunity for discovery where a party has “made even a minimal showing warranting the requested discovery").

III. ARGUMENT

A. The Requested Materials Are Directly Relevant And Crucial To Plaintiffs’ Emotional Distress Claims

The materials sought through the supplemental keeper of records subpoena are directly relevant to Plaintiffs’ claims. Plaintiffs’ emotional distress claims rest on Karen Read’s coordinated campaign with Aidan Kearney to promote a false narrative and pit the Read’s against the

O'Keefe's. Publicly communicating this false narrative directly resulted in frustrating justice for John O'Keefe and caused additional harm to the already grieving O'Keefe family. Karen Read's primary vehicle for disseminating this false narrative was her relationship with Aidan Kearney, who operates under the pseudonym "Turtleboy." Aidan Kearney manages various websites and social media accounts through which he publishes the inflammatory and harmful content at Karen Read's direction and active collaboration. As part of its investigation into Aidan Kearney, the Commonwealth obtained search warrants and ultimately seized multiple electronic devices including cell phones, laptops, cameras, SD cards, etc. The Plaintiffs have a good faith basis to believe that the data contained on these electronic devices will prove Plaintiffs' allegations and multiple aspects of their claims. Without relief, Plaintiffs cannot timely authenticate these materials.

B. The Plaintiffs Require These Materials Urgently In Order To Conduct Discovery In Their Civil Case

With the discovery deadline fast approaching in the civil matter, the Plaintiffs have an urgent need for these materials. Plaintiffs have noticed the deposition of Aidan Kearney and Karen Read and require communications and device extractions to effectively for and conduct that deposition. Additionally, Plaintiffs require these materials to prepare their cases. Without such materials the Plaintiffs will suffer prejudice.

IV. REQUESTED RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Honorable Court: (1) GRANT this Motion to Compel; (2) ORDER Aidan Kearney to produce all documents and materials responsive

to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena within ten (10) days of the Court's Order; and (3) GRANT such other and further relief as this Court deems just and appropriate.

78. As a direct and/or proximate cause of defendant Read's negligence, gross negligence and/or willful, wanton and reckless disregard for safety, JJ sustained serious injuries of body and mind, conscious pain and suffering, fear of impending death, lost earnings, medical, funeral and burial expenses, and died.

79. As a direct and proximate result of defendant Read's negligence, gross negligence, and/or willful, wanton disregard for safety, JJ's next of kin suffered as well. JJ's next of kin are entitled to JJ's "lost value" resulting from his wrongful death. Such damages include, but are not limited to, reasonably expected society, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, net income, services, assistance, protection, care and advice to each next of kin.

WHEREFORE, the Estate of John Joseph O'Keefe III, demands judgment against the Defendant, Karen Read, on COUNT III for all damages to which the estate is entitled under M.G.L.

PAUL O'KEEFE[1] & others[2]

C & C HOSPITALITY, LLC d/b/a C. F. MCCARTHY'S & others[3]

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER ON DEFENDANTS' PARTIAL MOTIONS TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO MASS. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6) (Paper Nos: 37, 37.3, 37.4)

This matter arises out of the January 29, 2022, death of John Joseph O'Keefe, III ("JJ").[4] Defendant and moving party, Karen Read ("Read"), was previously charged with several crimes in connection with JJ's death. During the pendency of Read's criminal case, plaintiffs Margaret O'Keefe ("Margaret," JJ's mother), John O'Keefe, II ("John," JJ's father), Paul O'Keefe ("Paul," JJ's brother and personal representative of JJ's estate), and Kayley Furbursh ("Kayley," JJ's niece) filed this civil lawsuit asserting claims against Read for Wrongful Death (Count III), Negligent and/or Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts X, XI, and XII), and Negligent, Reckless, and/or Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress (Count XIII).

The plaintiffs also asserted claims for Wrongful Death (Counts I and II), and Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, and IX) against C&C Hospitality,

LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's, G&S Hospitality, LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's (collectively, "C.F. McCarthy's") and Waterfall Bar & Grill, LTD d/b/a Waterfall Bar & Grill ("Waterfall"). These defendants are corporate entities that owned bars that allegedly served Read alcohol in the hours leading up to the events at issue.

Read filed a motion to dismiss all emotional distress claims asserted against her. C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall joined on Read's motion to dismiss, similarly seeking to dismiss the emotional distress claims asserted against them.[5] For the foregoing reasons, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to Kayley's claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

BACKGROUND

The following facts are drawn from the plaintiffs' complaint and accepted as true for purposes of this motion.[6]

On January 28, 2022, Read patronized C.F. McCarthy's from 8:51 p.m. through 10:29 p.m. She consumed seven alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Read then patronized Waterfall from 10:54 p.m. that night through 12:10 a.m. the next morning. She consumed two alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Her blood was drawn on January 29, 2022, and testing revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

[5] C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall's motions are technically motions for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12(c), as they previously filed answers to the plaintiffs' complaint. However, a "defendant's rule 12(c) motion is actually a motion to dismiss that argues that the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted" (quotations omitted). Jarosz v. Palmer, 436 Mass. 526, 529 (2002). Thus, the court will apply the same legal framework for C.F. McCarthy and Waterfall's motions as that used in assessing Read's motion to dismiss.

revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

During the timeframe relevant to the instant lawsuit, Read and JJ were in a dating relationship. JJ was with Read that evening, and they had been arguing. After leaving Waterfall, Read got into a motor vehicle with JJ and drove to a residence at 34 Fairview Road in Canton while intoxicated. After arriving at the residence, JJ exited Read's vehicle. Read then drove her vehicle and hit JJ. JJ was knocked to the ground, suffering serious injuries that ultimately led to his death.

Read fled the scene and drove to JJ's residence at 1 Meadows Avenue in Canton. At approximately 4:30 a.m. on January 29, 2022, Read woke up JJ's niece, Kayley, who lived with JJ. Read began discussing JJ's death with Kayley and talked about striking him with her vehicle. "Kayley heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Read also called multiple people between 4:30 a.m. and 5:00 a.m. on January 29, 2022, while in Kayley's presence. At the time, Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who had previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent.

Read left JJ's residence at approximately 5:07 a.m. on January 29, 2022. She arrived at 34 Fairview Road at approximately 6:03 a.m. and discovered JJ buried in snow. JJ was pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 am. "At relevant times after 7:50 am on January 29, 2022, defendant Read went to the grieving house of JJ, feigned comfort to JJ's family, and used the opportunity to, amongst other things, remove the offending weapon, her vehicle, and/or destroy relevant evidence." Complaint, paragraph 47.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Subsequently, over the course of several years, Read made many public statements. "She knowingly and deliberately changed her story and fabricated a conspiracy knowing the same to be false. She publicly communicated this false 'narrative' thereby frustrating Justice for JJ. Such false narrative caused the Plaintiffs aggravated emotional distress." Complaint, paragraph 52.

DISCUSSION

The defendants argue that the emotional distress claims should be dismissed for multiple reasons: 1) distress claims are subsumed by the wrongful death statute; 2) the plaintiffs' claimed distress was not contemporaneous with JJ allegedly being struck by Read's vehicle; 3) there was no extreme or outrageous conduct direct towards the plaintiff that resulted in severe harm; and 4) Kayley's claims for emotional distress fail as a matter of law. The court will address each of these arguments in turn.

A. Standard of Review

To survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12 (b)(6), a complaint must contain "factual 'allegations plausibly suggesting (not merely consistent with)' an entitlement to relief." Iannacchino v. Ford Motor Co., 451 Mass. 623, 636 (2008), quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 557 (2007). The factual allegations must be "more than labels and conclusions" and "raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Iannacchino, 451 Mass. at 636, quoting Bell Atl. Corp., 550 U.S. at 555. In assessing a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6), the court accepts as true the well-pleaded factual allegations in the complaint and draws all reasonable inferences in the claimant's favor. See Fairhaven Hous. Auth. v. Commonwealth, 493 Mass. 27, 30 (2023).

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

The extent of the court's review generally is limited to the factual allegations in the complaint and any facts contained in any attached exhibits. See Eigerman v. Putnam Invs., Inc., 450 Mass. 281, 285 n.6 (2007). However, the court also may consider matters of public record, items in the record of the case, and documents cited and relied upon in the complaint. Schaer v. Brandeis Univ., 432 Mass. 474, 477 (2000).

B. Wrongful Death Statute and Emotional Distress Claims

The defendants argue that the plaintiffs' emotional distress claims are subsumed by the Massachusetts wrongful death statute, G. L. c. 229, § 2. Among other provisions, the statute identifies the following as recoverable damages:

> "the fair monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to receive the damages recovered, as provided in section one, including but not limited to compensation for the loss of the reasonably expected net income, services, protection, care, assistance, society, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice of the decedent to the persons entitled to the damages recovered."

G. L. c. 229, § 2.

Thus, the wrongful death statute contemplates some degree of emotional distress arising from a decedent's death. It addresses the loss of care, assistance, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice, all of which go to the relationship between a decedent and individuals pursuing claims under the statute.

The defendants argue that the independent emotional distress claims asserted by the plaintiffs are redundant to the plaintiffs' wrongful death assertions and consequently should be dismissed. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Cimino v. Milford Keg, Inc., 385 Mass. 323 (1982), the Supreme Judicial Court ("SJC") held:

> "The defendant's . . argument that the plaintiff's claim for emotional distress is 'preempted' by the wrongful death action (G.L. c. 229, s 2) misconstrues the common law cause of action for emotional distress. Emotional distress, as the concept has evolved in this Commonwealth, is a severe psychological shock directly resulting from

> experiencing or witnessing the effects of a defendant's conduct. . . . A claim for damages based on emotional distress does not include an administrator's claim for loss of consortium-which will be present in every wrongful death action such as this. Since emotional distress is a wrong to the plaintiff distinct from that done to [the decedent] and the statutory beneficiaries of the decedent, it is not a duplicative remedy and is not 'preempted' by the wrongful death statute." (quotations omitted).

Cimino, 385 Mass. at 334.

Here, the plaintiffs' direct emotional distress claims go beyond the mere fact that JJ died. Instead, they point to the alleged wrongs they suffered in their individual capacities. They aver that they suffered such harm in observing JJ just after his death, having Read attend family events in the immediate aftermath of JJ's death, and Read developing a public and false narrative that frustrated justice for JJ. These claims are separate from JJ's death and instead are specific to the distress the plaintiffs assert in their individual capacities, rather than their status as relatives of JJ pursuant to the wrongful death statute.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding emotional distress and the wrongful death statute.

C. Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress because their alleged distress did not occur contemporaneously with the accident giving rise to JJ's death. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Stockdale v. Bird & Son, Inc., 399 Mass. 249 (1987), the SJC stated:

> "In Dziokonski v. Babineau, 375 Mass. 555, 568 (1978), we held that 'allegations concerning a parent who sustains substantial physical harm as a result of severe mental distress over some peril or harm to his minor child caused by the defendant's negligence state a claim for which relief might be granted, where the parent either witnesses the accident or soon comes on the scene while the child is still there.' Two years later, in Ferriter v. Daniel O'Connell's Sons, 381 Mass. 507, 518, we held that the wife and children of an employee allegedly injured through his employer's negligence could maintain an action for negligent infliction of emotional distress, even though they first observed the employee in a hospital immediately after the accident. We said that '[a]

> plaintiff who rushes onto the accident scene and finds a loved one injured has no greater entitlement to compensation for that shock than a plaintiff who rushes instead to the hospital. So long as the shock follows closely on the heels of the accident, the two types of injury are equally foreseeable.' Id."

Stockdale, 399 Mass. at 251.

Thus, a family member is entitled to emotional distress damages when they either witness the decedent's actual injury or "come upon the injured [kin] promptly after the injury." Nancy P. v. D'Amato, 401 Mass. 516, 520 (1988).

The plaintiffs allege that Read discovered JJ buried in the snow at approximately 6:03 a.m. on January 29, 2022, and he was subsequently pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 a.m. that day. Margaret, John, and Paul each aver that they "learned of JJ's admission to [ ] Hospital immediately and came upon JJ's body at the Hospital shortly thereafter." Complaint, paragraphs 82, 88, 95, 102, 109, 116, 123, 131, and 139. Against this backdrop, the complaint alleges sufficient facts that JJ's parents and brother arrived promptly at the hospital upon learning of JJ's death and thus have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley's negligent infliction of emotional distress claim stands on different footing, however. She alleges that she "learned of JJ's death or injury when defendant Read woke Kayley up approximately 4:30 am on January 29, 2022." Complaint, paragraph 147. Further, Kayley alleges she "heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Lastly, Kayley states that, as a result of Read's conversations in her presence, she "perceived the injuries caused to her guardian, uncle JJ, and perceived the injury producing event." Complaint, paragraph 151.

Taken together, the complaint does not allege that Kayley learned of JJ's death or injury at 4:30 a.m., but instead learned he was maybe injured at that time. There are also no averments

regarding when and the circumstances under which she first observed the deceased JJ. Her averments concern her perceptions of JJ's injuries, rather than her actual observations.

The case law cited by the parties addresses scenarios whereby a family member has observed another family member actually being injured or otherwise suffering shock after promptly encountering the injured family member. Kayley cannot make this showing. In making this assessment, the court acknowledges the following case law cited in the plaintiffs' opposition:

> "the determination whether there should be liability for the injury sustained depends on a number of factors, such as where, when, and how the injury to the third person entered into the consciousness of the claimant, and what degree there was of familial or other relationship between the claimant and the third person" (emphasis in original).

Dziokonski, 375 Mass. at 568.

Such language is inapposite here, as the Dziokonski court's decision turned on liability for negligent infliction of emotional distress and the parameters for when a family member arrived at the scene of an accident giving rise to a relative's injury. Stockdale extended the scope of Dziokonski to family members who promptly arrive at a hospital. Neither of these cases, nor any other cases provided by the parties, creates authority to find negligent infliction of emotional distress for family members who learn of a death beyond this prompt timeframe. Thus, Dziokonski's language about when JJ's injury "entered into the consciousness of the claimant" does not support Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to Margaret, John, and Paul's claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress and ALLOWED as to Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

D. Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for reckless infliction of emotional distress because there was no extreme or outrageous conduct directed towards them that resulted in severe harm.[7] In the context of such claims, conduct is "extreme and outrageous" if it "goes beyond all possible bounds of decency, and is regarded as atrocious, and utterly intolerable in a civilized community" (quotations omitted). Roman v. Trustees of Tufts Coll., 461 Mass. 707, 718 (2012). The standard of extreme and outrageous conduct is a high bar. Such conduct means more than "workaday insults, annoyances, or even threats and petty oppressions . . . . It means, for example, a high order of reckless ruthlessness or deliberate malevolence that . . . is simply intolerable" (quotations omitted). Conway v. Smerling, 37 Mass. App. Ct. 1, 8 (1994).

The plaintiffs allege that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death, which caused them to suffer emotional distress. In support of their opposition to the instant motions, they have produced a search warrant affidavit, which is a matter of public record that the court may consider in assessing whether the complaint plausibly suggests an entitlement to relief.[8]

According to the search warrant materials, on January 22, 2024, Detective Lieutenant Brian Tully ("Tully") of the Massachusetts State Police applied for a warrant to seize "[a]ny

[7] With reference to the defendants' arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct, the plaintiffs' opposition frames the issue in the context of reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. In the complaint, however, Magaret, John, and Paul do not assert claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Instead, at Counts, X, XI, and XII, they assert claims against Read for negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress. Thus, in ruling upon this motion, the court does not impute an additional cause of action for Margaret, John, and Paul that is not included in the complaint. As discussed below, Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

mobile device capable of communicating and cellphones used by Karen Read."[9] He filed a return of the search warrant on January 24, 2024.

Tully submitted an affidavit in support of the search warrant application. The affidavit comprises thirty-one pages and discusses Read's communications regarding JJ's death. Briefly stated, the affidavit largely describes actions by a local blogger, Aidan Kearney, who runs a series of social media websites under the name "Turtleboy."

The affidavit states that Kearney posted articles on social media accounts that reflected personal attacks on civilian witnesses, members of their families, and their friends. The affidavit also states that throughout various postings and videos, Kearney identified several individuals who socialized with JJ and Read, stated that they, not Read, were responsible for JJ's murder, and encouraged his social media followers to contact and harass these individuals. Additionally, the affidavit references certain comments Kearney directed to the O'Keefe family:

> "How much slack are we supposed to give you [John O'Keefe's family] . . . the time period for the grief, whatever, that we are giving you, like we are not going after you because of the grief, that is expired. It's expired because you're trying to send an innocent woman to jail for the rest of her life . . . I don't feel bad for you anymore.

Plaintiffs' Opposition, Exhibit A, paragraph 39.

Per the affidavit, Read communicated with Kearney through an intermediary, Natalie Wiweke Berhsneider. Through this intermediary, Read gave Kearney information concerning her case, some of which was potentially not available to the public, which Kearney then used in his social media postings. Read also shared personal information and pictures of many civilian individuals for whom Kearney argued were responsible for JJ's death.

[9] The court acknowledges that the substance of the search warrant affidavit is highly disputed. The court's references to such affidavit are viewed through the lens of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, which requires the court to view facts and draw inferences in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death.[10] Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had "expired" for "going after" the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard, the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress.

Primarily, the defendants' motions set forth generalized legal statements for extreme and outrageous conduct. As to a substantive argument, Read cites to Polay v. McMahon, 468 Mass. 379 (2014). Polay is arguably similarly because it dealt with "(1) filing false police reports and harassment prevention petitions against the plaintiffs; (2) verbally attacking the plaintiffs; and (3) monitoring and recording the plaintiffs' home on a continuous basis." Id. at 386. The SJC in Polay held that such action did not rise to the level of extreme and outrageous conduct. The court acknowledges that Polay shares parallels as to a dispute between individuals which escalated into allegedly harassing behaviors. However, given the extensive scope of media scrutiny and Read's relationship with Kearney, as alleged in the complaint and search warrant affidavit, the facts of this case rise above those at issue in Polay because of their public and pervasive nature.

[10] In making this assessment, the court is not ruling on whether Read's "narrative" was true or false. As with its consideration of the search warrant affidavit, the court is exercising its legal authority regarding the instant motions, which is limited to applying a plausibility standard with facts and inferences viewed in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM

Docket Number 2483CV00692

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct.

E. Claims Asserted by Kayley Furbush

The defendants argue that the complaint does not assert sufficient facts that Kayley suffered emotional distress, and that it does not describe which conduct applies to which claim. As discussed above, Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress must be dismissed for failure to state a viable claim. However, consistent with Margaret's, John's, and Paul's claims, Kayley was also plausibly distressed by the public and pervasive nature of Read's alleged false narrative. The alleged facts surrounding Kayley's interactions with Read in the early morning hours on January 29, 2022, can also be plausibly characterized as extreme and outrageous. Such determination supports Kayley's claim for reckless infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. A claim for intentional infliction of emotion distress requires sufficient averments that Read "intended to inflict emotional distress or that [she] knew or should have known that emotional distress was the likely result of [her] conduct." Agis v. Howard Johnson Co., 371 Mass. 140, 144–145 (1976). With reference to the specific allegations of the complaint, Read's motion states that "Defendant's questioning what happened during a phone call with third parties, even if in Kayley Furbush's presence, is also not actionable conduct." This does not convey the full scope of what occurred during the early morning hours of January 29, 2022, in the manner alleged in the complaint. Instead, the complaint plausibly pleads that Read made multiple distressing calls about JJ's physical condition, namely being struck by Read's vehicle or

Superior Court - Plymouth

by a snowplow. Moreover, Read made these statements upon waking Kayley up at 4:30 a.m., which plausibly contributed to the distressing nature of that interaction.

Even if this court were to accept Read's position that she was merely engaging in telephone conversations, "[c]onduct otherwise reasonable may become tortious when directed at an individual known to be particularly susceptible to infliction of emotional distress." Boyle v. Wenk, 378 Mass. 592, 596 (1979). At time of this interaction, it can be inferred that Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent. Given such status, Kayley would be particularly vulnerable to distress caused by an additional loss of a parental figure. Thus, based upon Kayley's vulnerability and susceptibility, Read, at a minimum, knew or should have known that her conduct would cause Kayley to suffer emotional distress. This plausibly supports a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions to dismiss are DENIED as to their arguments regarding the sufficiency of Kayley's claims.

ORDER

Wherefore, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to their claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

Commonwealth v. Karen Read

Order on Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order

Before the Court is Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order Regarding Sharing of Cell Phone Data. After a hearing on March 28th, 2025, and a review of the submissions related thereto, the Motion is ALLOWED in part.

The Intervenor has raised significant concerns regarding confidentiality related to the Commonwealth's prosecution of Mr. Kearney in 2382-cr-00313 - specifically, his concerns over law enforcement's use and/or dissemination of data obtained by search warrant and extracted from Mr. Kearney's cell phones. The Court deems Intervenor's concerns sufficient to warrant further Court action, however, only as it pertains to data that is being produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 order in this case [Dkt. 615] , and only as it relates to the above-captioned case (2282-cr-00117). The Court acknowledges that other investigative materials or discovery beyond that covered by this Order are already the subject of the Court's prior Order [Dkt. 555] concerning counsel's obligations. And, Intervenor Kearney has also moved for an identical Protective Order in the pending case in which he is a Defendant (2382-cr-00313); that Motion is not currently before this Court.

With regard to the data extracted from Mr. Kearney's phones and produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 Order (the "DATA"), the Court ORDERS:

1. All agents of the Commonwealth, including but not limited to any members of any law enforcement agency or agent or contractor thereof, shall maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant.

2. This protective order shall take effect when entered and shall remain in effect unless terminated by entry of a Court Order.
3. Any person who violates this Order shall be in contempt of Court.

SO ORDERED this 31st day of March 2025.

Re: Paul O'Keefe et al. v. C&C Hospitality, LLC et al., Plymouth Superior Court, Civil Action No. 2483-CV-00692

Dear Mr. Diller:

I write on behalf of the Norfolk District Attorney's Office ("NDAO") in response to the subpoena that you issued in the above-referenced action on February 25, 2026, requesting records and access to Karen Read's cell phones; records of communications, including emails by or to Karen Read and/or Aidan Kearney; and records pertaining to the prosecution of Aidan Kearney. Pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1), this letter serves as the NDAO's written objection to the subpoena.

The NDAO objects to your requests on the grounds that they are overbroad, unduly burdensome, costly, and seek information that is publicly available. See Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (c) (for good cause shown the court should protect record holders from undue burden or expense, particularly when the material is available from some other source, duplicative, unduly cumulative, and in considering the importance of the requested material in resolving the issues); Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4) (additional considerations to the burdens of producing electronically stored data). The NDAO, a non-party record holder, emphasizes the undue burden particularly where the majority of the requests are obtainable from another source, namely defendant Karen Read. See generally Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (NDAO Notices of Discovery 34, 35, 47).

The NDAO objects to producing any information that would jeopardize pending criminal investigations; whose disclosure is proscribed by law, including grand jury materials, and documents that are sealed, impounded, subject to protective orders, or would contravene court orders, including previously raised confidentiality concerns and pending criminal cases. See Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (docket entries 636, 650); Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088] (docket -00313 entries 22, 47, 61, 62, 76).[1]

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Moreover, your request no. 5 and no. 12 appear to contravene the Plymouth Superior Court's March 1, 2026 order to the "Plaintiff's Emergency Moton for Temporary Restraining Order Pursuant to Rule 65 to Prevent Release of Evidence" (Gildea, J.) as well as the Plaintiff's pending request to intervene in Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088], where the issue of access to cellphones seized from Karen Read is pending a decision of the Court (Krupp, J.).

The NDAO objects to the subpoena to the extent that it calls for the production of materials that are protected by the work-product doctrine, the attorney-client privilege, or other applicable protections, privileges, or immunities against disclosure, including but not limited to internal communications and notes containing attorney work product and/or mental impressions. The NDAO further objects to searching sources of electronically stored information that are not reasonably accessible without the investment of significant time or expense. Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4).

Sincerely,

/s/ Laura A. McLaughlin

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO COMPEL RESPONSES TO PLAINTIFFS' SUPPLEMENTAL KEEPER OF RECORDS SUBPOENA FROM AIDAN KEARNEY

NOW COME the Plaintiffs in the above-captioned matter, and respectfully request that this Honorable Court, pursuant to Rule 45 of the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure and other relevant rules governing discovery, issue an order compelling Aidan Kearney to provide responses and documents to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026. As of the date of service, Plaintiffs have yet to receive responses, objections, or any request for extension from Kearney.

I. RELEVANT BACKGROUND

On April 21, 2026, Plaintiffs served a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena on Aidan Kearney. Responses were due by April 30, 2026. EXHIBIT A. To date, Kearney has made no effort to respond, object, or request an extension. This Subpoena is directly tied to Plaintiffs'

underlying civil action filed on August 23, 2024, against Defendants Karen Read, C.F. McCarthy's, and Waterfall Bar & Grill seeking damages arising from the death of John O'Keefe III. The Complaint asserts claims against Defendant Karen Read for wrongful death (Count III), negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress (Counts X-XII), and reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress (Count XIII). EXHIBIT B.

Central to Plaintiffs' emotional distress claims is the allegation that Karen Read, acting through Aidan Kearney, orchestrated a coordinated public campaign to promote a false narrative surrounding John O'Keefe's death. Kearney, a blogger operating under the pseudonym "Turtleboy," served as Read's agent, mouthpiece, and primary instrumentality in disseminating this harmful content. Communications between Read and Kearney are therefore essential to proving the emotional distress claims.

On August 12, 2025, Karen Read filed a partial motion to dismiss. In ruling on said motion, the Court found the allegations sufficiently plausible to survive dismissal, stating:

> "When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death. Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had 'expired' for 'going after' the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress." EXHIBIT C.

In denying the motion to dismiss, Judge O'Shea endorsed the plausibility of the O'Keefe family's infliction-of-emotional-distress claims, finding that sufficient facts exist to support these claim. These claims remain active today and warrant full discovery.

Separate from this civil action, the Norfolk Grand Jury indicted Kearney on nine counts of witness intimidation, five counts of illegal picketing of a witness, and three counts of conspiracy

to intimidate a witness. The Norfolk District Attorney's Office has conducted criminal investigations into both Read and Kearney. Through these investigations, the NDAO obtained forensic extractions from cell phones belonging to both Read[1] and Kearney. These extractions contain the very communications between Read and Kearney that Plaintiffs require to prove their claims.

On March 31, 2025, the Court entered a Protective Order governing the sharing of Kearney's cell phone data, directing all agents of the Commonwealth to "maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant." See EXHIBIT D.

Plaintiffs have pursued every available avenue to obtain the discoverable materials in the NDAO's possession. On February 24, 2026, Plaintiffs served the NDAO with a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena seeking materials related to Kearney. On March 6, 2026, the NDAO objected, citing the Protective Order and confidentiality concerns as the primary impediments to production. See EXHIBIT E. Notably, the NDAO did not assert that the materials lack relevance or discoverability. On March 4, 2026, Plaintiffs filed a Motion to Intervene in Commonwealth v. Kearney for the limited purpose of expanding the Protective Order to permit production of these materials to Plaintiffs. That motion remains pending.

Despite these efforts, Plaintiffs still lack access to communications and materials. Kearney's complete failure to respond to the Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026, necessitates this motion.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

[1] Plaintiffs have reached an agreement with Read's counsel regarding the production and handling of the phone extraction data pertaining to Read.

Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C) authorizes a subpoena commanding a non-party to produce documents. Where a non-party fails to respond, the party serving the subpoena may move for an order compelling production. Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B). "Failure by any person without adequate excuse to obey a subpoena served upon that person may be deemed a contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued." Mass. R. Civ. P. 45.

In interpreting the scope of discovery under the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure, the Supreme Judicial Court has followed the approach taken under the federal rules, and defined "relevant" evidence "broadly to encompass any matter that bears on, or that reasonably could lead to other matter that could bear on, any issue that is or may be in the case... discovery is not limited to issues raised by the pleadings, for discovery itself is designed to help define and clarify the issues...Nor is discovery limited to the merits of a case, for a variety of fact-oriented issues may arise during litigation that are not related to the merits." Cronin v. Strayer, 392 Mass. 525, 534 (1984), quoting Oppenheimer Fund, Inc. v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 351 (1978).

As such, discovery should ordinarily be allowed under the concept of relevancy unless it is clear that the information sought can have no possible bearing upon the subject matter of the action. See E.A. Miller, Inc., v. South Shore Bank, 405 Mass. 95, 101 (1989) (holding that litigants should be afforded an opportunity for discovery where a party has “made even a minimal showing warranting the requested discovery").

III. ARGUMENT

A. The Requested Materials Are Directly Relevant And Crucial To Plaintiffs’ Emotional Distress Claims

The materials sought through the supplemental keeper of records subpoena are directly relevant to Plaintiffs’ claims. Plaintiffs’ emotional distress claims rest on Karen Read’s coordinated campaign with Aidan Kearney to promote a false narrative and pit the Read’s against the

O'Keefe's. Publicly communicating this false narrative directly resulted in frustrating justice for John O'Keefe and caused additional harm to the already grieving O'Keefe family. Karen Read's primary vehicle for disseminating this false narrative was her relationship with Aidan Kearney, who operates under the pseudonym "Turtleboy." Aidan Kearney manages various websites and social media accounts through which he publishes the inflammatory and harmful content at Karen Read's direction and active collaboration. As part of its investigation into Aidan Kearney, the Commonwealth obtained search warrants and ultimately seized multiple electronic devices including cell phones, laptops, cameras, SD cards, etc. The Plaintiffs have a good faith basis to believe that the data contained on these electronic devices will prove Plaintiffs' allegations and multiple aspects of their claims. Without relief, Plaintiffs cannot timely authenticate these materials.

B. The Plaintiffs Require These Materials Urgently In Order To Conduct Discovery In Their Civil Case

With the discovery deadline fast approaching in the civil matter, the Plaintiffs have an urgent need for these materials. Plaintiffs have noticed the deposition of Aidan Kearney and Karen Read and require communications and device extractions to effectively for and conduct that deposition. Additionally, Plaintiffs require these materials to prepare their cases. Without such materials the Plaintiffs will suffer prejudice.

IV. REQUESTED RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Honorable Court: (1) GRANT this Motion to Compel; (2) ORDER Aidan Kearney to produce all documents and materials responsive

to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena within ten (10) days of the Court's Order; and (3) GRANT such other and further relief as this Court deems just and appropriate.

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER ON DEFENDANTS' PARTIAL MOTIONS TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO MASS. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6) (Paper Nos: 37, 37.3, 37.4)

This matter arises out of the January 29, 2022, death of John Joseph O'Keefe, III ("JJ").[4] Defendant and moving party, Karen Read ("Read"), was previously charged with several crimes in connection with JJ's death. During the pendency of Read's criminal case, plaintiffs Margaret O'Keefe ("Margaret," JJ's mother), John O'Keefe, II ("John," JJ's father), Paul O'Keefe ("Paul," JJ's brother and personal representative of JJ's estate), and Kayley Furbursh ("Kayley," JJ's niece) filed this civil lawsuit asserting claims against Read for Wrongful Death (Count III), Negligent and/or Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts X, XI, and XII), and Negligent, Reckless, and/or Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress (Count XIII).

The plaintiffs also asserted claims for Wrongful Death (Counts I and II), and Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, and IX) against C&C Hospitality,

These defendants are corporate entities that owned bars that allegedly served Read alcohol in the hours leading up to the events at issue.

Read filed a motion to dismiss all emotional distress claims asserted against her. C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall joined on Read's motion to dismiss, similarly seeking to dismiss the emotional distress claims asserted against them.[5] For the foregoing reasons, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to Kayley's claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

BACKGROUND

The following facts are drawn from the plaintiffs' complaint and accepted as true for purposes of this motion.[6]

On January 28, 2022, Read patronized C.F. McCarthy's from 8:51 p.m. through 10:29 p.m. She consumed seven alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Read then patronized Waterfall from 10:54 p.m. that night through 12:10 a.m. the next morning. She consumed two alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Her blood was drawn on January 29, 2022, and testing revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

[5] C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall's motions are technically motions for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12(c), as they previously filed answers to the plaintiffs' complaint. However, a "defendant's rule 12(c) motion is actually a motion to dismiss that argues that the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted" (quotations omitted). Jarosz v. Palmer, 436 Mass. 526, 529 (2002). Thus, the court will apply the same legal framework for C.F. McCarthy and Waterfall's motions as that used in assessing Read's motion to dismiss.

[6] The court also considers facts contained in matters of public record, pursuant to Marram v. Kobrick Offshore Fund, Ltd, 442 Mass. 43, 45 n.4 (2004). These facts are reserved for discussion below.

revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

During the timeframe relevant to the instant lawsuit, Read and JJ were in a dating relationship. JJ was with Read that evening, and they had been arguing. After leaving Waterfall, Read got into a motor vehicle with JJ and drove to a residence at 34 Fairview Road in Canton while intoxicated. After arriving at the residence, JJ exited Read's vehicle. Read then drove her vehicle and hit JJ. JJ was knocked to the ground, suffering serious injuries that ultimately led to his death.

Read fled the scene and drove to JJ's residence at 1 Meadows Avenue in Canton. At approximately 4:30 a.m. on January 29, 2022, Read woke up JJ's niece, Kayley, who lived with JJ. Read began discussing JJ's death with Kayley and talked about striking him with her vehicle. "Kayley heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Read also called multiple people between 4:30 a.m. and 5:00 a.m. on January 29, 2022, while in Kayley's presence. At the time, Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who had previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent.

Read left JJ's residence at approximately 5:07 a.m. on January 29, 2022. She arrived at 34 Fairview Road at approximately 6:03 a.m. and discovered JJ buried in snow. JJ was pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 am. "At relevant times after 7:50 am on January 29, 2022, defendant Read went to the grieving house of JJ, feigned comfort to JJ's family, and used the opportunity to, amongst other things, remove the offending weapon, her vehicle, and/or destroy relevant evidence." Complaint, paragraph 47.

Subsequently, over the course of several years, Read made many public statements. "She knowingly and deliberately changed her story and fabricated a conspiracy knowing the same to be false. She publicly communicated this false 'narrative' thereby frustrating Justice for JJ. Such false narrative caused the Plaintiffs aggravated emotional distress." Complaint, paragraph 52.

DISCUSSION

The defendants argue that the emotional distress claims should be dismissed for multiple reasons: 1) distress claims are subsumed by the wrongful death statute; 2) the plaintiffs' claimed distress was not contemporaneous with JJ allegedly being struck by Read's vehicle; 3) there was no extreme or outrageous conduct direct towards the plaintiff that resulted in severe harm; and 4) Kayley's claims for emotional distress fail as a matter of law. The court will address each of these arguments in turn.

A. Standard of Review

To survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12 (b)(6), a complaint must contain "factual 'allegations plausibly suggesting (not merely consistent with)' an entitlement to relief." Iannacchino v. Ford Motor Co., 451 Mass. 623, 636 (2008), quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 557 (2007). The factual allegations must be "more than labels and conclusions" and "raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Iannacchino, 451 Mass. at 636, quoting Bell Atl. Corp., 550 U.S. at 555. In assessing a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6), the court accepts as true the well-pleaded factual allegations in the complaint and draws all reasonable inferences in the claimant's favor. See Fairhaven Hous. Auth. v. Commonwealth, 493 Mass. 27, 30 (2023).

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

The extent of the court's review generally is limited to the factual allegations in the complaint and any facts contained in any attached exhibits. See Eigerman v. Putnam Invs., Inc., 450 Mass. 281, 285 n.6 (2007). However, the court also may consider matters of public record, items in the record of the case, and documents cited and relied upon in the complaint. Schaer v. Brandeis Univ., 432 Mass. 474, 477 (2000).

B. Wrongful Death Statute and Emotional Distress Claims

The defendants argue that the plaintiffs' emotional distress claims are subsumed by the Massachusetts wrongful death statute, G. L. c. 229, § 2. Among other provisions, the statute identifies the following as recoverable damages:

> "the fair monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to receive the damages recovered, as provided in section one, including but not limited to compensation for the loss of the reasonably expected net income, services, protection, care, assistance, society, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice of the decedent to the persons entitled to the damages recovered."

G. L. c. 229, § 2.

Thus, the wrongful death statute contemplates some degree of emotional distress arising from a decedent's death. It addresses the loss of care, assistance, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice, all of which go to the relationship between a decedent and individuals pursuing claims under the statute.

The defendants argue that the independent emotional distress claims asserted by the plaintiffs are redundant to the plaintiffs' wrongful death assertions and consequently should be dismissed. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Cimino v. Milford Keg, Inc., 385 Mass. 323 (1982), the Supreme Judicial Court ("SJC") held:

> "The defendant's . . argument that the plaintiff's claim for emotional distress is 'preempted' by the wrongful death action (G.L. c. 229, s 2) misconstrues the common law cause of action for emotional distress. Emotional distress, as the concept has evolved in this Commonwealth, is a severe psychological shock directly resulting from

> experiencing or witnessing the effects of a defendant's conduct. . . . A claim for damages based on emotional distress does not include an administrator's claim for loss of consortium-which will be present in every wrongful death action such as this. Since emotional distress is a wrong to the plaintiff distinct from that done to [the decedent] and the statutory beneficiaries of the decedent, it is not a duplicative remedy and is not 'preempted' by the wrongful death statute." (quotations omitted).

Cimino, 385 Mass. at 334.

Here, the plaintiffs' direct emotional distress claims go beyond the mere fact that JJ died. Instead, they point to the alleged wrongs they suffered in their individual capacities. They aver that they suffered such harm in observing JJ just after his death, having Read attend family events in the immediate aftermath of JJ's death, and Read developing a public and false narrative that frustrated justice for JJ. These claims are separate from JJ's death and instead are specific to the distress the plaintiffs assert in their individual capacities, rather than their status as relatives of JJ pursuant to the wrongful death statute.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding emotional distress and the wrongful death statute.

C. Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress because their alleged distress did not occur contemporaneously with the accident giving rise to JJ's death. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Stockdale v. Bird & Son, Inc., 399 Mass. 249 (1987), the SJC stated:

> "In Dziokonski v. Babineau, 375 Mass. 555, 568 (1978), we held that 'allegations concerning a parent who sustains substantial physical harm as a result of severe mental distress over some peril or harm to his minor child caused by the defendant's negligence state a claim for which relief might be granted, where the parent either witnesses the accident or soon comes on the scene while the child is still there.' Two years later, in Ferriter v. Daniel O'Connell's Sons, 381 Mass. 507, 518, we held that the wife and children of an employee allegedly injured through his employer's negligence could maintain an action for negligent infliction of emotional distress, even though they first observed the employee in a hospital immediately after the accident. We said that '[a]

> plaintiff who rushes onto the accident scene and finds a loved one injured has no greater entitlement to compensation for that shock than a plaintiff who rushes instead to the hospital. So long as the shock follows closely on the heels of the accident, the two types of injury are equally foreseeable.' Id."

Stockdale, 399 Mass. at 251.

Thus, a family member is entitled to emotional distress damages when they either witness the decedent's actual injury or "come upon the injured [kin] promptly after the injury." Nancy P. v. D'Amato, 401 Mass. 516, 520 (1988).

The plaintiffs allege that Read discovered JJ buried in the snow at approximately 6:03 a.m. on January 29, 2022, and he was subsequently pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 a.m. that day. Margaret, John, and Paul each aver that they "learned of JJ's admission to [ ] Hospital immediately and came upon JJ's body at the Hospital shortly thereafter." Complaint, paragraphs 82, 88, 95, 102, 109, 116, 123, 131, and 139. Against this backdrop, the complaint alleges sufficient facts that JJ's parents and brother arrived promptly at the hospital upon learning of JJ's death and thus have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley's negligent infliction of emotional distress claim stands on different footing, however. She alleges that she "learned of JJ's death or injury when defendant Read woke Kayley up approximately 4:30 am on January 29, 2022." Complaint, paragraph 147. Further, Kayley alleges she "heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Lastly, Kayley states that, as a result of Read's conversations in her presence, she "perceived the injuries caused to her guardian, uncle JJ, and perceived the injury producing event." Complaint, paragraph 151.

Taken together, the complaint does not allege that Kayley learned of JJ's death or injury at 4:30 a.m., but instead learned he was maybe injured at that time. There are also no averments

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth

regarding when and the circumstances under which she first observed the deceased JJ. Her averments concern her perceptions of JJ's injuries, rather than her actual observations.

The case law cited by the parties addresses scenarios whereby a family member has observed another family member actually being injured or otherwise suffering shock after promptly encountering the injured family member. Kayley cannot make this showing. In making this assessment, the court acknowledges the following case law cited in the plaintiffs' opposition:

> "the determination whether there should be liability for the injury sustained depends on a number of factors, such as where, when, and how the injury to the third person entered into the consciousness of the claimant, and what degree there was of familial or other relationship between the claimant and the third person" (emphasis in original).

Dziokonski, 375 Mass. at 568.

Such language is inapposite here, as the Dziokonski court's decision turned on liability for negligent infliction of emotional distress and the parameters for when a family member arrived at the scene of an accident giving rise to a relative's injury. Stockdale extended the scope of Dziokonski to family members who promptly arrive at a hospital. Neither of these cases, nor any other cases provided by the parties, creates authority to find negligent infliction of emotional distress for family members who learn of a death beyond this prompt timeframe. Thus, Dziokonski's language about when JJ's injury "entered into the consciousness of the claimant" does not support Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to Margaret, John, and Paul's claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress and ALLOWED as to Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

D. Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for reckless infliction of emotional distress because there was no extreme or outrageous conduct directed towards them that resulted in severe harm.[7] In the context of such claims, conduct is "extreme and outrageous" if it "goes beyond all possible bounds of decency, and is regarded as atrocious, and utterly intolerable in a civilized community" (quotations omitted). Roman v. Trustees of Tufts Coll., 461 Mass. 707, 718 (2012). The standard of extreme and outrageous conduct is a high bar. Such conduct means more than "workaday insults, annoyances, or even threats and petty oppressions . . . . It means, for example, a high order of reckless ruthlessness or deliberate malevolence that . . . is simply intolerable" (quotations omitted). Conway v. Smerling, 37 Mass. App. Ct. 1, 8 (1994).

The plaintiffs allege that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death, which caused them to suffer emotional distress. In support of their opposition to the instant motions, they have produced a search warrant affidavit, which is a matter of public record that the court may consider in assessing whether the complaint plausibly suggests an entitlement to relief.[8]

According to the search warrant materials, on January 22, 2024, Detective Lieutenant Brian Tully ("Tully") of the Massachusetts State Police applied for a warrant to seize "[a]ny

[7] With reference to the defendants' arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct, the plaintiffs' opposition frames the issue in the context of reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. In the complaint, however, Magaret, John, and Paul do not assert claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Instead, at Counts, X, XI, and XII, they assert claims against Read for negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress. Thus, in ruling upon this motion, the court does not impute an additional cause of action for Margaret, John, and Paul that is not included in the complaint. As discussed below, Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

mobile device capable of communicating and cellphones used by Karen Read."[9] He filed a return of the search warrant on January 24, 2024.

Tully submitted an affidavit in support of the search warrant application. The affidavit comprises thirty-one pages and discusses Read's communications regarding JJ's death. Briefly stated, the affidavit largely describes actions by a local blogger, Aidan Kearney, who runs a series of social media websites under the name "Turtleboy."

The affidavit states that Kearney posted articles on social media accounts that reflected personal attacks on civilian witnesses, members of their families, and their friends. The affidavit also states that throughout various postings and videos, Kearney identified several individuals who socialized with JJ and Read, stated that they, not Read, were responsible for JJ's murder, and encouraged his social media followers to contact and harass these individuals. Additionally, the affidavit references certain comments Kearney directed to the O'Keefe family:

> "How much slack are we supposed to give you [John O'Keefe's family] . . . the time period for the grief, whatever, that we are giving you, like we are not going after you because of the grief, that is expired. It's expired because you're trying to send an innocent woman to jail for the rest of her life . . . I don't feel bad for you anymore.

Plaintiffs' Opposition, Exhibit A, paragraph 39.

Per the affidavit, Read communicated with Kearney through an intermediary, Natalie Wiweke Berhsneider. Through this intermediary, Read gave Kearney information concerning her case, some of which was potentially not available to the public, which Kearney then used in his social media postings. Read also shared personal information and pictures of many civilian individuals for whom Kearney argued were responsible for JJ's death.

[9] The court acknowledges that the substance of the search warrant affidavit is highly disputed. The court's references to such affidavit are viewed through the lens of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, which requires the court to view facts and draw inferences in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death.[10] Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had "expired" for "going after" the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard, the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress.

Primarily, the defendants' motions set forth generalized legal statements for extreme and outrageous conduct. As to a substantive argument, Read cites to Polay v. McMahon, 468 Mass. 379 (2014). Polay is arguably similarly because it dealt with "(1) filing false police reports and harassment prevention petitions against the plaintiffs; (2) verbally attacking the plaintiffs; and (3) monitoring and recording the plaintiffs' home on a continuous basis." Id. at 386. The SJC in Polay held that such action did not rise to the level of extreme and outrageous conduct. The court acknowledges that Polay shares parallels as to a dispute between individuals which escalated into allegedly harassing behaviors. However, given the extensive scope of media scrutiny and Read's relationship with Kearney, as alleged in the complaint and search warrant affidavit, the facts of this case rise above those at issue in Polay because of their public and pervasive nature.

[10] In making this assessment, the court is not ruling on whether Read's "narrative" was true or false. As with its consideration of the search warrant affidavit, the court is exercising its legal authority regarding the instant motions, which is limited to applying a plausibility standard with facts and inferences viewed in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct.

E. Claims Asserted by Kayley Furbush

The defendants argue that the complaint does not assert sufficient facts that Kayley suffered emotional distress, and that it does not describe which conduct applies to which claim. As discussed above, Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress must be dismissed for failure to state a viable claim. However, consistent with Margaret's, John's, and Paul's claims, Kayley was also plausibly distressed by the public and pervasive nature of Read's alleged false narrative. The alleged facts surrounding Kayley's interactions with Read in the early morning hours on January 29, 2022, can also be plausibly characterized as extreme and outrageous. Such determination supports Kayley's claim for reckless infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. A claim for intentional infliction of emotion distress requires sufficient averments that Read "intended to inflict emotional distress or that [she] knew or should have known that emotional distress was the likely result of [her] conduct." Agis v. Howard Johnson Co., 371 Mass. 140, 144–145 (1976). With reference to the specific allegations of the complaint, Read's motion states that "Defendant's questioning what happened during a phone call with third parties, even if in Kayley Furbush's presence, is also not actionable conduct." This does not convey the full scope of what occurred during the early morning hours of January 29, 2022, in the manner alleged in the complaint. Instead, the complaint plausibly pleads that Read made multiple distressing calls about JJ's physical condition, namely being struck by Read's vehicle or

Superior Court - Plymouth

by a snowplow. Moreover, Read made these statements upon waking Kayley up at 4:30 a.m., which plausibly contributed to the distressing nature of that interaction.

Even if this court were to accept Read's position that she was merely engaging in telephone conversations, "[c]onduct otherwise reasonable may become tortious when directed at an individual known to be particularly susceptible to infliction of emotional distress." Boyle v. Wenk, 378 Mass. 592, 596 (1979). At time of this interaction, it can be inferred that Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent. Given such status, Kayley would be particularly vulnerable to distress caused by an additional loss of a parental figure. Thus, based upon Kayley's vulnerability and susceptibility, Read, at a minimum, knew or should have known that her conduct would cause Kayley to suffer emotional distress. This plausibly supports a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions to dismiss are DENIED as to their arguments regarding the sufficiency of Kayley's claims.

ORDER

Wherefore, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to their claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

Order on Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order

Before the Court is Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order Regarding Sharing of Cell Phone Data. After a hearing on March 28th, 2025, and a review of the submissions related thereto, the Motion is ALLOWED in part.

The Intervenor has raised significant concerns regarding confidentiality related to the Commonwealth's prosecution of Mr. Kearney in 2382-cr-00313 - specifically, his concerns over law enforcement's use and/or dissemination of data obtained by search warrant and extracted from Mr. Kearney's cell phones. The Court deems Intervenor's concerns sufficient to warrant further Court action, however, only as it pertains to data that is being produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 order in this case [Dkt. 615] , and only as it relates to the above-captioned case (2282-cr-00117). The Court acknowledges that other investigative materials or discovery beyond that covered by this Order are already the subject of the Court's prior Order [Dkt. 555] concerning counsel's obligations. And, Intervenor Kearney has also moved for an identical Protective Order in the pending case in which he is a Defendant (2382-cr-00313); that Motion is not currently before this Court.

With regard to the data extracted from Mr. Kearney's phones and produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 Order (the "DATA"), the Court ORDERS:

1. All agents of the Commonwealth, including but not limited to any members of any law enforcement agency or agent or contractor thereof, shall maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant.

Re: Paul O'Keefe et al. v. C&C Hospitality, LLC et al., Plymouth Superior Court, Civil Action No. 2483-CV-00692

Dear Mr. Diller:

I write on behalf of the Norfolk District Attorney's Office ("NDAO") in response to the subpoena that you issued in the above-referenced action on February 25, 2026, requesting records and access to Karen Read's cell phones; records of communications, including emails by or to Karen Read and/or Aidan Kearney; and records pertaining to the prosecution of Aidan Kearney. Pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1), this letter serves as the NDAO's written objection to the subpoena.

The NDAO objects to your requests on the grounds that they are overbroad, unduly burdensome, costly, and seek information that is publicly available. See Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (c) (for good cause shown the court should protect record holders from undue burden or expense, particularly when the material is available from some other source, duplicative, unduly cumulative, and in considering the importance of the requested material in resolving the issues); Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4) (additional considerations to the burdens of producing electronically stored data). The NDAO, a non-party record holder, emphasizes the undue burden particularly where the majority of the requests are obtainable from another source, namely defendant Karen Read. See generally Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (NDAO Notices of Discovery 34, 35, 47).

The NDAO objects to producing any information that would jeopardize pending criminal investigations; whose disclosure is proscribed by law, including grand jury materials, and documents that are sealed, impounded, subject to protective orders, or would contravene court orders, including previously raised confidentiality concerns and pending criminal cases. See Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (docket entries 636, 650); Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088] (docket -00313 entries 22, 47, 61, 62, 76).[1]

Superior Court - Plymouth

Moreover, your request no. 5 and no. 12 appear to contravene the Plymouth Superior Court's March 1, 2026 order to the "Plaintiff's Emergency Moton for Temporary Restraining Order Pursuant to Rule 65 to Prevent Release of Evidence" (Gildea, J.) as well as the Plaintiff's pending request to intervene in Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088], where the issue of access to cellphones seized from Karen Read is pending a decision of the Court (Krupp, J.).

The NDAO objects to the subpoena to the extent that it calls for the production of materials that are protected by the work-product doctrine, the attorney-client privilege, or other applicable protections, privileges, or immunities against disclosure, including but not limited to internal communications and notes containing attorney work product and/or mental impressions. The NDAO further objects to searching sources of electronically stored information that are not reasonably accessible without the investment of significant time or expense. Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4).

Sincerely,

/s/ Laura A. McLaughlin

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO COMPEL RESPONSES TO PLAINTIFFS' SUPPLEMENTAL KEEPER OF RECORDS SUBPOENA FROM AIDAN KEARNEY

NOW COME the Plaintiffs in the above-captioned matter, and respectfully request that this Honorable Court, pursuant to Rule 45 of the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure and other relevant rules governing discovery, issue an order compelling Aidan Kearney to provide responses and documents to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026. As of the date of service, Plaintiffs have yet to receive responses, objections, or any request for extension from Kearney.

I. RELEVANT BACKGROUND

On April 21, 2026, Plaintiffs served a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena on Aidan Kearney. Responses were due by April 30, 2026. EXHIBIT A. To date, Kearney has made no effort to respond, object, or request an extension. This Subpoena is directly tied to Plaintiffs'

underlying civil action filed on August 23, 2024, against Defendants Karen Read, C.F. McCarthy's, and Waterfall Bar & Grill seeking damages arising from the death of John O'Keefe III. The Complaint asserts claims against Defendant Karen Read for wrongful death (Count III), negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress (Counts X-XII), and reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress (Count XIII). EXHIBIT B.

Central to Plaintiffs' emotional distress claims is the allegation that Karen Read, acting through Aidan Kearney, orchestrated a coordinated public campaign to promote a false narrative surrounding John O'Keefe's death. Kearney, a blogger operating under the pseudonym "Turtleboy," served as Read's agent, mouthpiece, and primary instrumentality in disseminating this harmful content. Communications between Read and Kearney are therefore essential to proving the emotional distress claims.

On August 12, 2025, Karen Read filed a partial motion to dismiss. In ruling on said motion, the Court found the allegations sufficiently plausible to survive dismissal, stating:

> "When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death. Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had 'expired' for 'going after' the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress." EXHIBIT C.

In denying the motion to dismiss, Judge O'Shea endorsed the plausibility of the O'Keefe family's infliction-of-emotional-distress claims, finding that sufficient facts exist to support these claim. These claims remain active today and warrant full discovery.

Separate from this civil action, the Norfolk Grand Jury indicted Kearney on nine counts of witness intimidation, five counts of illegal picketing of a witness, and three counts of conspiracy

to intimidate a witness. The Norfolk District Attorney's Office has conducted criminal investigations into both Read and Kearney. Through these investigations, the NDAO obtained forensic extractions from cell phones belonging to both Read[1] and Kearney. These extractions contain the very communications between Read and Kearney that Plaintiffs require to prove their claims.

On March 31, 2025, the Court entered a Protective Order governing the sharing of Kearney's cell phone data, directing all agents of the Commonwealth to "maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant." See EXHIBIT D.

Plaintiffs have pursued every available avenue to obtain the discoverable materials in the NDAO's possession. On February 24, 2026, Plaintiffs served the NDAO with a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena seeking materials related to Kearney. On March 6, 2026, the NDAO objected, citing the Protective Order and confidentiality concerns as the primary impediments to production. See EXHIBIT E. Notably, the NDAO did not assert that the materials lack relevance or discoverability. On March 4, 2026, Plaintiffs filed a Motion to Intervene in Commonwealth v. Kearney for the limited purpose of expanding the Protective Order to permit production of these materials to Plaintiffs. That motion remains pending.

Despite these efforts, Plaintiffs still lack access to communications and materials. Kearney's complete failure to respond to the Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026, necessitates this motion.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

[1] Plaintiffs have reached an agreement with Read's counsel regarding the production and handling of the phone extraction data pertaining to Read.

Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C) authorizes a subpoena commanding a non-party to produce documents. Where a non-party fails to respond, the party serving the subpoena may move for an order compelling production. Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B). "Failure by any person without adequate excuse to obey a subpoena served upon that person may be deemed a contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued." Mass. R. Civ. P. 45.

In interpreting the scope of discovery under the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure, the Supreme Judicial Court has followed the approach taken under the federal rules, and defined "relevant" evidence "broadly to encompass any matter that bears on, or that reasonably could lead to other matter that could bear on, any issue that is or may be in the case... discovery is not limited to issues raised by the pleadings, for discovery itself is designed to help define and clarify the issues...Nor is discovery limited to the merits of a case, for a variety of fact-oriented issues may arise during litigation that are not related to the merits." Cronin v. Strayer, 392 Mass. 525, 534 (1984), quoting Oppenheimer Fund, Inc. v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 351 (1978).

As such, discovery should ordinarily be allowed under the concept of relevancy unless it is clear that the information sought can have no possible bearing upon the subject matter of the action. See E.A. Miller, Inc., v. South Shore Bank, 405 Mass. 95, 101 (1989) (holding that litigants should be afforded an opportunity for discovery where a party has “made even a minimal showing warranting the requested discovery").

III. ARGUMENT

A. The Requested Materials Are Directly Relevant And Crucial To Plaintiffs’ Emotional Distress Claims

The materials sought through the supplemental keeper of records subpoena are directly relevant to Plaintiffs’ claims. Plaintiffs’ emotional distress claims rest on Karen Read’s coordinated campaign with Aidan Kearney to promote a false narrative and pit the Read’s against the

O'Keefe's. Publicly communicating this false narrative directly resulted in frustrating justice for John O'Keefe and caused additional harm to the already grieving O'Keefe family. Karen Read's primary vehicle for disseminating this false narrative was her relationship with Aidan Kearney, who operates under the pseudonym "Turtleboy." Aidan Kearney manages various websites and social media accounts through which he publishes the inflammatory and harmful content at Karen Read's direction and active collaboration. As part of its investigation into Aidan Kearney, the Commonwealth obtained search warrants and ultimately seized multiple electronic devices including cell phones, laptops, cameras, SD cards, etc. The Plaintiffs have a good faith basis to believe that the data contained on these electronic devices will prove Plaintiffs' allegations and multiple aspects of their claims. Without relief, Plaintiffs cannot timely authenticate these materials.

B. The Plaintiffs Require These Materials Urgently In Order To Conduct Discovery In Their Civil Case

With the discovery deadline fast approaching in the civil matter, the Plaintiffs have an urgent need for these materials. Plaintiffs have noticed the deposition of Aidan Kearney and Karen Read and require communications and device extractions to effectively for and conduct that deposition. Additionally, Plaintiffs require these materials to prepare their cases. Without such materials the Plaintiffs will suffer prejudice.

IV. REQUESTED RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Honorable Court: (1) GRANT this Motion to Compel; (2) ORDER Aidan Kearney to produce all documents and materials responsive

to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena within ten (10) days of the Court's Order; and (3) GRANT such other and further relief as this Court deems just and appropriate.

145. The Plaintiff repeats, re-alleges, and incorporates by reference as set forth hereto in their entirety, prior paragraphs of the Complaint.

146. At all relevant times, Kayley was the niece of JJ. JJ was her guardian since her parents passed away.

148. Defendant Read knew Kayley was vulnerable, having already lost her parents at age six.

149. Nevertheless, in Kayley's presence, defendant Read spoke on speaker phone to various people between 4:30 am and 5:00 am on January 29, 2022.

150. At relevant times on January 29, 2022, Kayley heard defendant Read say "(JJ) never came home... Maybe I did something... Maybe a snow plow hit him... Maybe I had hit him.... Maybe I hit him... (we) were in an argument... Maybe he got hit by a snow plow."

158. Defendant's extreme and outrageous conduct caused Kayley aggravated emotional distress manifesting in physical symptoms.

v.

C & C HOSPITALITY, LLC d/b/a C. F. MCCARTHY'S & others[3]

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER ON DEFENDANTS' PARTIAL MOTIONS TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO MASS. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6) (Paper Nos: 37, 37.3, 37.4)

This matter arises out of the January 29, 2022, death of John Joseph O'Keefe, III ("JJ").[4] Defendant and moving party, Karen Read ("Read"), was previously charged with several crimes in connection with JJ's death. During the pendency of Read's criminal case, plaintiffs Margaret O'Keefe ("Margaret," JJ's mother), John O'Keefe, II ("John," JJ's father), Paul O'Keefe ("Paul," JJ's brother and personal representative of JJ's estate), and Kayley Furbursh ("Kayley," JJ's niece) filed this civil lawsuit asserting claims against Read for Wrongful Death (Count III), Negligent and/or Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts X, XI, and XII), and Negligent, Reckless, and/or Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress (Count XIII).

The plaintiffs also asserted claims for Wrongful Death (Counts I and II), and Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, and IX) against C&C Hospitality,

LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's, G&S Hospitality, LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's (collectively, "C.F. McCarthy's") and Waterfall Bar & Grill, LTD d/b/a Waterfall Bar & Grill ("Waterfall"). These defendants are corporate entities that owned bars that allegedly served Read alcohol in the hours leading up to the events at issue.

Read filed a motion to dismiss all emotional distress claims asserted against her. C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall joined on Read's motion to dismiss, similarly seeking to dismiss the emotional distress claims asserted against them.[5] For the foregoing reasons, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to Kayley's claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

BACKGROUND

The following facts are drawn from the plaintiffs' complaint and accepted as true for purposes of this motion.[6]

On January 28, 2022, Read patronized C.F. McCarthy's from 8:51 p.m. through 10:29 p.m. She consumed seven alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Read then patronized Waterfall from 10:54 p.m. that night through 12:10 a.m. the next morning. She consumed two alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Her blood was drawn on January 29, 2022, and testing revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

[5] C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall's motions are technically motions for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12(c), as they previously filed answers to the plaintiffs' complaint. However, a "defendant's rule 12(c) motion is actually a motion to dismiss that argues that the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted" (quotations omitted). Jarosz v. Palmer, 436 Mass. 526, 529 (2002). Thus, the court will apply the same legal framework for C.F. McCarthy and Waterfall's motions as that used in assessing Read's motion to dismiss.

[6] The court also considers facts contained in matters of public record, pursuant to Marram v. Kobrick Offshore Fund, Ltd, 442 Mass. 43, 45 n.4 (2004). These facts are reserved for discussion below.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM

revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

During the timeframe relevant to the instant lawsuit, Read and JJ were in a dating relationship. JJ was with Read that evening, and they had been arguing. After leaving Waterfall, Read got into a motor vehicle with JJ and drove to a residence at 34 Fairview Road in Canton while intoxicated. After arriving at the residence, JJ exited Read's vehicle. Read then drove her vehicle and hit JJ. JJ was knocked to the ground, suffering serious injuries that ultimately led to his death.

Read fled the scene and drove to JJ's residence at 1 Meadows Avenue in Canton. At approximately 4:30 a.m. on January 29, 2022, Read woke up JJ's niece, Kayley, who lived with JJ. Read began discussing JJ's death with Kayley and talked about striking him with her vehicle. "Kayley heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Read also called multiple people between 4:30 a.m. and 5:00 a.m. on January 29, 2022, while in Kayley's presence. At the time, Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who had previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent.

Read left JJ's residence at approximately 5:07 a.m. on January 29, 2022. She arrived at 34 Fairview Road at approximately 6:03 a.m. and discovered JJ buried in snow. JJ was pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 am. "At relevant times after 7:50 am on January 29, 2022, defendant Read went to the grieving house of JJ, feigned comfort to JJ's family, and used the opportunity to, amongst other things, remove the offending weapon, her vehicle, and/or destroy relevant evidence." Complaint, paragraph 47.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Subsequently, over the course of several years, Read made many public statements. "She knowingly and deliberately changed her story and fabricated a conspiracy knowing the same to be false. She publicly communicated this false 'narrative' thereby frustrating Justice for JJ. Such false narrative caused the Plaintiffs aggravated emotional distress." Complaint, paragraph 52.

DISCUSSION

The defendants argue that the emotional distress claims should be dismissed for multiple reasons: 1) distress claims are subsumed by the wrongful death statute; 2) the plaintiffs' claimed distress was not contemporaneous with JJ allegedly being struck by Read's vehicle; 3) there was no extreme or outrageous conduct direct towards the plaintiff that resulted in severe harm; and 4) Kayley's claims for emotional distress fail as a matter of law. The court will address each of these arguments in turn.

A. Standard of Review

To survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12 (b)(6), a complaint must contain "factual 'allegations plausibly suggesting (not merely consistent with)' an entitlement to relief." Iannacchino v. Ford Motor Co., 451 Mass. 623, 636 (2008), quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 557 (2007). The factual allegations must be "more than labels and conclusions" and "raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Iannacchino, 451 Mass. at 636, quoting Bell Atl. Corp., 550 U.S. at 555. In assessing a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6), the court accepts as true the well-pleaded factual allegations in the complaint and draws all reasonable inferences in the claimant's favor. See Fairhaven Hous. Auth. v. Commonwealth, 493 Mass. 27, 30 (2023).

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

The extent of the court's review generally is limited to the factual allegations in the complaint and any facts contained in any attached exhibits. See Eigerman v. Putnam Invs., Inc., 450 Mass. 281, 285 n.6 (2007). However, the court also may consider matters of public record, items in the record of the case, and documents cited and relied upon in the complaint. Schaer v. Brandeis Univ., 432 Mass. 474, 477 (2000).

B. Wrongful Death Statute and Emotional Distress Claims

The defendants argue that the plaintiffs' emotional distress claims are subsumed by the Massachusetts wrongful death statute, G. L. c. 229, § 2. Among other provisions, the statute identifies the following as recoverable damages:

> "the fair monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to receive the damages recovered, as provided in section one, including but not limited to compensation for the loss of the reasonably expected net income, services, protection, care, assistance, society, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice of the decedent to the persons entitled to the damages recovered."

G. L. c. 229, § 2.

Thus, the wrongful death statute contemplates some degree of emotional distress arising from a decedent's death. It addresses the loss of care, assistance, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice, all of which go to the relationship between a decedent and individuals pursuing claims under the statute.

The defendants argue that the independent emotional distress claims asserted by the plaintiffs are redundant to the plaintiffs' wrongful death assertions and consequently should be dismissed. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Cimino v. Milford Keg, Inc., 385 Mass. 323 (1982), the Supreme Judicial Court ("SJC") held:

> "The defendant's . . argument that the plaintiff's claim for emotional distress is 'preempted' by the wrongful death action (G.L. c. 229, s 2) misconstrues the common law cause of action for emotional distress. Emotional distress, as the concept has evolved in this Commonwealth, is a severe psychological shock directly resulting from

> experiencing or witnessing the effects of a defendant's conduct. . . . A claim for damages based on emotional distress does not include an administrator's claim for loss of consortium-which will be present in every wrongful death action such as this. Since emotional distress is a wrong to the plaintiff distinct from that done to [the decedent] and the statutory beneficiaries of the decedent, it is not a duplicative remedy and is not 'preempted' by the wrongful death statute." (quotations omitted).

Cimino, 385 Mass. at 334.

Here, the plaintiffs' direct emotional distress claims go beyond the mere fact that JJ died. Instead, they point to the alleged wrongs they suffered in their individual capacities. They aver that they suffered such harm in observing JJ just after his death, having Read attend family events in the immediate aftermath of JJ's death, and Read developing a public and false narrative that frustrated justice for JJ. These claims are separate from JJ's death and instead are specific to the distress the plaintiffs assert in their individual capacities, rather than their status as relatives of JJ pursuant to the wrongful death statute.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding emotional distress and the wrongful death statute.

C. Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress because their alleged distress did not occur contemporaneously with the accident giving rise to JJ's death. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Stockdale v. Bird & Son, Inc., 399 Mass. 249 (1987), the SJC stated:

> "In Dziokonski v. Babineau, 375 Mass. 555, 568 (1978), we held that 'allegations concerning a parent who sustains substantial physical harm as a result of severe mental distress over some peril or harm to his minor child caused by the defendant's negligence state a claim for which relief might be granted, where the parent either witnesses the accident or soon comes on the scene while the child is still there.' Two years later, in Ferriter v. Daniel O'Connell's Sons, 381 Mass. 507, 518, we held that the wife and children of an employee allegedly injured through his employer's negligence could maintain an action for negligent infliction of emotional distress, even though they first observed the employee in a hospital immediately after the accident. We said that '[a]

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

> plaintiff who rushes onto the accident scene and finds a loved one injured has no greater entitlement to compensation for that shock than a plaintiff who rushes instead to the hospital. So long as the shock follows closely on the heels of the accident, the two types of injury are equally foreseeable.' Id."

Stockdale, 399 Mass. at 251.

Thus, a family member is entitled to emotional distress damages when they either witness the decedent's actual injury or "come upon the injured [kin] promptly after the injury." Nancy P. v. D'Amato, 401 Mass. 516, 520 (1988).

The plaintiffs allege that Read discovered JJ buried in the snow at approximately 6:03 a.m. on January 29, 2022, and he was subsequently pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 a.m. that day. Margaret, John, and Paul each aver that they "learned of JJ's admission to [ ] Hospital immediately and came upon JJ's body at the Hospital shortly thereafter." Complaint, paragraphs 82, 88, 95, 102, 109, 116, 123, 131, and 139. Against this backdrop, the complaint alleges sufficient facts that JJ's parents and brother arrived promptly at the hospital upon learning of JJ's death and thus have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley's negligent infliction of emotional distress claim stands on different footing, however. She alleges that she "learned of JJ's death or injury when defendant Read woke Kayley up approximately 4:30 am on January 29, 2022." Complaint, paragraph 147. Further, Kayley alleges she "heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Lastly, Kayley states that, as a result of Read's conversations in her presence, she "perceived the injuries caused to her guardian, uncle JJ, and perceived the injury producing event." Complaint, paragraph 151.

Taken together, the complaint does not allege that Kayley learned of JJ's death or injury at 4:30 a.m., but instead learned he was maybe injured at that time. There are also no averments

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth

regarding when and the circumstances under which she first observed the deceased JJ. Her averments concern her perceptions of JJ's injuries, rather than her actual observations.

The case law cited by the parties addresses scenarios whereby a family member has observed another family member actually being injured or otherwise suffering shock after promptly encountering the injured family member. Kayley cannot make this showing. In making this assessment, the court acknowledges the following case law cited in the plaintiffs' opposition:

> "the determination whether there should be liability for the injury sustained depends on a number of factors, such as where, when, and how the injury to the third person entered into the consciousness of the claimant, and what degree there was of familial or other relationship between the claimant and the third person" (emphasis in original).

Dziokonski, 375 Mass. at 568.

Such language is inapposite here, as the Dziokonski court's decision turned on liability for negligent infliction of emotional distress and the parameters for when a family member arrived at the scene of an accident giving rise to a relative's injury. Stockdale extended the scope of Dziokonski to family members who promptly arrive at a hospital. Neither of these cases, nor any other cases provided by the parties, creates authority to find negligent infliction of emotional distress for family members who learn of a death beyond this prompt timeframe. Thus, Dziokonski's language about when JJ's injury "entered into the consciousness of the claimant" does not support Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to Margaret, John, and Paul's claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress and ALLOWED as to Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

D. Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for reckless infliction of emotional distress because there was no extreme or outrageous conduct directed towards them that resulted in severe harm.[7] In the context of such claims, conduct is "extreme and outrageous" if it "goes beyond all possible bounds of decency, and is regarded as atrocious, and utterly intolerable in a civilized community" (quotations omitted). Roman v. Trustees of Tufts Coll., 461 Mass. 707, 718 (2012). The standard of extreme and outrageous conduct is a high bar. Such conduct means more than "workaday insults, annoyances, or even threats and petty oppressions . . . . It means, for example, a high order of reckless ruthlessness or deliberate malevolence that . . . is simply intolerable" (quotations omitted). Conway v. Smerling, 37 Mass. App. Ct. 1, 8 (1994).

The plaintiffs allege that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death, which caused them to suffer emotional distress. In support of their opposition to the instant motions, they have produced a search warrant affidavit, which is a matter of public record that the court may consider in assessing whether the complaint plausibly suggests an entitlement to relief.[8]

According to the search warrant materials, on January 22, 2024, Detective Lieutenant Brian Tully ("Tully") of the Massachusetts State Police applied for a warrant to seize "[a]ny

[7] With reference to the defendants' arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct, the plaintiffs' opposition frames the issue in the context of reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. In the complaint, however, Magaret, John, and Paul do not assert claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Instead, at Counts, X, XI, and XII, they assert claims against Read for negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress. Thus, in ruling upon this motion, the court does not impute an additional cause of action for Margaret, John, and Paul that is not included in the complaint. As discussed below, Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

mobile device capable of communicating and cellphones used by Karen Read."[9] He filed a return of the search warrant on January 24, 2024.

Tully submitted an affidavit in support of the search warrant application. The affidavit comprises thirty-one pages and discusses Read's communications regarding JJ's death. Briefly stated, the affidavit largely describes actions by a local blogger, Aidan Kearney, who runs a series of social media websites under the name "Turtleboy."

The affidavit states that Kearney posted articles on social media accounts that reflected personal attacks on civilian witnesses, members of their families, and their friends. The affidavit also states that throughout various postings and videos, Kearney identified several individuals who socialized with JJ and Read, stated that they, not Read, were responsible for JJ's murder, and encouraged his social media followers to contact and harass these individuals. Additionally, the affidavit references certain comments Kearney directed to the O'Keefe family:

> "How much slack are we supposed to give you [John O'Keefe's family] . . . the time period for the grief, whatever, that we are giving you, like we are not going after you because of the grief, that is expired. It's expired because you're trying to send an innocent woman to jail for the rest of her life . . . I don't feel bad for you anymore.

Plaintiffs' Opposition, Exhibit A, paragraph 39.

Per the affidavit, Read communicated with Kearney through an intermediary, Natalie Wiweke Berhsneider. Through this intermediary, Read gave Kearney information concerning her case, some of which was potentially not available to the public, which Kearney then used in his social media postings. Read also shared personal information and pictures of many civilian individuals for whom Kearney argued were responsible for JJ's death.

[9] The court acknowledges that the substance of the search warrant affidavit is highly disputed. The court's references to such affidavit are viewed through the lens of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, which requires the court to view facts and draw inferences in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death.[10] Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had "expired" for "going after" the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard, the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress.

Primarily, the defendants' motions set forth generalized legal statements for extreme and outrageous conduct. As to a substantive argument, Read cites to Polay v. McMahon, 468 Mass. 379 (2014). Polay is arguably similarly because it dealt with "(1) filing false police reports and harassment prevention petitions against the plaintiffs; (2) verbally attacking the plaintiffs; and (3) monitoring and recording the plaintiffs' home on a continuous basis." Id. at 386. The SJC in Polay held that such action did not rise to the level of extreme and outrageous conduct. The court acknowledges that Polay shares parallels as to a dispute between individuals which escalated into allegedly harassing behaviors. However, given the extensive scope of media scrutiny and Read's relationship with Kearney, as alleged in the complaint and search warrant affidavit, the facts of this case rise above those at issue in Polay because of their public and pervasive nature.

[10] In making this assessment, the court is not ruling on whether Read's "narrative" was true or false. As with its consideration of the search warrant affidavit, the court is exercising its legal authority regarding the instant motions, which is limited to applying a plausibility standard with facts and inferences viewed in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM

Docket Number 2483CV00692

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct.

E. Claims Asserted by Kayley Furbush

The defendants argue that the complaint does not assert sufficient facts that Kayley suffered emotional distress, and that it does not describe which conduct applies to which claim. As discussed above, Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress must be dismissed for failure to state a viable claim. However, consistent with Margaret's, John's, and Paul's claims, Kayley was also plausibly distressed by the public and pervasive nature of Read's alleged false narrative. The alleged facts surrounding Kayley's interactions with Read in the early morning hours on January 29, 2022, can also be plausibly characterized as extreme and outrageous. Such determination supports Kayley's claim for reckless infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. A claim for intentional infliction of emotion distress requires sufficient averments that Read "intended to inflict emotional distress or that [she] knew or should have known that emotional distress was the likely result of [her] conduct." Agis v. Howard Johnson Co., 371 Mass. 140, 144–145 (1976). With reference to the specific allegations of the complaint, Read's motion states that "Defendant's questioning what happened during a phone call with third parties, even if in Kayley Furbush's presence, is also not actionable conduct." This does not convey the full scope of what occurred during the early morning hours of January 29, 2022, in the manner alleged in the complaint. Instead, the complaint plausibly pleads that Read made multiple distressing calls about JJ's physical condition, namely being struck by Read's vehicle or

Superior Court - Plymouth

by a snowplow. Moreover, Read made these statements upon waking Kayley up at 4:30 a.m., which plausibly contributed to the distressing nature of that interaction.

Even if this court were to accept Read's position that she was merely engaging in telephone conversations, "[c]onduct otherwise reasonable may become tortious when directed at an individual known to be particularly susceptible to infliction of emotional distress." Boyle v. Wenk, 378 Mass. 592, 596 (1979). At time of this interaction, it can be inferred that Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent. Given such status, Kayley would be particularly vulnerable to distress caused by an additional loss of a parental figure. Thus, based upon Kayley's vulnerability and susceptibility, Read, at a minimum, knew or should have known that her conduct would cause Kayley to suffer emotional distress. This plausibly supports a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions to dismiss are DENIED as to their arguments regarding the sufficiency of Kayley's claims.

ORDER

Wherefore, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to their claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

Commonwealth v. Karen Read

Order on Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order

Before the Court is Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order Regarding Sharing of Cell Phone Data. After a hearing on March 28th, 2025, and a review of the submissions related thereto, the Motion is ALLOWED in part.

The Intervenor has raised significant concerns regarding confidentiality related to the Commonwealth's prosecution of Mr. Kearney in 2382-cr-00313 - specifically, his concerns over law enforcement's use and/or dissemination of data obtained by search warrant and extracted from Mr. Kearney's cell phones. The Court deems Intervenor's concerns sufficient to warrant further Court action, however, only as it pertains to data that is being produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 order in this case [Dkt. 615] , and only as it relates to the above-captioned case (2282-cr-00117). The Court acknowledges that other investigative materials or discovery beyond that covered by this Order are already the subject of the Court's prior Order [Dkt. 555] concerning counsel's obligations. And, Intervenor Kearney has also moved for an identical Protective Order in the pending case in which he is a Defendant (2382-cr-00313); that Motion is not currently before this Court.

With regard to the data extracted from Mr. Kearney's phones and produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 Order (the "DATA"), the Court ORDERS:

1. All agents of the Commonwealth, including but not limited to any members of any law enforcement agency or agent or contractor thereof, shall maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant.

2. This protective order shall take effect when entered and shall remain in effect unless terminated by entry of a Court Order.
3. Any person who violates this Order shall be in contempt of Court.

SO ORDERED this 31st day of March 2025.

Re: Paul O'Keefe et al. v. C&C Hospitality, LLC et al., Plymouth Superior Court, Civil Action No. 2483-CV-00692

Dear Mr. Diller:

I write on behalf of the Norfolk District Attorney's Office ("NDAO") in response to the subpoena that you issued in the above-referenced action on February 25, 2026, requesting records and access to Karen Read's cell phones; records of communications, including emails by or to Karen Read and/or Aidan Kearney; and records pertaining to the prosecution of Aidan Kearney. Pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1), this letter serves as the NDAO's written objection to the subpoena.

The NDAO objects to your requests on the grounds that they are overbroad, unduly burdensome, costly, and seek information that is publicly available. See Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (c) (for good cause shown the court should protect record holders from undue burden or expense, particularly when the material is available from some other source, duplicative, unduly cumulative, and in considering the importance of the requested material in resolving the issues); Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4) (additional considerations to the burdens of producing electronically stored data). The NDAO, a non-party record holder, emphasizes the undue burden particularly where the majority of the requests are obtainable from another source, namely defendant Karen Read. See generally Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (NDAO Notices of Discovery 34, 35, 47).

The NDAO objects to producing any information that would jeopardize pending criminal investigations; whose disclosure is proscribed by law, including grand jury materials, and documents that are sealed, impounded, subject to protective orders, or would contravene court orders, including previously raised confidentiality concerns and pending criminal cases. See Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (docket entries 636, 650); Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088] (docket -00313 entries 22, 47, 61, 62, 76).[1]

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Moreover, your request no. 5 and no. 12 appear to contravene the Plymouth Superior Court's March 1, 2026 order to the "Plaintiff's Emergency Moton for Temporary Restraining Order Pursuant to Rule 65 to Prevent Release of Evidence" (Gildea, J.) as well as the Plaintiff's pending request to intervene in Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088], where the issue of access to cellphones seized from Karen Read is pending a decision of the Court (Krupp, J.).

The NDAO objects to the subpoena to the extent that it calls for the production of materials that are protected by the work-product doctrine, the attorney-client privilege, or other applicable protections, privileges, or immunities against disclosure, including but not limited to internal communications and notes containing attorney work product and/or mental impressions. The NDAO further objects to searching sources of electronically stored information that are not reasonably accessible without the investment of significant time or expense. Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4).

Sincerely,

/s/ Laura A. McLaughlin

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO COMPEL RESPONSES TO PLAINTIFFS' SUPPLEMENTAL KEEPER OF RECORDS SUBPOENA FROM AIDAN KEARNEY

NOW COME the Plaintiffs in the above-captioned matter, and respectfully request that this Honorable Court, pursuant to Rule 45 of the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure and other relevant rules governing discovery, issue an order compelling Aidan Kearney to provide responses and documents to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026. As of the date of service, Plaintiffs have yet to receive responses, objections, or any request for extension from Kearney.

I. RELEVANT BACKGROUND

On April 21, 2026, Plaintiffs served a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena on Aidan Kearney. Responses were due by April 30, 2026. EXHIBIT A. To date, Kearney has made no effort to respond, object, or request an extension. This Subpoena is directly tied to Plaintiffs'

underlying civil action filed on August 23, 2024, against Defendants Karen Read, C.F. McCarthy's, and Waterfall Bar & Grill seeking damages arising from the death of John O'Keefe III. The Complaint asserts claims against Defendant Karen Read for wrongful death (Count III), negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress (Counts X-XII), and reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress (Count XIII). EXHIBIT B.

Central to Plaintiffs' emotional distress claims is the allegation that Karen Read, acting through Aidan Kearney, orchestrated a coordinated public campaign to promote a false narrative surrounding John O'Keefe's death. Kearney, a blogger operating under the pseudonym "Turtleboy," served as Read's agent, mouthpiece, and primary instrumentality in disseminating this harmful content. Communications between Read and Kearney are therefore essential to proving the emotional distress claims.

On August 12, 2025, Karen Read filed a partial motion to dismiss. In ruling on said motion, the Court found the allegations sufficiently plausible to survive dismissal, stating:

> "When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death. Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had 'expired' for 'going after' the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress." EXHIBIT C.

In denying the motion to dismiss, Judge O'Shea endorsed the plausibility of the O'Keefe family's infliction-of-emotional-distress claims, finding that sufficient facts exist to support these claim. These claims remain active today and warrant full discovery.

Separate from this civil action, the Norfolk Grand Jury indicted Kearney on nine counts of witness intimidation, five counts of illegal picketing of a witness, and three counts of conspiracy

to intimidate a witness. The Norfolk District Attorney's Office has conducted criminal investigations into both Read and Kearney. Through these investigations, the NDAO obtained forensic extractions from cell phones belonging to both Read[1] and Kearney. These extractions contain the very communications between Read and Kearney that Plaintiffs require to prove their claims.

On March 31, 2025, the Court entered a Protective Order governing the sharing of Kearney's cell phone data, directing all agents of the Commonwealth to "maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant." See EXHIBIT D.

Plaintiffs have pursued every available avenue to obtain the discoverable materials in the NDAO's possession. On February 24, 2026, Plaintiffs served the NDAO with a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena seeking materials related to Kearney. On March 6, 2026, the NDAO objected, citing the Protective Order and confidentiality concerns as the primary impediments to production. See EXHIBIT E. Notably, the NDAO did not assert that the materials lack relevance or discoverability. On March 4, 2026, Plaintiffs filed a Motion to Intervene in Commonwealth v. Kearney for the limited purpose of expanding the Protective Order to permit production of these materials to Plaintiffs. That motion remains pending.

Despite these efforts, Plaintiffs still lack access to communications and materials. Kearney's complete failure to respond to the Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026, necessitates this motion.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

[1] Plaintiffs have reached an agreement with Read's counsel regarding the production and handling of the phone extraction data pertaining to Read.

Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C) authorizes a subpoena commanding a non-party to produce documents. Where a non-party fails to respond, the party serving the subpoena may move for an order compelling production. Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B). "Failure by any person without adequate excuse to obey a subpoena served upon that person may be deemed a contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued." Mass. R. Civ. P. 45.

In interpreting the scope of discovery under the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure, the Supreme Judicial Court has followed the approach taken under the federal rules, and defined "relevant" evidence "broadly to encompass any matter that bears on, or that reasonably could lead to other matter that could bear on, any issue that is or may be in the case... discovery is not limited to issues raised by the pleadings, for discovery itself is designed to help define and clarify the issues...Nor is discovery limited to the merits of a case, for a variety of fact-oriented issues may arise during litigation that are not related to the merits." Cronin v. Strayer, 392 Mass. 525, 534 (1984), quoting Oppenheimer Fund, Inc. v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 351 (1978).

As such, discovery should ordinarily be allowed under the concept of relevancy unless it is clear that the information sought can have no possible bearing upon the subject matter of the action. See E.A. Miller, Inc., v. South Shore Bank, 405 Mass. 95, 101 (1989) (holding that litigants should be afforded an opportunity for discovery where a party has “made even a minimal showing warranting the requested discovery").

III. ARGUMENT

A. The Requested Materials Are Directly Relevant And Crucial To Plaintiffs’ Emotional Distress Claims

The materials sought through the supplemental keeper of records subpoena are directly relevant to Plaintiffs’ claims. Plaintiffs’ emotional distress claims rest on Karen Read’s coordinated campaign with Aidan Kearney to promote a false narrative and pit the Read’s against the

O'Keefe's. Publicly communicating this false narrative directly resulted in frustrating justice for John O'Keefe and caused additional harm to the already grieving O'Keefe family. Karen Read's primary vehicle for disseminating this false narrative was her relationship with Aidan Kearney, who operates under the pseudonym "Turtleboy." Aidan Kearney manages various websites and social media accounts through which he publishes the inflammatory and harmful content at Karen Read's direction and active collaboration. As part of its investigation into Aidan Kearney, the Commonwealth obtained search warrants and ultimately seized multiple electronic devices including cell phones, laptops, cameras, SD cards, etc. The Plaintiffs have a good faith basis to believe that the data contained on these electronic devices will prove Plaintiffs' allegations and multiple aspects of their claims. Without relief, Plaintiffs cannot timely authenticate these materials.

B. The Plaintiffs Require These Materials Urgently In Order To Conduct Discovery In Their Civil Case

With the discovery deadline fast approaching in the civil matter, the Plaintiffs have an urgent need for these materials. Plaintiffs have noticed the deposition of Aidan Kearney and Karen Read and require communications and device extractions to effectively for and conduct that deposition. Additionally, Plaintiffs require these materials to prepare their cases. Without such materials the Plaintiffs will suffer prejudice.

IV. REQUESTED RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Honorable Court: (1) GRANT this Motion to Compel; (2) ORDER Aidan Kearney to produce all documents and materials responsive

to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena within ten (10) days of the Court's Order; and (3) GRANT such other and further relief as this Court deems just and appropriate.

These defendants are corporate entities that owned bars that allegedly served Read alcohol in the hours leading up to the events at issue.

Read filed a motion to dismiss all emotional distress claims asserted against her. C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall joined on Read's motion to dismiss, similarly seeking to dismiss the emotional distress claims asserted against them.[5] For the foregoing reasons, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to Kayley's claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

BACKGROUND

The following facts are drawn from the plaintiffs' complaint and accepted as true for purposes of this motion.[6]

On January 28, 2022, Read patronized C.F. McCarthy's from 8:51 p.m. through 10:29 p.m. She consumed seven alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Read then patronized Waterfall from 10:54 p.m. that night through 12:10 a.m. the next morning. She consumed two alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Her blood was drawn on January 29, 2022, and testing revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

[5] C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall's motions are technically motions for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12(c), as they previously filed answers to the plaintiffs' complaint. However, a "defendant's rule 12(c) motion is actually a motion to dismiss that argues that the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted" (quotations omitted). Jarosz v. Palmer, 436 Mass. 526, 529 (2002). Thus, the court will apply the same legal framework for C.F. McCarthy and Waterfall's motions as that used in assessing Read's motion to dismiss.

[6] The court also considers facts contained in matters of public record, pursuant to Marram v. Kobrick Offshore Fund, Ltd, 442 Mass. 43, 45 n.4 (2004). These facts are reserved for discussion below.

revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

During the timeframe relevant to the instant lawsuit, Read and JJ were in a dating relationship. JJ was with Read that evening, and they had been arguing. After leaving Waterfall, Read got into a motor vehicle with JJ and drove to a residence at 34 Fairview Road in Canton while intoxicated. After arriving at the residence, JJ exited Read's vehicle. Read then drove her vehicle and hit JJ. JJ was knocked to the ground, suffering serious injuries that ultimately led to his death.

Read fled the scene and drove to JJ's residence at 1 Meadows Avenue in Canton. At approximately 4:30 a.m. on January 29, 2022, Read woke up JJ's niece, Kayley, who lived with JJ. Read began discussing JJ's death with Kayley and talked about striking him with her vehicle. "Kayley heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Read also called multiple people between 4:30 a.m. and 5:00 a.m. on January 29, 2022, while in Kayley's presence. At the time, Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who had previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent.

Read left JJ's residence at approximately 5:07 a.m. on January 29, 2022. She arrived at 34 Fairview Road at approximately 6:03 a.m. and discovered JJ buried in snow. JJ was pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 am. "At relevant times after 7:50 am on January 29, 2022, defendant Read went to the grieving house of JJ, feigned comfort to JJ's family, and used the opportunity to, amongst other things, remove the offending weapon, her vehicle, and/or destroy relevant evidence." Complaint, paragraph 47.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM

Subsequently, over the course of several years, Read made many public statements. "She knowingly and deliberately changed her story and fabricated a conspiracy knowing the same to be false. She publicly communicated this false 'narrative' thereby frustrating Justice for JJ. Such false narrative caused the Plaintiffs aggravated emotional distress." Complaint, paragraph 52.

DISCUSSION

The defendants argue that the emotional distress claims should be dismissed for multiple reasons: 1) distress claims are subsumed by the wrongful death statute; 2) the plaintiffs' claimed distress was not contemporaneous with JJ allegedly being struck by Read's vehicle; 3) there was no extreme or outrageous conduct direct towards the plaintiff that resulted in severe harm; and 4) Kayley's claims for emotional distress fail as a matter of law. The court will address each of these arguments in turn.

A. Standard of Review

To survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12 (b)(6), a complaint must contain "factual 'allegations plausibly suggesting (not merely consistent with)' an entitlement to relief." Iannacchino v. Ford Motor Co., 451 Mass. 623, 636 (2008), quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 557 (2007). The factual allegations must be "more than labels and conclusions" and "raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Iannacchino, 451 Mass. at 636, quoting Bell Atl. Corp., 550 U.S. at 555. In assessing a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6), the court accepts as true the well-pleaded factual allegations in the complaint and draws all reasonable inferences in the claimant's favor. See Fairhaven Hous. Auth. v. Commonwealth, 493 Mass. 27, 30 (2023).

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

The extent of the court's review generally is limited to the factual allegations in the complaint and any facts contained in any attached exhibits. See Eigerman v. Putnam Invs., Inc., 450 Mass. 281, 285 n.6 (2007). However, the court also may consider matters of public record, items in the record of the case, and documents cited and relied upon in the complaint. Schaer v. Brandeis Univ., 432 Mass. 474, 477 (2000).

B. Wrongful Death Statute and Emotional Distress Claims

The defendants argue that the plaintiffs' emotional distress claims are subsumed by the Massachusetts wrongful death statute, G. L. c. 229, § 2. Among other provisions, the statute identifies the following as recoverable damages:

> "the fair monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to receive the damages recovered, as provided in section one, including but not limited to compensation for the loss of the reasonably expected net income, services, protection, care, assistance, society, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice of the decedent to the persons entitled to the damages recovered."

G. L. c. 229, § 2.

Thus, the wrongful death statute contemplates some degree of emotional distress arising from a decedent's death. It addresses the loss of care, assistance, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice, all of which go to the relationship between a decedent and individuals pursuing claims under the statute.

The defendants argue that the independent emotional distress claims asserted by the plaintiffs are redundant to the plaintiffs' wrongful death assertions and consequently should be dismissed. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Cimino v. Milford Keg, Inc., 385 Mass. 323 (1982), the Supreme Judicial Court ("SJC") held:

> "The defendant's . . argument that the plaintiff's claim for emotional distress is 'preempted' by the wrongful death action (G.L. c. 229, s 2) misconstrues the common law cause of action for emotional distress. Emotional distress, as the concept has evolved in this Commonwealth, is a severe psychological shock directly resulting from

> experiencing or witnessing the effects of a defendant's conduct. . . . A claim for damages based on emotional distress does not include an administrator's claim for loss of consortium-which will be present in every wrongful death action such as this. Since emotional distress is a wrong to the plaintiff distinct from that done to [the decedent] and the statutory beneficiaries of the decedent, it is not a duplicative remedy and is not 'preempted' by the wrongful death statute." (quotations omitted).

Cimino, 385 Mass. at 334.

Here, the plaintiffs' direct emotional distress claims go beyond the mere fact that JJ died. Instead, they point to the alleged wrongs they suffered in their individual capacities. They aver that they suffered such harm in observing JJ just after his death, having Read attend family events in the immediate aftermath of JJ's death, and Read developing a public and false narrative that frustrated justice for JJ. These claims are separate from JJ's death and instead are specific to the distress the plaintiffs assert in their individual capacities, rather than their status as relatives of JJ pursuant to the wrongful death statute.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding emotional distress and the wrongful death statute.

C. Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress because their alleged distress did not occur contemporaneously with the accident giving rise to JJ's death. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Stockdale v. Bird & Son, Inc., 399 Mass. 249 (1987), the SJC stated:

> "In Dziokonski v. Babineau, 375 Mass. 555, 568 (1978), we held that 'allegations concerning a parent who sustains substantial physical harm as a result of severe mental distress over some peril or harm to his minor child caused by the defendant's negligence state a claim for which relief might be granted, where the parent either witnesses the accident or soon comes on the scene while the child is still there.' Two years later, in Ferriter v. Daniel O'Connell's Sons, 381 Mass. 507, 518, we held that the wife and children of an employee allegedly injured through his employer's negligence could maintain an action for negligent infliction of emotional distress, even though they first observed the employee in a hospital immediately after the accident. We said that '[a]

> plaintiff who rushes onto the accident scene and finds a loved one injured has no greater entitlement to compensation for that shock than a plaintiff who rushes instead to the hospital. So long as the shock follows closely on the heels of the accident, the two types of injury are equally foreseeable.' Id."

Stockdale, 399 Mass. at 251.

Thus, a family member is entitled to emotional distress damages when they either witness the decedent's actual injury or "come upon the injured [kin] promptly after the injury." Nancy P. v. D'Amato, 401 Mass. 516, 520 (1988).

The plaintiffs allege that Read discovered JJ buried in the snow at approximately 6:03 a.m. on January 29, 2022, and he was subsequently pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 a.m. that day. Margaret, John, and Paul each aver that they "learned of JJ's admission to [ ] Hospital immediately and came upon JJ's body at the Hospital shortly thereafter." Complaint, paragraphs 82, 88, 95, 102, 109, 116, 123, 131, and 139. Against this backdrop, the complaint alleges sufficient facts that JJ's parents and brother arrived promptly at the hospital upon learning of JJ's death and thus have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley's negligent infliction of emotional distress claim stands on different footing, however. She alleges that she "learned of JJ's death or injury when defendant Read woke Kayley up approximately 4:30 am on January 29, 2022." Complaint, paragraph 147. Further, Kayley alleges she "heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Lastly, Kayley states that, as a result of Read's conversations in her presence, she "perceived the injuries caused to her guardian, uncle JJ, and perceived the injury producing event." Complaint, paragraph 151.

Taken together, the complaint does not allege that Kayley learned of JJ's death or injury at 4:30 a.m., but instead learned he was maybe injured at that time. There are also no averments

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth

regarding when and the circumstances under which she first observed the deceased JJ. Her averments concern her perceptions of JJ's injuries, rather than her actual observations.

The case law cited by the parties addresses scenarios whereby a family member has observed another family member actually being injured or otherwise suffering shock after promptly encountering the injured family member. Kayley cannot make this showing. In making this assessment, the court acknowledges the following case law cited in the plaintiffs' opposition:

> "the determination whether there should be liability for the injury sustained depends on a number of factors, such as where, when, and how the injury to the third person entered into the consciousness of the claimant, and what degree there was of familial or other relationship between the claimant and the third person" (emphasis in original).

Dziokonski, 375 Mass. at 568.

Such language is inapposite here, as the Dziokonski court's decision turned on liability for negligent infliction of emotional distress and the parameters for when a family member arrived at the scene of an accident giving rise to a relative's injury. Stockdale extended the scope of Dziokonski to family members who promptly arrive at a hospital. Neither of these cases, nor any other cases provided by the parties, creates authority to find negligent infliction of emotional distress for family members who learn of a death beyond this prompt timeframe. Thus, Dziokonski's language about when JJ's injury "entered into the consciousness of the claimant" does not support Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to Margaret, John, and Paul's claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress and ALLOWED as to Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

D. Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for reckless infliction of emotional distress because there was no extreme or outrageous conduct directed towards them that resulted in severe harm.[7] In the context of such claims, conduct is "extreme and outrageous" if it "goes beyond all possible bounds of decency, and is regarded as atrocious, and utterly intolerable in a civilized community" (quotations omitted). Roman v. Trustees of Tufts Coll., 461 Mass. 707, 718 (2012). The standard of extreme and outrageous conduct is a high bar. Such conduct means more than "workaday insults, annoyances, or even threats and petty oppressions . . . . It means, for example, a high order of reckless ruthlessness or deliberate malevolence that . . . is simply intolerable" (quotations omitted). Conway v. Smerling, 37 Mass. App. Ct. 1, 8 (1994).

The plaintiffs allege that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death, which caused them to suffer emotional distress. In support of their opposition to the instant motions, they have produced a search warrant affidavit, which is a matter of public record that the court may consider in assessing whether the complaint plausibly suggests an entitlement to relief.[8]

According to the search warrant materials, on January 22, 2024, Detective Lieutenant Brian Tully ("Tully") of the Massachusetts State Police applied for a warrant to seize "[a]ny

[7] With reference to the defendants' arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct, the plaintiffs' opposition frames the issue in the context of reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. In the complaint, however, Magaret, John, and Paul do not assert claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Instead, at Counts, X, XI, and XII, they assert claims against Read for negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress. Thus, in ruling upon this motion, the court does not impute an additional cause of action for Margaret, John, and Paul that is not included in the complaint. As discussed below, Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

mobile device capable of communicating and cellphones used by Karen Read."[9] He filed a return of the search warrant on January 24, 2024.

Tully submitted an affidavit in support of the search warrant application. The affidavit comprises thirty-one pages and discusses Read's communications regarding JJ's death. Briefly stated, the affidavit largely describes actions by a local blogger, Aidan Kearney, who runs a series of social media websites under the name "Turtleboy."

The affidavit states that Kearney posted articles on social media accounts that reflected personal attacks on civilian witnesses, members of their families, and their friends. The affidavit also states that throughout various postings and videos, Kearney identified several individuals who socialized with JJ and Read, stated that they, not Read, were responsible for JJ's murder, and encouraged his social media followers to contact and harass these individuals. Additionally, the affidavit references certain comments Kearney directed to the O'Keefe family:

> "How much slack are we supposed to give you [John O'Keefe's family] . . . the time period for the grief, whatever, that we are giving you, like we are not going after you because of the grief, that is expired. It's expired because you're trying to send an innocent woman to jail for the rest of her life . . . I don't feel bad for you anymore.

Plaintiffs' Opposition, Exhibit A, paragraph 39.

Per the affidavit, Read communicated with Kearney through an intermediary, Natalie Wiweke Berhsneider. Through this intermediary, Read gave Kearney information concerning her case, some of which was potentially not available to the public, which Kearney then used in his social media postings. Read also shared personal information and pictures of many civilian individuals for whom Kearney argued were responsible for JJ's death.

[9] The court acknowledges that the substance of the search warrant affidavit is highly disputed. The court's references to such affidavit are viewed through the lens of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, which requires the court to view facts and draw inferences in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death.[10] Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had "expired" for "going after" the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard, the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress.

Primarily, the defendants' motions set forth generalized legal statements for extreme and outrageous conduct. As to a substantive argument, Read cites to Polay v. McMahon, 468 Mass. 379 (2014). Polay is arguably similarly because it dealt with "(1) filing false police reports and harassment prevention petitions against the plaintiffs; (2) verbally attacking the plaintiffs; and (3) monitoring and recording the plaintiffs' home on a continuous basis." Id. at 386. The SJC in Polay held that such action did not rise to the level of extreme and outrageous conduct. The court acknowledges that Polay shares parallels as to a dispute between individuals which escalated into allegedly harassing behaviors. However, given the extensive scope of media scrutiny and Read's relationship with Kearney, as alleged in the complaint and search warrant affidavit, the facts of this case rise above those at issue in Polay because of their public and pervasive nature.

[10] In making this assessment, the court is not ruling on whether Read's "narrative" was true or false. As with its consideration of the search warrant affidavit, the court is exercising its legal authority regarding the instant motions, which is limited to applying a plausibility standard with facts and inferences viewed in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct.

E. Claims Asserted by Kayley Furbush

The defendants argue that the complaint does not assert sufficient facts that Kayley suffered emotional distress, and that it does not describe which conduct applies to which claim. As discussed above, Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress must be dismissed for failure to state a viable claim. However, consistent with Margaret's, John's, and Paul's claims, Kayley was also plausibly distressed by the public and pervasive nature of Read's alleged false narrative. The alleged facts surrounding Kayley's interactions with Read in the early morning hours on January 29, 2022, can also be plausibly characterized as extreme and outrageous. Such determination supports Kayley's claim for reckless infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. A claim for intentional infliction of emotion distress requires sufficient averments that Read "intended to inflict emotional distress or that [she] knew or should have known that emotional distress was the likely result of [her] conduct." Agis v. Howard Johnson Co., 371 Mass. 140, 144–145 (1976). With reference to the specific allegations of the complaint, Read's motion states that "Defendant's questioning what happened during a phone call with third parties, even if in Kayley Furbush's presence, is also not actionable conduct." This does not convey the full scope of what occurred during the early morning hours of January 29, 2022, in the manner alleged in the complaint. Instead, the complaint plausibly pleads that Read made multiple distressing calls about JJ's physical condition, namely being struck by Read's vehicle or

Superior Court - Plymouth

by a snowplow. Moreover, Read made these statements upon waking Kayley up at 4:30 a.m., which plausibly contributed to the distressing nature of that interaction.

Even if this court were to accept Read's position that she was merely engaging in telephone conversations, "[c]onduct otherwise reasonable may become tortious when directed at an individual known to be particularly susceptible to infliction of emotional distress." Boyle v. Wenk, 378 Mass. 592, 596 (1979). At time of this interaction, it can be inferred that Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent. Given such status, Kayley would be particularly vulnerable to distress caused by an additional loss of a parental figure. Thus, based upon Kayley's vulnerability and susceptibility, Read, at a minimum, knew or should have known that her conduct would cause Kayley to suffer emotional distress. This plausibly supports a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions to dismiss are DENIED as to their arguments regarding the sufficiency of Kayley's claims.

ORDER

Wherefore, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to their claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

Commonwealth v. Karen Read

Order on Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order

Before the Court is Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order Regarding Sharing of Cell Phone Data. After a hearing on March 28th, 2025, and a review of the submissions related thereto, the Motion is ALLOWED in part.

The Intervenor has raised significant concerns regarding confidentiality related to the Commonwealth's prosecution of Mr. Kearney in 2382-cr-00313 - specifically, his concerns over law enforcement's use and/or dissemination of data obtained by search warrant and extracted from Mr. Kearney's cell phones. The Court deems Intervenor's concerns sufficient to warrant further Court action, however, only as it pertains to data that is being produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 order in this case [Dkt. 615] , and only as it relates to the above-captioned case (2282-cr-00117). The Court acknowledges that other investigative materials or discovery beyond that covered by this Order are already the subject of the Court's prior Order [Dkt. 555] concerning counsel's obligations. And, Intervenor Kearney has also moved for an identical Protective Order in the pending case in which he is a Defendant (2382-cr-00313); that Motion is not currently before this Court.

With regard to the data extracted from Mr. Kearney's phones and produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 Order (the "DATA"), the Court ORDERS:

1. All agents of the Commonwealth, including but not limited to any members of any law enforcement agency or agent or contractor thereof, shall maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant.

2. This protective order shall take effect when entered and shall remain in effect unless terminated by entry of a Court Order.
3. Any person who violates this Order shall be in contempt of Court.

Re: Paul O'Keefe et al. v. C&C Hospitality, LLC et al., Plymouth Superior Court, Civil Action No. 2483-CV-00692

Dear Mr. Diller:

I write on behalf of the Norfolk District Attorney's Office ("NDAO") in response to the subpoena that you issued in the above-referenced action on February 25, 2026, requesting records and access to Karen Read's cell phones; records of communications, including emails by or to Karen Read and/or Aidan Kearney; and records pertaining to the prosecution of Aidan Kearney. Pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1), this letter serves as the NDAO's written objection to the subpoena.

The NDAO objects to your requests on the grounds that they are overbroad, unduly burdensome, costly, and seek information that is publicly available. See Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (c) (for good cause shown the court should protect record holders from undue burden or expense, particularly when the material is available from some other source, duplicative, unduly cumulative, and in considering the importance of the requested material in resolving the issues); Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4) (additional considerations to the burdens of producing electronically stored data). The NDAO, a non-party record holder, emphasizes the undue burden particularly where the majority of the requests are obtainable from another source, namely defendant Karen Read. See generally Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (NDAO Notices of Discovery 34, 35, 47).

Moreover, your request no. 5 and no. 12 appear to contravene the Plymouth Superior Court's March 1, 2026 order to the "Plaintiff's Emergency Moton for Temporary Restraining Order Pursuant to Rule 65 to Prevent Release of Evidence" (Gildea, J.) as well as the Plaintiff's pending request to intervene in Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088], where the issue of access to cellphones seized from Karen Read is pending a decision of the Court (Krupp, J.).

The NDAO objects to the subpoena to the extent that it calls for the production of materials that are protected by the work-product doctrine, the attorney-client privilege, or other applicable protections, privileges, or immunities against disclosure, including but not limited to internal communications and notes containing attorney work product and/or mental impressions. The NDAO further objects to searching sources of electronically stored information that are not reasonably accessible without the investment of significant time or expense. Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4).

Sincerely,

/s/ Laura A. McLaughlin

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO COMPEL RESPONSES TO PLAINTIFFS' SUPPLEMENTAL KEEPER OF RECORDS SUBPOENA FROM AIDAN KEARNEY

NOW COME the Plaintiffs in the above-captioned matter, and respectfully request that this Honorable Court, pursuant to Rule 45 of the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure and other relevant rules governing discovery, issue an order compelling Aidan Kearney to provide responses and documents to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026. As of the date of service, Plaintiffs have yet to receive responses, objections, or any request for extension from Kearney.

I. RELEVANT BACKGROUND

On April 21, 2026, Plaintiffs served a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena on Aidan Kearney. Responses were due by April 30, 2026. EXHIBIT A. To date, Kearney has made no effort to respond, object, or request an extension. This Subpoena is directly tied to Plaintiffs'

underlying civil action filed on August 23, 2024, against Defendants Karen Read, C.F. McCarthy's, and Waterfall Bar & Grill seeking damages arising from the death of John O'Keefe III. The Complaint asserts claims against Defendant Karen Read for wrongful death (Count III), negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress (Counts X-XII), and reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress (Count XIII). EXHIBIT B.

Central to Plaintiffs' emotional distress claims is the allegation that Karen Read, acting through Aidan Kearney, orchestrated a coordinated public campaign to promote a false narrative surrounding John O'Keefe's death. Kearney, a blogger operating under the pseudonym "Turtleboy," served as Read's agent, mouthpiece, and primary instrumentality in disseminating this harmful content. Communications between Read and Kearney are therefore essential to proving the emotional distress claims.

On August 12, 2025, Karen Read filed a partial motion to dismiss. In ruling on said motion, the Court found the allegations sufficiently plausible to survive dismissal, stating:

> "When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death. Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had 'expired' for 'going after' the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress." EXHIBIT C.

In denying the motion to dismiss, Judge O'Shea endorsed the plausibility of the O'Keefe family's infliction-of-emotional-distress claims, finding that sufficient facts exist to support these claim. These claims remain active today and warrant full discovery.

Separate from this civil action, the Norfolk Grand Jury indicted Kearney on nine counts of witness intimidation, five counts of illegal picketing of a witness, and three counts of conspiracy

to intimidate a witness. The Norfolk District Attorney's Office has conducted criminal investigations into both Read and Kearney. Through these investigations, the NDAO obtained forensic extractions from cell phones belonging to both Read[1] and Kearney. These extractions contain the very communications between Read and Kearney that Plaintiffs require to prove their claims.

On March 31, 2025, the Court entered a Protective Order governing the sharing of Kearney's cell phone data, directing all agents of the Commonwealth to "maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant." See EXHIBIT D.

Plaintiffs have pursued every available avenue to obtain the discoverable materials in the NDAO's possession. On February 24, 2026, Plaintiffs served the NDAO with a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena seeking materials related to Kearney. On March 6, 2026, the NDAO objected, citing the Protective Order and confidentiality concerns as the primary impediments to production. See EXHIBIT E. Notably, the NDAO did not assert that the materials lack relevance or discoverability. On March 4, 2026, Plaintiffs filed a Motion to Intervene in Commonwealth v. Kearney for the limited purpose of expanding the Protective Order to permit production of these materials to Plaintiffs. That motion remains pending.

Despite these efforts, Plaintiffs still lack access to communications and materials. Kearney's complete failure to respond to the Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026, necessitates this motion.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

[1] Plaintiffs have reached an agreement with Read's counsel regarding the production and handling of the phone extraction data pertaining to Read.

Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C) authorizes a subpoena commanding a non-party to produce documents. Where a non-party fails to respond, the party serving the subpoena may move for an order compelling production. Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B). "Failure by any person without adequate excuse to obey a subpoena served upon that person may be deemed a contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued." Mass. R. Civ. P. 45.

In interpreting the scope of discovery under the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure, the Supreme Judicial Court has followed the approach taken under the federal rules, and defined "relevant" evidence "broadly to encompass any matter that bears on, or that reasonably could lead to other matter that could bear on, any issue that is or may be in the case... discovery is not limited to issues raised by the pleadings, for discovery itself is designed to help define and clarify the issues...Nor is discovery limited to the merits of a case, for a variety of fact-oriented issues may arise during litigation that are not related to the merits." Cronin v. Strayer, 392 Mass. 525, 534 (1984), quoting Oppenheimer Fund, Inc. v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 351 (1978).

As such, discovery should ordinarily be allowed under the concept of relevancy unless it is clear that the information sought can have no possible bearing upon the subject matter of the action. See E.A. Miller, Inc., v. South Shore Bank, 405 Mass. 95, 101 (1989) (holding that litigants should be afforded an opportunity for discovery where a party has “made even a minimal showing warranting the requested discovery").

III. ARGUMENT

A. The Requested Materials Are Directly Relevant And Crucial To Plaintiffs’ Emotional Distress Claims

The materials sought through the supplemental keeper of records subpoena are directly relevant to Plaintiffs’ claims. Plaintiffs’ emotional distress claims rest on Karen Read’s coordinated campaign with Aidan Kearney to promote a false narrative and pit the Read’s against the

O'Keefe's. Publicly communicating this false narrative directly resulted in frustrating justice for John O'Keefe and caused additional harm to the already grieving O'Keefe family. Karen Read's primary vehicle for disseminating this false narrative was her relationship with Aidan Kearney, who operates under the pseudonym "Turtleboy." Aidan Kearney manages various websites and social media accounts through which he publishes the inflammatory and harmful content at Karen Read's direction and active collaboration. As part of its investigation into Aidan Kearney, the Commonwealth obtained search warrants and ultimately seized multiple electronic devices including cell phones, laptops, cameras, SD cards, etc. The Plaintiffs have a good faith basis to believe that the data contained on these electronic devices will prove Plaintiffs' allegations and multiple aspects of their claims. Without relief, Plaintiffs cannot timely authenticate these materials.

B. The Plaintiffs Require These Materials Urgently In Order To Conduct Discovery In Their Civil Case

With the discovery deadline fast approaching in the civil matter, the Plaintiffs have an urgent need for these materials. Plaintiffs have noticed the deposition of Aidan Kearney and Karen Read and require communications and device extractions to effectively for and conduct that deposition. Additionally, Plaintiffs require these materials to prepare their cases. Without such materials the Plaintiffs will suffer prejudice.

IV. REQUESTED RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Honorable Court: (1) GRANT this Motion to Compel; (2) ORDER Aidan Kearney to produce all documents and materials responsive

to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena within ten (10) days of the Court's Order; and (3) GRANT such other and further relief as this Court deems just and appropriate.

Kayley Furbush v. Karen Read – Negligent, Reckless and/or Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

145. The Plaintiff repeats, re-alleges, and incorporates by reference as set forth hereto in their entirety, prior paragraphs of the Complaint.

146. At all relevant times, Kayley was the niece of JJ. JJ was her guardian since her parents passed away.

148. Defendant Read knew Kayley was vulnerable, having already lost her parents at age six.

149. Nevertheless, in Kayley's presence, defendant Read spoke on speaker phone to various people between 4:30 am and 5:00 am on January 29, 2022.

150. At relevant times on January 29, 2022, Kayley heard defendant Read say "(JJ) never came home... Maybe I did something... Maybe a snow plow hit him... Maybe I had hit him.... Maybe I hit him... (we) were in an argument... Maybe he got hit by a snow plow."

157. The emotional distress suffered by Kayley was severe and of a nature that no reasonable person could be expected to endure it.

158. Defendant's extreme and outrageous conduct caused Kayley aggravated emotional distress manifesting in physical symptoms.

159. Kayley also suffered severe and profound emotional injuries as the result of perceiving JJ JJ's death and/or the injurious producing event, the consequences of Read's negligence.

v.

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER ON DEFENDANTS' PARTIAL MOTIONS TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO MASS. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6) (Paper Nos: 37, 37.3, 37.4)

This matter arises out of the January 29, 2022, death of John Joseph O'Keefe, III ("JJ").[4] Defendant and moving party, Karen Read ("Read"), was previously charged with several crimes in connection with JJ's death. During the pendency of Read's criminal case, plaintiffs Margaret O'Keefe ("Margaret," JJ's mother), John O'Keefe, II ("John," JJ's father), Paul O'Keefe ("Paul," JJ's brother and personal representative of JJ's estate), and Kayley Furbursh ("Kayley," JJ's niece) filed this civil lawsuit asserting claims against Read for Wrongful Death (Count III), Negligent and/or Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts X, XI, and XII), and Negligent, Reckless, and/or Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress (Count XIII).

The plaintiffs also asserted claims for Wrongful Death (Counts I and II), and Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, and IX) against C&C Hospitality,

LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's, G&S Hospitality, LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's (collectively, "C.F. McCarthy's") and Waterfall Bar & Grill, LTD d/b/a Waterfall Bar & Grill ("Waterfall"). These defendants are corporate entities that owned bars that allegedly served Read alcohol in the hours leading up to the events at issue.

Read filed a motion to dismiss all emotional distress claims asserted against her. C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall joined on Read's motion to dismiss, similarly seeking to dismiss the emotional distress claims asserted against them.[5] For the foregoing reasons, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to Kayley's claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

BACKGROUND

The following facts are drawn from the plaintiffs' complaint and accepted as true for purposes of this motion.[6]

On January 28, 2022, Read patronized C.F. McCarthy's from 8:51 p.m. through 10:29 p.m. She consumed seven alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Read then patronized Waterfall from 10:54 p.m. that night through 12:10 a.m. the next morning. She consumed two alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Her blood was drawn on January 29, 2022, and testing revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

[5] C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall's motions are technically motions for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12(c), as they previously filed answers to the plaintiffs' complaint. However, a "defendant's rule 12(c) motion is actually a motion to dismiss that argues that the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted" (quotations omitted). Jarosz v. Palmer, 436 Mass. 526, 529 (2002). Thus, the court will apply the same legal framework for C.F. McCarthy and Waterfall's motions as that used in assessing Read's motion to dismiss.

revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

During the timeframe relevant to the instant lawsuit, Read and JJ were in a dating relationship. JJ was with Read that evening, and they had been arguing. After leaving Waterfall, Read got into a motor vehicle with JJ and drove to a residence at 34 Fairview Road in Canton while intoxicated. After arriving at the residence, JJ exited Read's vehicle. Read then drove her vehicle and hit JJ. JJ was knocked to the ground, suffering serious injuries that ultimately led to his death.

Read fled the scene and drove to JJ's residence at 1 Meadows Avenue in Canton. At approximately 4:30 a.m. on January 29, 2022, Read woke up JJ's niece, Kayley, who lived with JJ. Read began discussing JJ's death with Kayley and talked about striking him with her vehicle. "Kayley heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Read also called multiple people between 4:30 a.m. and 5:00 a.m. on January 29, 2022, while in Kayley's presence. At the time, Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who had previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent.

Read left JJ's residence at approximately 5:07 a.m. on January 29, 2022. She arrived at 34 Fairview Road at approximately 6:03 a.m. and discovered JJ buried in snow. JJ was pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 am. "At relevant times after 7:50 am on January 29, 2022, defendant Read went to the grieving house of JJ, feigned comfort to JJ's family, and used the opportunity to, amongst other things, remove the offending weapon, her vehicle, and/or destroy relevant evidence." Complaint, paragraph 47.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Subsequently, over the course of several years, Read made many public statements. "She knowingly and deliberately changed her story and fabricated a conspiracy knowing the same to be false. She publicly communicated this false 'narrative' thereby frustrating Justice for JJ. Such false narrative caused the Plaintiffs aggravated emotional distress." Complaint, paragraph 52.

DISCUSSION

The defendants argue that the emotional distress claims should be dismissed for multiple reasons: 1) distress claims are subsumed by the wrongful death statute; 2) the plaintiffs' claimed distress was not contemporaneous with JJ allegedly being struck by Read's vehicle; 3) there was no extreme or outrageous conduct direct towards the plaintiff that resulted in severe harm; and 4) Kayley's claims for emotional distress fail as a matter of law. The court will address each of these arguments in turn.

A. Standard of Review

To survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12 (b)(6), a complaint must contain "factual 'allegations plausibly suggesting (not merely consistent with)' an entitlement to relief." Iannacchino v. Ford Motor Co., 451 Mass. 623, 636 (2008), quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 557 (2007). The factual allegations must be "more than labels and conclusions" and "raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Iannacchino, 451 Mass. at 636, quoting Bell Atl. Corp., 550 U.S. at 555. In assessing a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6), the court accepts as true the well-pleaded factual allegations in the complaint and draws all reasonable inferences in the claimant's favor. See Fairhaven Hous. Auth. v. Commonwealth, 493 Mass. 27, 30 (2023).

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

The extent of the court's review generally is limited to the factual allegations in the complaint and any facts contained in any attached exhibits. See Eigerman v. Putnam Invs., Inc., 450 Mass. 281, 285 n.6 (2007). However, the court also may consider matters of public record, items in the record of the case, and documents cited and relied upon in the complaint. Schaer v. Brandeis Univ., 432 Mass. 474, 477 (2000).

B. Wrongful Death Statute and Emotional Distress Claims

The defendants argue that the plaintiffs' emotional distress claims are subsumed by the Massachusetts wrongful death statute, G. L. c. 229, § 2. Among other provisions, the statute identifies the following as recoverable damages:

> "the fair monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to receive the damages recovered, as provided in section one, including but not limited to compensation for the loss of the reasonably expected net income, services, protection, care, assistance, society, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice of the decedent to the persons entitled to the damages recovered."

G. L. c. 229, § 2.

Thus, the wrongful death statute contemplates some degree of emotional distress arising from a decedent's death. It addresses the loss of care, assistance, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice, all of which go to the relationship between a decedent and individuals pursuing claims under the statute.

The defendants argue that the independent emotional distress claims asserted by the plaintiffs are redundant to the plaintiffs' wrongful death assertions and consequently should be dismissed. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Cimino v. Milford Keg, Inc., 385 Mass. 323 (1982), the Supreme Judicial Court ("SJC") held:

> "The defendant's . . argument that the plaintiff's claim for emotional distress is 'preempted' by the wrongful death action (G.L. c. 229, s 2) misconstrues the common law cause of action for emotional distress. Emotional distress, as the concept has evolved in this Commonwealth, is a severe psychological shock directly resulting from

> experiencing or witnessing the effects of a defendant's conduct. . . . A claim for damages based on emotional distress does not include an administrator's claim for loss of consortium-which will be present in every wrongful death action such as this. Since emotional distress is a wrong to the plaintiff distinct from that done to [the decedent] and the statutory beneficiaries of the decedent, it is not a duplicative remedy and is not 'preempted' by the wrongful death statute." (quotations omitted).

Cimino, 385 Mass. at 334.

Here, the plaintiffs' direct emotional distress claims go beyond the mere fact that JJ died. Instead, they point to the alleged wrongs they suffered in their individual capacities. They aver that they suffered such harm in observing JJ just after his death, having Read attend family events in the immediate aftermath of JJ's death, and Read developing a public and false narrative that frustrated justice for JJ. These claims are separate from JJ's death and instead are specific to the distress the plaintiffs assert in their individual capacities, rather than their status as relatives of JJ pursuant to the wrongful death statute.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding emotional distress and the wrongful death statute.

C. Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress because their alleged distress did not occur contemporaneously with the accident giving rise to JJ's death. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Stockdale v. Bird & Son, Inc., 399 Mass. 249 (1987), the SJC stated:

> "In Dziokonski v. Babineau, 375 Mass. 555, 568 (1978), we held that 'allegations concerning a parent who sustains substantial physical harm as a result of severe mental distress over some peril or harm to his minor child caused by the defendant's negligence state a claim for which relief might be granted, where the parent either witnesses the accident or soon comes on the scene while the child is still there.' Two years later, in Ferriter v. Daniel O'Connell's Sons, 381 Mass. 507, 518, we held that the wife and children of an employee allegedly injured through his employer's negligence could maintain an action for negligent infliction of emotional distress, even though they first observed the employee in a hospital immediately after the accident. We said that '[a]

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

> plaintiff who rushes onto the accident scene and finds a loved one injured has no greater entitlement to compensation for that shock than a plaintiff who rushes instead to the hospital. So long as the shock follows closely on the heels of the accident, the two types of injury are equally foreseeable.' Id."

Stockdale, 399 Mass. at 251.

Thus, a family member is entitled to emotional distress damages when they either witness the decedent's actual injury or "come upon the injured [kin] promptly after the injury." Nancy P. v. D'Amato, 401 Mass. 516, 520 (1988).

The plaintiffs allege that Read discovered JJ buried in the snow at approximately 6:03 a.m. on January 29, 2022, and he was subsequently pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 a.m. that day. Margaret, John, and Paul each aver that they "learned of JJ's admission to [ ] Hospital immediately and came upon JJ's body at the Hospital shortly thereafter." Complaint, paragraphs 82, 88, 95, 102, 109, 116, 123, 131, and 139. Against this backdrop, the complaint alleges sufficient facts that JJ's parents and brother arrived promptly at the hospital upon learning of JJ's death and thus have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley's negligent infliction of emotional distress claim stands on different footing, however. She alleges that she "learned of JJ's death or injury when defendant Read woke Kayley up approximately 4:30 am on January 29, 2022." Complaint, paragraph 147. Further, Kayley alleges she "heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Lastly, Kayley states that, as a result of Read's conversations in her presence, she "perceived the injuries caused to her guardian, uncle JJ, and perceived the injury producing event." Complaint, paragraph 151.

Taken together, the complaint does not allege that Kayley learned of JJ's death or injury at 4:30 a.m., but instead learned he was maybe injured at that time. There are also no averments

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth

regarding when and the circumstances under which she first observed the deceased JJ. Her averments concern her perceptions of JJ's injuries, rather than her actual observations.

The case law cited by the parties addresses scenarios whereby a family member has observed another family member actually being injured or otherwise suffering shock after promptly encountering the injured family member. Kayley cannot make this showing. In making this assessment, the court acknowledges the following case law cited in the plaintiffs' opposition:

> "the determination whether there should be liability for the injury sustained depends on a number of factors, such as where, when, and how the injury to the third person entered into the consciousness of the claimant, and what degree there was of familial or other relationship between the claimant and the third person" (emphasis in original).

Dziokonski, 375 Mass. at 568.

Such language is inapposite here, as the Dziokonski court's decision turned on liability for negligent infliction of emotional distress and the parameters for when a family member arrived at the scene of an accident giving rise to a relative's injury. Stockdale extended the scope of Dziokonski to family members who promptly arrive at a hospital. Neither of these cases, nor any other cases provided by the parties, creates authority to find negligent infliction of emotional distress for family members who learn of a death beyond this prompt timeframe. Thus, Dziokonski's language about when JJ's injury "entered into the consciousness of the claimant" does not support Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to Margaret, John, and Paul's claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress and ALLOWED as to Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

D. Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for reckless infliction of emotional distress because there was no extreme or outrageous conduct directed towards them that resulted in severe harm.[7] In the context of such claims, conduct is "extreme and outrageous" if it "goes beyond all possible bounds of decency, and is regarded as atrocious, and utterly intolerable in a civilized community" (quotations omitted). Roman v. Trustees of Tufts Coll., 461 Mass. 707, 718 (2012). The standard of extreme and outrageous conduct is a high bar. Such conduct means more than "workaday insults, annoyances, or even threats and petty oppressions . . . . It means, for example, a high order of reckless ruthlessness or deliberate malevolence that . . . is simply intolerable" (quotations omitted). Conway v. Smerling, 37 Mass. App. Ct. 1, 8 (1994).

The plaintiffs allege that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death, which caused them to suffer emotional distress. In support of their opposition to the instant motions, they have produced a search warrant affidavit, which is a matter of public record that the court may consider in assessing whether the complaint plausibly suggests an entitlement to relief.[8]

According to the search warrant materials, on January 22, 2024, Detective Lieutenant Brian Tully ("Tully") of the Massachusetts State Police applied for a warrant to seize "[a]ny

[7] With reference to the defendants' arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct, the plaintiffs' opposition frames the issue in the context of reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. In the complaint, however, Magaret, John, and Paul do not assert claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Instead, at Counts, X, XI, and XII, they assert claims against Read for negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress. Thus, in ruling upon this motion, the court does not impute an additional cause of action for Margaret, John, and Paul that is not included in the complaint. As discussed below, Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

mobile device capable of communicating and cellphones used by Karen Read."[9] He filed a return of the search warrant on January 24, 2024.

Tully submitted an affidavit in support of the search warrant application. The affidavit comprises thirty-one pages and discusses Read's communications regarding JJ's death. Briefly stated, the affidavit largely describes actions by a local blogger, Aidan Kearney, who runs a series of social media websites under the name "Turtleboy."

The affidavit states that Kearney posted articles on social media accounts that reflected personal attacks on civilian witnesses, members of their families, and their friends. The affidavit also states that throughout various postings and videos, Kearney identified several individuals who socialized with JJ and Read, stated that they, not Read, were responsible for JJ's murder, and encouraged his social media followers to contact and harass these individuals. Additionally, the affidavit references certain comments Kearney directed to the O'Keefe family:

> "How much slack are we supposed to give you [John O'Keefe's family] . . . the time period for the grief, whatever, that we are giving you, like we are not going after you because of the grief, that is expired. It's expired because you're trying to send an innocent woman to jail for the rest of her life . . . I don't feel bad for you anymore.

Plaintiffs' Opposition, Exhibit A, paragraph 39.

Per the affidavit, Read communicated with Kearney through an intermediary, Natalie Wiweke Berhsneider. Through this intermediary, Read gave Kearney information concerning her case, some of which was potentially not available to the public, which Kearney then used in his social media postings. Read also shared personal information and pictures of many civilian individuals for whom Kearney argued were responsible for JJ's death.

[9] The court acknowledges that the substance of the search warrant affidavit is highly disputed. The court's references to such affidavit are viewed through the lens of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, which requires the court to view facts and draw inferences in the plaintiffs' favor.

When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death.[10] Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had "expired" for "going after" the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard, the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress.

Primarily, the defendants' motions set forth generalized legal statements for extreme and outrageous conduct. As to a substantive argument, Read cites to Polay v. McMahon, 468 Mass. 379 (2014). Polay is arguably similarly because it dealt with "(1) filing false police reports and harassment prevention petitions against the plaintiffs; (2) verbally attacking the plaintiffs; and (3) monitoring and recording the plaintiffs' home on a continuous basis." Id. at 386. The SJC in Polay held that such action did not rise to the level of extreme and outrageous conduct. The court acknowledges that Polay shares parallels as to a dispute between individuals which escalated into allegedly harassing behaviors. However, given the extensive scope of media scrutiny and Read's relationship with Kearney, as alleged in the complaint and search warrant affidavit, the facts of this case rise above those at issue in Polay because of their public and pervasive nature.

[10] In making this assessment, the court is not ruling on whether Read's "narrative" was true or false. As with its consideration of the search warrant affidavit, the court is exercising its legal authority regarding the instant motions, which is limited to applying a plausibility standard with facts and inferences viewed in the plaintiffs' favor.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct.

E. Claims Asserted by Kayley Furbush

The defendants argue that the complaint does not assert sufficient facts that Kayley suffered emotional distress, and that it does not describe which conduct applies to which claim. As discussed above, Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress must be dismissed for failure to state a viable claim. However, consistent with Margaret's, John's, and Paul's claims, Kayley was also plausibly distressed by the public and pervasive nature of Read's alleged false narrative. The alleged facts surrounding Kayley's interactions with Read in the early morning hours on January 29, 2022, can also be plausibly characterized as extreme and outrageous. Such determination supports Kayley's claim for reckless infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. A claim for intentional infliction of emotion distress requires sufficient averments that Read "intended to inflict emotional distress or that [she] knew or should have known that emotional distress was the likely result of [her] conduct." Agis v. Howard Johnson Co., 371 Mass. 140, 144–145 (1976). With reference to the specific allegations of the complaint, Read's motion states that "Defendant's questioning what happened during a phone call with third parties, even if in Kayley Furbush's presence, is also not actionable conduct." This does not convey the full scope of what occurred during the early morning hours of January 29, 2022, in the manner alleged in the complaint. Instead, the complaint plausibly pleads that Read made multiple distressing calls about JJ's physical condition, namely being struck by Read's vehicle or

Superior Court - Plymouth

by a snowplow. Moreover, Read made these statements upon waking Kayley up at 4:30 a.m., which plausibly contributed to the distressing nature of that interaction.

Even if this court were to accept Read's position that she was merely engaging in telephone conversations, "[c]onduct otherwise reasonable may become tortious when directed at an individual known to be particularly susceptible to infliction of emotional distress." Boyle v. Wenk, 378 Mass. 592, 596 (1979). At time of this interaction, it can be inferred that Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent. Given such status, Kayley would be particularly vulnerable to distress caused by an additional loss of a parental figure. Thus, based upon Kayley's vulnerability and susceptibility, Read, at a minimum, knew or should have known that her conduct would cause Kayley to suffer emotional distress. This plausibly supports a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions to dismiss are DENIED as to their arguments regarding the sufficiency of Kayley's claims.

ORDER

Wherefore, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to their claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

Commonwealth v. Karen Read

Order on Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order

Before the Court is Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order Regarding Sharing of Cell Phone Data. After a hearing on March 28th, 2025, and a review of the submissions related thereto, the Motion is ALLOWED in part.

The Intervenor has raised significant concerns regarding confidentiality related to the Commonwealth's prosecution of Mr. Kearney in 2382-cr-00313 - specifically, his concerns over law enforcement's use and/or dissemination of data obtained by search warrant and extracted from Mr. Kearney's cell phones. The Court deems Intervenor's concerns sufficient to warrant further Court action, however, only as it pertains to data that is being produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 order in this case [Dkt. 615] , and only as it relates to the above-captioned case (2282-cr-00117). The Court acknowledges that other investigative materials or discovery beyond that covered by this Order are already the subject of the Court's prior Order [Dkt. 555] concerning counsel's obligations. And, Intervenor Kearney has also moved for an identical Protective Order in the pending case in which he is a Defendant (2382-cr-00313); that Motion is not currently before this Court.

With regard to the data extracted from Mr. Kearney's phones and produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 Order (the "DATA"), the Court ORDERS:

1. All agents of the Commonwealth, including but not limited to any members of any law enforcement agency or agent or contractor thereof, shall maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant.

2. This protective order shall take effect when entered and shall remain in effect unless terminated by entry of a Court Order.
3. Any person who violates this Order shall be in contempt of Court.

SO ORDERED this 31st day of March 2025.

Re: Paul O'Keefe et al. v. C&C Hospitality, LLC et al., Plymouth Superior Court, Civil Action No. 2483-CV-00692

Dear Mr. Diller:

I write on behalf of the Norfolk District Attorney's Office ("NDAO") in response to the subpoena that you issued in the above-referenced action on February 25, 2026, requesting records and access to Karen Read's cell phones; records of communications, including emails by or to Karen Read and/or Aidan Kearney; and records pertaining to the prosecution of Aidan Kearney. Pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1), this letter serves as the NDAO's written objection to the subpoena.

The NDAO objects to your requests on the grounds that they are overbroad, unduly burdensome, costly, and seek information that is publicly available. See Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (c) (for good cause shown the court should protect record holders from undue burden or expense, particularly when the material is available from some other source, duplicative, unduly cumulative, and in considering the importance of the requested material in resolving the issues); Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4) (additional considerations to the burdens of producing electronically stored data). The NDAO, a non-party record holder, emphasizes the undue burden particularly where the majority of the requests are obtainable from another source, namely defendant Karen Read. See generally Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (NDAO Notices of Discovery 34, 35, 47).

The NDAO objects to producing any information that would jeopardize pending criminal investigations; whose disclosure is proscribed by law, including grand jury materials, and documents that are sealed, impounded, subject to protective orders, or would contravene court orders, including previously raised confidentiality concerns and pending criminal cases. See Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (docket entries 636, 650); Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088] (docket -00313 entries 22, 47, 61, 62, 76).[1]

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Moreover, your request no. 5 and no. 12 appear to contravene the Plymouth Superior Court's March 1, 2026 order to the "Plaintiff's Emergency Moton for Temporary Restraining Order Pursuant to Rule 65 to Prevent Release of Evidence" (Gildea, J.) as well as the Plaintiff's pending request to intervene in Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088], where the issue of access to cellphones seized from Karen Read is pending a decision of the Court (Krupp, J.).

The NDAO objects to the subpoena to the extent that it calls for the production of materials that are protected by the work-product doctrine, the attorney-client privilege, or other applicable protections, privileges, or immunities against disclosure, including but not limited to internal communications and notes containing attorney work product and/or mental impressions. The NDAO further objects to searching sources of electronically stored information that are not reasonably accessible without the investment of significant time or expense. Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4).

Sincerely,

/s/ Laura A. McLaughlin

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO COMPEL RESPONSES TO PLAINTIFFS' SUPPLEMENTAL KEEPER OF RECORDS SUBPOENA FROM AIDAN KEARNEY

NOW COME the Plaintiffs in the above-captioned matter, and respectfully request that this Honorable Court, pursuant to Rule 45 of the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure and other relevant rules governing discovery, issue an order compelling Aidan Kearney to provide responses and documents to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026. As of the date of service, Plaintiffs have yet to receive responses, objections, or any request for extension from Kearney.

I. RELEVANT BACKGROUND

On April 21, 2026, Plaintiffs served a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena on Aidan Kearney. Responses were due by April 30, 2026. EXHIBIT A. To date, Kearney has made no effort to respond, object, or request an extension. This Subpoena is directly tied to Plaintiffs'

underlying civil action filed on August 23, 2024, against Defendants Karen Read, C.F. McCarthy's, and Waterfall Bar & Grill seeking damages arising from the death of John O'Keefe III. The Complaint asserts claims against Defendant Karen Read for wrongful death (Count III), negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress (Counts X-XII), and reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress (Count XIII). EXHIBIT B.

Central to Plaintiffs' emotional distress claims is the allegation that Karen Read, acting through Aidan Kearney, orchestrated a coordinated public campaign to promote a false narrative surrounding John O'Keefe's death. Kearney, a blogger operating under the pseudonym "Turtleboy," served as Read's agent, mouthpiece, and primary instrumentality in disseminating this harmful content. Communications between Read and Kearney are therefore essential to proving the emotional distress claims.

On August 12, 2025, Karen Read filed a partial motion to dismiss. In ruling on said motion, the Court found the allegations sufficiently plausible to survive dismissal, stating:

> "When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death. Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had 'expired' for 'going after' the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress." EXHIBIT C.

In denying the motion to dismiss, Judge O'Shea endorsed the plausibility of the O'Keefe family's infliction-of-emotional-distress claims, finding that sufficient facts exist to support these claim. These claims remain active today and warrant full discovery.

Separate from this civil action, the Norfolk Grand Jury indicted Kearney on nine counts of witness intimidation, five counts of illegal picketing of a witness, and three counts of conspiracy

to intimidate a witness. The Norfolk District Attorney's Office has conducted criminal investigations into both Read and Kearney. Through these investigations, the NDAO obtained forensic extractions from cell phones belonging to both Read[1] and Kearney. These extractions contain the very communications between Read and Kearney that Plaintiffs require to prove their claims.

On March 31, 2025, the Court entered a Protective Order governing the sharing of Kearney's cell phone data, directing all agents of the Commonwealth to "maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant." See EXHIBIT D.

Plaintiffs have pursued every available avenue to obtain the discoverable materials in the NDAO's possession. On February 24, 2026, Plaintiffs served the NDAO with a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena seeking materials related to Kearney. On March 6, 2026, the NDAO objected, citing the Protective Order and confidentiality concerns as the primary impediments to production. See EXHIBIT E. Notably, the NDAO did not assert that the materials lack relevance or discoverability. On March 4, 2026, Plaintiffs filed a Motion to Intervene in Commonwealth v. Kearney for the limited purpose of expanding the Protective Order to permit production of these materials to Plaintiffs. That motion remains pending.

Despite these efforts, Plaintiffs still lack access to communications and materials. Kearney's complete failure to respond to the Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026, necessitates this motion.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

[1] Plaintiffs have reached an agreement with Read's counsel regarding the production and handling of the phone extraction data pertaining to Read.

Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C) authorizes a subpoena commanding a non-party to produce documents. Where a non-party fails to respond, the party serving the subpoena may move for an order compelling production. Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B). "Failure by any person without adequate excuse to obey a subpoena served upon that person may be deemed a contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued." Mass. R. Civ. P. 45.

In interpreting the scope of discovery under the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure, the Supreme Judicial Court has followed the approach taken under the federal rules, and defined "relevant" evidence "broadly to encompass any matter that bears on, or that reasonably could lead to other matter that could bear on, any issue that is or may be in the case... discovery is not limited to issues raised by the pleadings, for discovery itself is designed to help define and clarify the issues...Nor is discovery limited to the merits of a case, for a variety of fact-oriented issues may arise during litigation that are not related to the merits." Cronin v. Strayer, 392 Mass. 525, 534 (1984), quoting Oppenheimer Fund, Inc. v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 351 (1978).

As such, discovery should ordinarily be allowed under the concept of relevancy unless it is clear that the information sought can have no possible bearing upon the subject matter of the action. See E.A. Miller, Inc., v. South Shore Bank, 405 Mass. 95, 101 (1989) (holding that litigants should be afforded an opportunity for discovery where a party has “made even a minimal showing warranting the requested discovery").

III. ARGUMENT

A. The Requested Materials Are Directly Relevant And Crucial To Plaintiffs’ Emotional Distress Claims

The materials sought through the supplemental keeper of records subpoena are directly relevant to Plaintiffs’ claims. Plaintiffs’ emotional distress claims rest on Karen Read’s coordinated campaign with Aidan Kearney to promote a false narrative and pit the Read’s against the

O'Keefe's. Publicly communicating this false narrative directly resulted in frustrating justice for John O'Keefe and caused additional harm to the already grieving O'Keefe family. Karen Read's primary vehicle for disseminating this false narrative was her relationship with Aidan Kearney, who operates under the pseudonym "Turtleboy." Aidan Kearney manages various websites and social media accounts through which he publishes the inflammatory and harmful content at Karen Read's direction and active collaboration. As part of its investigation into Aidan Kearney, the Commonwealth obtained search warrants and ultimately seized multiple electronic devices including cell phones, laptops, cameras, SD cards, etc. The Plaintiffs have a good faith basis to believe that the data contained on these electronic devices will prove Plaintiffs' allegations and multiple aspects of their claims. Without relief, Plaintiffs cannot timely authenticate these materials.

B. The Plaintiffs Require These Materials Urgently In Order To Conduct Discovery In Their Civil Case

With the discovery deadline fast approaching in the civil matter, the Plaintiffs have an urgent need for these materials. Plaintiffs have noticed the deposition of Aidan Kearney and Karen Read and require communications and device extractions to effectively for and conduct that deposition. Additionally, Plaintiffs require these materials to prepare their cases. Without such materials the Plaintiffs will suffer prejudice.

IV. REQUESTED RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Honorable Court: (1) GRANT this Motion to Compel; (2) ORDER Aidan Kearney to produce all documents and materials responsive

to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena within ten (10) days of the Court's Order; and (3) GRANT such other and further relief as this Court deems just and appropriate.

38. At all relevant times when defendant Read drove her SUV and hit JJ, defendant Read was reckless when:

a. She intended the reckless conduct that resulted in JJ's injuries/death;

c. She knew or had reason to know of the risk of grave injury or death to JJ; or said risk would have been obvious to a reasonable person; and

d. She intentionally or unreasonably disregarded that risk.

e. JJ's injuries or death resulted from defendant Read's decision to engage in the conduct referenced above in 16-17, 26 and 37 a.-d.

39. On January 29, 2022, at approximately 4:30 am, defendant Read knew that she hit JJ with her SUV. Nevertheless, she woke up JJ's 14-year-old niece Kayley and talked about JJ's death, talked about hitting JJ with her SUV and otherwise involved Kayley in her frantic calls about JJ's death.

48. On January 29, 2022, defendant Read's blood was drawn reading of 93 mg/dl.

A serum conversion and retrograde extrapolation was done of the results of defendant Read's blood, with the results showing her BAC would have been between .13% - .29% around the time she drove the SUV and hit JJ.

49. Read's BAC of .13% - .29% all exceeds the legal limit to drive a motor vehicle in Massachusetts.

50. At relevant times on or about January 29, 2022, defendant Read drove her SUV while under the influence of alcohol and hit JJ with her SUV.

51. As a direct and/or proximate cause of Read's drunk driving, JJ sustained serious injuries of body and mind, conscious pain and suffering, fear of impending death, lost earnings, medical, funeral and burial expenses, and died.

These defendants are corporate entities that owned bars that allegedly served Read alcohol in the hours leading up to the events at issue.

Read filed a motion to dismiss all emotional distress claims asserted against her. C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall joined on Read's motion to dismiss, similarly seeking to dismiss the emotional distress claims asserted against them.[5] For the foregoing reasons, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to Kayley's claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

BACKGROUND

The following facts are drawn from the plaintiffs' complaint and accepted as true for purposes of this motion.[6]

On January 28, 2022, Read patronized C.F. McCarthy's from 8:51 p.m. through 10:29 p.m. She consumed seven alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Read then patronized Waterfall from 10:54 p.m. that night through 12:10 a.m. the next morning. She consumed two alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Her blood was drawn on January 29, 2022, and testing revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

[5] C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall's motions are technically motions for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12(c), as they previously filed answers to the plaintiffs' complaint. However, a "defendant's rule 12(c) motion is actually a motion to dismiss that argues that the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted" (quotations omitted). Jarosz v. Palmer, 436 Mass. 526, 529 (2002). Thus, the court will apply the same legal framework for C.F. McCarthy and Waterfall's motions as that used in assessing Read's motion to dismiss.

revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

During the timeframe relevant to the instant lawsuit, Read and JJ were in a dating relationship. JJ was with Read that evening, and they had been arguing. After leaving Waterfall, Read got into a motor vehicle with JJ and drove to a residence at 34 Fairview Road in Canton while intoxicated. After arriving at the residence, JJ exited Read's vehicle. Read then drove her vehicle and hit JJ. JJ was knocked to the ground, suffering serious injuries that ultimately led to his death.

Read fled the scene and drove to JJ's residence at 1 Meadows Avenue in Canton. At approximately 4:30 a.m. on January 29, 2022, Read woke up JJ's niece, Kayley, who lived with JJ. Read began discussing JJ's death with Kayley and talked about striking him with her vehicle. "Kayley heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Read also called multiple people between 4:30 a.m. and 5:00 a.m. on January 29, 2022, while in Kayley's presence. At the time, Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who had previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent.

Read left JJ's residence at approximately 5:07 a.m. on January 29, 2022. She arrived at 34 Fairview Road at approximately 6:03 a.m. and discovered JJ buried in snow. JJ was pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 am. "At relevant times after 7:50 am on January 29, 2022, defendant Read went to the grieving house of JJ, feigned comfort to JJ's family, and used the opportunity to, amongst other things, remove the offending weapon, her vehicle, and/or destroy relevant evidence." Complaint, paragraph 47.

Subsequently, over the course of several years, Read made many public statements. "She knowingly and deliberately changed her story and fabricated a conspiracy knowing the same to be false. She publicly communicated this false 'narrative' thereby frustrating Justice for JJ. Such false narrative caused the Plaintiffs aggravated emotional distress." Complaint, paragraph 52.

DISCUSSION

The defendants argue that the emotional distress claims should be dismissed for multiple reasons: 1) distress claims are subsumed by the wrongful death statute; 2) the plaintiffs' claimed distress was not contemporaneous with JJ allegedly being struck by Read's vehicle; 3) there was no extreme or outrageous conduct direct towards the plaintiff that resulted in severe harm; and 4) Kayley's claims for emotional distress fail as a matter of law. The court will address each of these arguments in turn.

A. Standard of Review

To survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12 (b)(6), a complaint must contain "factual 'allegations plausibly suggesting (not merely consistent with)' an entitlement to relief." Iannacchino v. Ford Motor Co., 451 Mass. 623, 636 (2008), quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 557 (2007). The factual allegations must be "more than labels and conclusions" and "raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Iannacchino, 451 Mass. at 636, quoting Bell Atl. Corp., 550 U.S. at 555. In assessing a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6), the court accepts as true the well-pleaded factual allegations in the complaint and draws all reasonable inferences in the claimant's favor. See Fairhaven Hous. Auth. v. Commonwealth, 493 Mass. 27, 30 (2023).

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

The extent of the court's review generally is limited to the factual allegations in the complaint and any facts contained in any attached exhibits. See Eigerman v. Putnam Invs., Inc., 450 Mass. 281, 285 n.6 (2007). However, the court also may consider matters of public record, items in the record of the case, and documents cited and relied upon in the complaint. Schaer v. Brandeis Univ., 432 Mass. 474, 477 (2000).

B. Wrongful Death Statute and Emotional Distress Claims

The defendants argue that the plaintiffs' emotional distress claims are subsumed by the Massachusetts wrongful death statute, G. L. c. 229, § 2. Among other provisions, the statute identifies the following as recoverable damages:

> "the fair monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to receive the damages recovered, as provided in section one, including but not limited to compensation for the loss of the reasonably expected net income, services, protection, care, assistance, society, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice of the decedent to the persons entitled to the damages recovered."

G. L. c. 229, § 2.

Thus, the wrongful death statute contemplates some degree of emotional distress arising from a decedent's death. It addresses the loss of care, assistance, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice, all of which go to the relationship between a decedent and individuals pursuing claims under the statute.

The defendants argue that the independent emotional distress claims asserted by the plaintiffs are redundant to the plaintiffs' wrongful death assertions and consequently should be dismissed. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Cimino v. Milford Keg, Inc., 385 Mass. 323 (1982), the Supreme Judicial Court ("SJC") held:

> "The defendant's . . argument that the plaintiff's claim for emotional distress is 'preempted' by the wrongful death action (G.L. c. 229, s 2) misconstrues the common law cause of action for emotional distress. Emotional distress, as the concept has evolved in this Commonwealth, is a severe psychological shock directly resulting from

> experiencing or witnessing the effects of a defendant's conduct. . . . A claim for damages based on emotional distress does not include an administrator's claim for loss of consortium-which will be present in every wrongful death action such as this. Since emotional distress is a wrong to the plaintiff distinct from that done to [the decedent] and the statutory beneficiaries of the decedent, it is not a duplicative remedy and is not 'preempted' by the wrongful death statute." (quotations omitted).

Cimino, 385 Mass. at 334.

Here, the plaintiffs' direct emotional distress claims go beyond the mere fact that JJ died. Instead, they point to the alleged wrongs they suffered in their individual capacities. They aver that they suffered such harm in observing JJ just after his death, having Read attend family events in the immediate aftermath of JJ's death, and Read developing a public and false narrative that frustrated justice for JJ. These claims are separate from JJ's death and instead are specific to the distress the plaintiffs assert in their individual capacities, rather than their status as relatives of JJ pursuant to the wrongful death statute.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding emotional distress and the wrongful death statute.

C. Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress because their alleged distress did not occur contemporaneously with the accident giving rise to JJ's death. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Stockdale v. Bird & Son, Inc., 399 Mass. 249 (1987), the SJC stated:

> "In Dziokonski v. Babineau, 375 Mass. 555, 568 (1978), we held that 'allegations concerning a parent who sustains substantial physical harm as a result of severe mental distress over some peril or harm to his minor child caused by the defendant's negligence state a claim for which relief might be granted, where the parent either witnesses the accident or soon comes on the scene while the child is still there.' Two years later, in Ferriter v. Daniel O'Connell's Sons, 381 Mass. 507, 518, we held that the wife and children of an employee allegedly injured through his employer's negligence could maintain an action for negligent infliction of emotional distress, even though they first observed the employee in a hospital immediately after the accident. We said that '[a]

Superior Court - Plymouth

> plaintiff who rushes onto the accident scene and finds a loved one injured has no greater entitlement to compensation for that shock than a plaintiff who rushes instead to the hospital. So long as the shock follows closely on the heels of the accident, the two types of injury are equally foreseeable.' Id."

Stockdale, 399 Mass. at 251.

Thus, a family member is entitled to emotional distress damages when they either witness the decedent's actual injury or "come upon the injured [kin] promptly after the injury." Nancy P. v. D'Amato, 401 Mass. 516, 520 (1988).

The plaintiffs allege that Read discovered JJ buried in the snow at approximately 6:03 a.m. on January 29, 2022, and he was subsequently pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 a.m. that day. Margaret, John, and Paul each aver that they "learned of JJ's admission to [ ] Hospital immediately and came upon JJ's body at the Hospital shortly thereafter." Complaint, paragraphs 82, 88, 95, 102, 109, 116, 123, 131, and 139. Against this backdrop, the complaint alleges sufficient facts that JJ's parents and brother arrived promptly at the hospital upon learning of JJ's death and thus have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley's negligent infliction of emotional distress claim stands on different footing, however. She alleges that she "learned of JJ's death or injury when defendant Read woke Kayley up approximately 4:30 am on January 29, 2022." Complaint, paragraph 147. Further, Kayley alleges she "heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Lastly, Kayley states that, as a result of Read's conversations in her presence, she "perceived the injuries caused to her guardian, uncle JJ, and perceived the injury producing event." Complaint, paragraph 151.

Taken together, the complaint does not allege that Kayley learned of JJ's death or injury at 4:30 a.m., but instead learned he was maybe injured at that time. There are also no averments

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth

regarding when and the circumstances under which she first observed the deceased JJ. Her averments concern her perceptions of JJ's injuries, rather than her actual observations.

The case law cited by the parties addresses scenarios whereby a family member has observed another family member actually being injured or otherwise suffering shock after promptly encountering the injured family member. Kayley cannot make this showing. In making this assessment, the court acknowledges the following case law cited in the plaintiffs' opposition:

> "the determination whether there should be liability for the injury sustained depends on a number of factors, such as where, when, and how the injury to the third person entered into the consciousness of the claimant, and what degree there was of familial or other relationship between the claimant and the third person" (emphasis in original).

Dziokonski, 375 Mass. at 568.

Such language is inapposite here, as the Dziokonski court's decision turned on liability for negligent infliction of emotional distress and the parameters for when a family member arrived at the scene of an accident giving rise to a relative's injury. Stockdale extended the scope of Dziokonski to family members who promptly arrive at a hospital. Neither of these cases, nor any other cases provided by the parties, creates authority to find negligent infliction of emotional distress for family members who learn of a death beyond this prompt timeframe. Thus, Dziokonski's language about when JJ's injury "entered into the consciousness of the claimant" does not support Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to Margaret, John, and Paul's claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress and ALLOWED as to Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

D. Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for reckless infliction of emotional distress because there was no extreme or outrageous conduct directed towards them that resulted in severe harm.[7] In the context of such claims, conduct is "extreme and outrageous" if it "goes beyond all possible bounds of decency, and is regarded as atrocious, and utterly intolerable in a civilized community" (quotations omitted). Roman v. Trustees of Tufts Coll., 461 Mass. 707, 718 (2012). The standard of extreme and outrageous conduct is a high bar. Such conduct means more than "workaday insults, annoyances, or even threats and petty oppressions . . . . It means, for example, a high order of reckless ruthlessness or deliberate malevolence that . . . is simply intolerable" (quotations omitted). Conway v. Smerling, 37 Mass. App. Ct. 1, 8 (1994).

The plaintiffs allege that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death, which caused them to suffer emotional distress. In support of their opposition to the instant motions, they have produced a search warrant affidavit, which is a matter of public record that the court may consider in assessing whether the complaint plausibly suggests an entitlement to relief.[8]

According to the search warrant materials, on January 22, 2024, Detective Lieutenant Brian Tully ("Tully") of the Massachusetts State Police applied for a warrant to seize "[a]ny

[7] With reference to the defendants' arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct, the plaintiffs' opposition frames the issue in the context of reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. In the complaint, however, Magaret, John, and Paul do not assert claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Instead, at Counts, X, XI, and XII, they assert claims against Read for negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress. Thus, in ruling upon this motion, the court does not impute an additional cause of action for Margaret, John, and Paul that is not included in the complaint. As discussed below, Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

mobile device capable of communicating and cellphones used by Karen Read."[9] He filed a return of the search warrant on January 24, 2024.

Tully submitted an affidavit in support of the search warrant application. The affidavit comprises thirty-one pages and discusses Read's communications regarding JJ's death. Briefly stated, the affidavit largely describes actions by a local blogger, Aidan Kearney, who runs a series of social media websites under the name "Turtleboy."

The affidavit states that Kearney posted articles on social media accounts that reflected personal attacks on civilian witnesses, members of their families, and their friends. The affidavit also states that throughout various postings and videos, Kearney identified several individuals who socialized with JJ and Read, stated that they, not Read, were responsible for JJ's murder, and encouraged his social media followers to contact and harass these individuals. Additionally, the affidavit references certain comments Kearney directed to the O'Keefe family:

> "How much slack are we supposed to give you [John O'Keefe's family] . . . the time period for the grief, whatever, that we are giving you, like we are not going after you because of the grief, that is expired. It's expired because you're trying to send an innocent woman to jail for the rest of her life . . . I don't feel bad for you anymore.

Plaintiffs' Opposition, Exhibit A, paragraph 39.

Per the affidavit, Read communicated with Kearney through an intermediary, Natalie Wiweke Berhsneider. Through this intermediary, Read gave Kearney information concerning her case, some of which was potentially not available to the public, which Kearney then used in his social media postings. Read also shared personal information and pictures of many civilian individuals for whom Kearney argued were responsible for JJ's death.

[9] The court acknowledges that the substance of the search warrant affidavit is highly disputed. The court's references to such affidavit are viewed through the lens of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, which requires the court to view facts and draw inferences in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death.[10] Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had "expired" for "going after" the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard, the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress.

Primarily, the defendants' motions set forth generalized legal statements for extreme and outrageous conduct. As to a substantive argument, Read cites to Polay v. McMahon, 468 Mass. 379 (2014). Polay is arguably similarly because it dealt with "(1) filing false police reports and harassment prevention petitions against the plaintiffs; (2) verbally attacking the plaintiffs; and (3) monitoring and recording the plaintiffs' home on a continuous basis." Id. at 386. The SJC in Polay held that such action did not rise to the level of extreme and outrageous conduct. The court acknowledges that Polay shares parallels as to a dispute between individuals which escalated into allegedly harassing behaviors. However, given the extensive scope of media scrutiny and Read's relationship with Kearney, as alleged in the complaint and search warrant affidavit, the facts of this case rise above those at issue in Polay because of their public and pervasive nature.

[10] In making this assessment, the court is not ruling on whether Read's "narrative" was true or false. As with its consideration of the search warrant affidavit, the court is exercising its legal authority regarding the instant motions, which is limited to applying a plausibility standard with facts and inferences viewed in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct.

E. Claims Asserted by Kayley Furbush

The defendants argue that the complaint does not assert sufficient facts that Kayley suffered emotional distress, and that it does not describe which conduct applies to which claim. As discussed above, Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress must be dismissed for failure to state a viable claim. However, consistent with Margaret's, John's, and Paul's claims, Kayley was also plausibly distressed by the public and pervasive nature of Read's alleged false narrative. The alleged facts surrounding Kayley's interactions with Read in the early morning hours on January 29, 2022, can also be plausibly characterized as extreme and outrageous. Such determination supports Kayley's claim for reckless infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. A claim for intentional infliction of emotion distress requires sufficient averments that Read "intended to inflict emotional distress or that [she] knew or should have known that emotional distress was the likely result of [her] conduct." Agis v. Howard Johnson Co., 371 Mass. 140, 144–145 (1976). With reference to the specific allegations of the complaint, Read's motion states that "Defendant's questioning what happened during a phone call with third parties, even if in Kayley Furbush's presence, is also not actionable conduct." This does not convey the full scope of what occurred during the early morning hours of January 29, 2022, in the manner alleged in the complaint. Instead, the complaint plausibly pleads that Read made multiple distressing calls about JJ's physical condition, namely being struck by Read's vehicle or

Superior Court - Plymouth

by a snowplow. Moreover, Read made these statements upon waking Kayley up at 4:30 a.m., which plausibly contributed to the distressing nature of that interaction.

Even if this court were to accept Read's position that she was merely engaging in telephone conversations, "[c]onduct otherwise reasonable may become tortious when directed at an individual known to be particularly susceptible to infliction of emotional distress." Boyle v. Wenk, 378 Mass. 592, 596 (1979). At time of this interaction, it can be inferred that Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent. Given such status, Kayley would be particularly vulnerable to distress caused by an additional loss of a parental figure. Thus, based upon Kayley's vulnerability and susceptibility, Read, at a minimum, knew or should have known that her conduct would cause Kayley to suffer emotional distress. This plausibly supports a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions to dismiss are DENIED as to their arguments regarding the sufficiency of Kayley's claims.

ORDER

Wherefore, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to their claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

Commonwealth v. Karen Read

Order on Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order

Before the Court is Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order Regarding Sharing of Cell Phone Data. After a hearing on March 28th, 2025, and a review of the submissions related thereto, the Motion is ALLOWED in part.

The Intervenor has raised significant concerns regarding confidentiality related to the Commonwealth's prosecution of Mr. Kearney in 2382-cr-00313 - specifically, his concerns over law enforcement's use and/or dissemination of data obtained by search warrant and extracted from Mr. Kearney's cell phones. The Court deems Intervenor's concerns sufficient to warrant further Court action, however, only as it pertains to data that is being produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 order in this case [Dkt. 615] , and only as it relates to the above-captioned case (2282-cr-00117). The Court acknowledges that other investigative materials or discovery beyond that covered by this Order are already the subject of the Court's prior Order [Dkt. 555] concerning counsel's obligations. And, Intervenor Kearney has also moved for an identical Protective Order in the pending case in which he is a Defendant (2382-cr-00313); that Motion is not currently before this Court.

With regard to the data extracted from Mr. Kearney's phones and produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 Order (the "DATA"), the Court ORDERS:

1. All agents of the Commonwealth, including but not limited to any members of any law enforcement agency or agent or contractor thereof, shall maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant.

2. This protective order shall take effect when entered and shall remain in effect unless terminated by entry of a Court Order.
3. Any person who violates this Order shall be in contempt of Court.

Re: Paul O'Keefe et al. v. C&C Hospitality, LLC et al., Plymouth Superior Court, Civil Action No. 2483-CV-00692

Dear Mr. Diller:

I write on behalf of the Norfolk District Attorney's Office ("NDAO") in response to the subpoena that you issued in the above-referenced action on February 25, 2026, requesting records and access to Karen Read's cell phones; records of communications, including emails by or to Karen Read and/or Aidan Kearney; and records pertaining to the prosecution of Aidan Kearney. Pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1), this letter serves as the NDAO's written objection to the subpoena.

The NDAO objects to your requests on the grounds that they are overbroad, unduly burdensome, costly, and seek information that is publicly available. See Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (c) (for good cause shown the court should protect record holders from undue burden or expense, particularly when the material is available from some other source, duplicative, unduly cumulative, and in considering the importance of the requested material in resolving the issues); Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4) (additional considerations to the burdens of producing electronically stored data). The NDAO, a non-party record holder, emphasizes the undue burden particularly where the majority of the requests are obtainable from another source, namely defendant Karen Read. See generally Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (NDAO Notices of Discovery 34, 35, 47).

The NDAO objects to producing any information that would jeopardize pending criminal investigations; whose disclosure is proscribed by law, including grand jury materials, and documents that are sealed, impounded, subject to protective orders, or would contravene court orders, including previously raised confidentiality concerns and pending criminal cases. See Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (docket entries 636, 650); Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088] (docket -00313 entries 22, 47, 61, 62, 76).[1]

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Moreover, your request no. 5 and no. 12 appear to contravene the Plymouth Superior Court's March 1, 2026 order to the "Plaintiff's Emergency Moton for Temporary Restraining Order Pursuant to Rule 65 to Prevent Release of Evidence" (Gildea, J.) as well as the Plaintiff's pending request to intervene in Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088], where the issue of access to cellphones seized from Karen Read is pending a decision of the Court (Krupp, J.).

The NDAO objects to the subpoena to the extent that it calls for the production of materials that are protected by the work-product doctrine, the attorney-client privilege, or other applicable protections, privileges, or immunities against disclosure, including but not limited to internal communications and notes containing attorney work product and/or mental impressions. The NDAO further objects to searching sources of electronically stored information that are not reasonably accessible without the investment of significant time or expense. Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4).

Sincerely,

/s/ Laura A. McLaughlin

Assistant District Attorney

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO COMPEL RESPONSES TO PLAINTIFFS' SUPPLEMENTAL KEEPER OF RECORDS SUBPOENA FROM AIDAN KEARNEY

NOW COME the Plaintiffs in the above-captioned matter, and respectfully request that this Honorable Court, pursuant to Rule 45 of the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure and other relevant rules governing discovery, issue an order compelling Aidan Kearney to provide responses and documents to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026. As of the date of service, Plaintiffs have yet to receive responses, objections, or any request for extension from Kearney.

I. RELEVANT BACKGROUND

On April 21, 2026, Plaintiffs served a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena on Aidan Kearney. Responses were due by April 30, 2026. EXHIBIT A. To date, Kearney has made no effort to respond, object, or request an extension. This Subpoena is directly tied to Plaintiffs'

underlying civil action filed on August 23, 2024, against Defendants Karen Read, C.F. McCarthy's, and Waterfall Bar & Grill seeking damages arising from the death of John O'Keefe III. The Complaint asserts claims against Defendant Karen Read for wrongful death (Count III), negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress (Counts X-XII), and reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress (Count XIII). EXHIBIT B.

Central to Plaintiffs' emotional distress claims is the allegation that Karen Read, acting through Aidan Kearney, orchestrated a coordinated public campaign to promote a false narrative surrounding John O'Keefe's death. Kearney, a blogger operating under the pseudonym "Turtleboy," served as Read's agent, mouthpiece, and primary instrumentality in disseminating this harmful content. Communications between Read and Kearney are therefore essential to proving the emotional distress claims.

On August 12, 2025, Karen Read filed a partial motion to dismiss. In ruling on said motion, the Court found the allegations sufficiently plausible to survive dismissal, stating:

> "When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death. Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had 'expired' for 'going after' the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress." EXHIBIT C.

In denying the motion to dismiss, Judge O'Shea endorsed the plausibility of the O'Keefe family's infliction-of-emotional-distress claims, finding that sufficient facts exist to support these claim. These claims remain active today and warrant full discovery.

Separate from this civil action, the Norfolk Grand Jury indicted Kearney on nine counts of witness intimidation, five counts of illegal picketing of a witness, and three counts of conspiracy

to intimidate a witness. The Norfolk District Attorney's Office has conducted criminal investigations into both Read and Kearney. Through these investigations, the NDAO obtained forensic extractions from cell phones belonging to both Read[1] and Kearney. These extractions contain the very communications between Read and Kearney that Plaintiffs require to prove their claims.

On March 31, 2025, the Court entered a Protective Order governing the sharing of Kearney's cell phone data, directing all agents of the Commonwealth to "maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant." See EXHIBIT D.

Plaintiffs have pursued every available avenue to obtain the discoverable materials in the NDAO's possession. On February 24, 2026, Plaintiffs served the NDAO with a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena seeking materials related to Kearney. On March 6, 2026, the NDAO objected, citing the Protective Order and confidentiality concerns as the primary impediments to production. See EXHIBIT E. Notably, the NDAO did not assert that the materials lack relevance or discoverability. On March 4, 2026, Plaintiffs filed a Motion to Intervene in Commonwealth v. Kearney for the limited purpose of expanding the Protective Order to permit production of these materials to Plaintiffs. That motion remains pending.

Despite these efforts, Plaintiffs still lack access to communications and materials. Kearney's complete failure to respond to the Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026, necessitates this motion.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

[1] Plaintiffs have reached an agreement with Read's counsel regarding the production and handling of the phone extraction data pertaining to Read.

Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C) authorizes a subpoena commanding a non-party to produce documents. Where a non-party fails to respond, the party serving the subpoena may move for an order compelling production. Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B). "Failure by any person without adequate excuse to obey a subpoena served upon that person may be deemed a contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued." Mass. R. Civ. P. 45.

In interpreting the scope of discovery under the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure, the Supreme Judicial Court has followed the approach taken under the federal rules, and defined "relevant" evidence "broadly to encompass any matter that bears on, or that reasonably could lead to other matter that could bear on, any issue that is or may be in the case... discovery is not limited to issues raised by the pleadings, for discovery itself is designed to help define and clarify the issues...Nor is discovery limited to the merits of a case, for a variety of fact-oriented issues may arise during litigation that are not related to the merits." Cronin v. Strayer, 392 Mass. 525, 534 (1984), quoting Oppenheimer Fund, Inc. v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 351 (1978).

As such, discovery should ordinarily be allowed under the concept of relevancy unless it is clear that the information sought can have no possible bearing upon the subject matter of the action. See E.A. Miller, Inc., v. South Shore Bank, 405 Mass. 95, 101 (1989) (holding that litigants should be afforded an opportunity for discovery where a party has “made even a minimal showing warranting the requested discovery").

III. ARGUMENT

A. The Requested Materials Are Directly Relevant And Crucial To Plaintiffs’ Emotional Distress Claims

The materials sought through the supplemental keeper of records subpoena are directly relevant to Plaintiffs’ claims. Plaintiffs’ emotional distress claims rest on Karen Read’s coordinated campaign with Aidan Kearney to promote a false narrative and pit the Read’s against the

O'Keefe's. Publicly communicating this false narrative directly resulted in frustrating justice for John O'Keefe and caused additional harm to the already grieving O'Keefe family. Karen Read's primary vehicle for disseminating this false narrative was her relationship with Aidan Kearney, who operates under the pseudonym "Turtleboy." Aidan Kearney manages various websites and social media accounts through which he publishes the inflammatory and harmful content at Karen Read's direction and active collaboration. As part of its investigation into Aidan Kearney, the Commonwealth obtained search warrants and ultimately seized multiple electronic devices including cell phones, laptops, cameras, SD cards, etc. The Plaintiffs have a good faith basis to believe that the data contained on these electronic devices will prove Plaintiffs' allegations and multiple aspects of their claims. Without relief, Plaintiffs cannot timely authenticate these materials.

B. The Plaintiffs Require These Materials Urgently In Order To Conduct Discovery In Their Civil Case

With the discovery deadline fast approaching in the civil matter, the Plaintiffs have an urgent need for these materials. Plaintiffs have noticed the deposition of Aidan Kearney and Karen Read and require communications and device extractions to effectively for and conduct that deposition. Additionally, Plaintiffs require these materials to prepare their cases. Without such materials the Plaintiffs will suffer prejudice.

IV. REQUESTED RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Honorable Court: (1) GRANT this Motion to Compel; (2) ORDER Aidan Kearney to produce all documents and materials responsive

to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena within ten (10) days of the Court's Order; and (3) GRANT such other and further relief as this Court deems just and appropriate.

148. Defendant Read knew Kayley was vulnerable, having already lost her parents at age six.

149. Nevertheless, in Kayley's presence, defendant Read spoke on speaker phone to various people between 4:30 am and 5:00 am on January 29, 2022.

150. At relevant times on January 29, 2022, Kayley heard defendant Read say "(JJ) never came home... Maybe I did something... Maybe a snow plow hit him... Maybe I had hit him.... Maybe I hit him... (we) were in an argument... Maybe he got hit by a snow plow."

157. The emotional distress suffered by Kayley was severe and of a nature that no reasonable person could be expected to endure it.

158. Defendant's extreme and outrageous conduct caused Kayley aggravated emotional distress manifesting in physical symptoms.

PAUL O'KEEFE[1] & others[2]

C & C HOSPITALITY, LLC d/b/a C. F. MCCARTHY'S & others[3]

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER ON DEFENDANTS' PARTIAL MOTIONS TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO MASS. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6) (Paper Nos: 37, 37.3, 37.4)

This matter arises out of the January 29, 2022, death of John Joseph O'Keefe, III ("JJ").[4] Defendant and moving party, Karen Read ("Read"), was previously charged with several crimes in connection with JJ's death. During the pendency of Read's criminal case, plaintiffs Margaret O'Keefe ("Margaret," JJ's mother), John O'Keefe, II ("John," JJ's father), Paul O'Keefe ("Paul," JJ's brother and personal representative of JJ's estate), and Kayley Furbursh ("Kayley," JJ's niece) filed this civil lawsuit asserting claims against Read for Wrongful Death (Count III), Negligent and/or Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts X, XI, and XII), and Negligent, Reckless, and/or Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress (Count XIII).

The plaintiffs also asserted claims for Wrongful Death (Counts I and II), and Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, and IX) against C&C Hospitality,

LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's, G&S Hospitality, LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's (collectively, "C.F. McCarthy's") and Waterfall Bar & Grill, LTD d/b/a Waterfall Bar & Grill ("Waterfall"). These defendants are corporate entities that owned bars that allegedly served Read alcohol in the hours leading up to the events at issue.

Read filed a motion to dismiss all emotional distress claims asserted against her. C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall joined on Read's motion to dismiss, similarly seeking to dismiss the emotional distress claims asserted against them.[5] For the foregoing reasons, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to Kayley's claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

BACKGROUND

The following facts are drawn from the plaintiffs' complaint and accepted as true for purposes of this motion.[6]

On January 28, 2022, Read patronized C.F. McCarthy's from 8:51 p.m. through 10:29 p.m. She consumed seven alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Read then patronized Waterfall from 10:54 p.m. that night through 12:10 a.m. the next morning. She consumed two alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Her blood was drawn on January 29, 2022, and testing revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

[5] C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall's motions are technically motions for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12(c), as they previously filed answers to the plaintiffs' complaint. However, a "defendant's rule 12(c) motion is actually a motion to dismiss that argues that the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted" (quotations omitted). Jarosz v. Palmer, 436 Mass. 526, 529 (2002). Thus, the court will apply the same legal framework for C.F. McCarthy and Waterfall's motions as that used in assessing Read's motion to dismiss.

revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

During the timeframe relevant to the instant lawsuit, Read and JJ were in a dating relationship. JJ was with Read that evening, and they had been arguing. After leaving Waterfall, Read got into a motor vehicle with JJ and drove to a residence at 34 Fairview Road in Canton while intoxicated. After arriving at the residence, JJ exited Read's vehicle. Read then drove her vehicle and hit JJ. JJ was knocked to the ground, suffering serious injuries that ultimately led to his death.

Read fled the scene and drove to JJ's residence at 1 Meadows Avenue in Canton. At approximately 4:30 a.m. on January 29, 2022, Read woke up JJ's niece, Kayley, who lived with JJ. Read began discussing JJ's death with Kayley and talked about striking him with her vehicle. "Kayley heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Read also called multiple people between 4:30 a.m. and 5:00 a.m. on January 29, 2022, while in Kayley's presence. At the time, Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who had previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent.

Read left JJ's residence at approximately 5:07 a.m. on January 29, 2022. She arrived at 34 Fairview Road at approximately 6:03 a.m. and discovered JJ buried in snow. JJ was pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 am. "At relevant times after 7:50 am on January 29, 2022, defendant Read went to the grieving house of JJ, feigned comfort to JJ's family, and used the opportunity to, amongst other things, remove the offending weapon, her vehicle, and/or destroy relevant evidence." Complaint, paragraph 47.

Docket Number 2483CV00692

Subsequently, over the course of several years, Read made many public statements. "She knowingly and deliberately changed her story and fabricated a conspiracy knowing the same to be false. She publicly communicated this false 'narrative' thereby frustrating Justice for JJ. Such false narrative caused the Plaintiffs aggravated emotional distress." Complaint, paragraph 52.

DISCUSSION

The defendants argue that the emotional distress claims should be dismissed for multiple reasons: 1) distress claims are subsumed by the wrongful death statute; 2) the plaintiffs' claimed distress was not contemporaneous with JJ allegedly being struck by Read's vehicle; 3) there was no extreme or outrageous conduct direct towards the plaintiff that resulted in severe harm; and 4) Kayley's claims for emotional distress fail as a matter of law. The court will address each of these arguments in turn.

A. Standard of Review

To survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12 (b)(6), a complaint must contain "factual 'allegations plausibly suggesting (not merely consistent with)' an entitlement to relief." Iannacchino v. Ford Motor Co., 451 Mass. 623, 636 (2008), quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 557 (2007). The factual allegations must be "more than labels and conclusions" and "raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Iannacchino, 451 Mass. at 636, quoting Bell Atl. Corp., 550 U.S. at 555. In assessing a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6), the court accepts as true the well-pleaded factual allegations in the complaint and draws all reasonable inferences in the claimant's favor. See Fairhaven Hous. Auth. v. Commonwealth, 493 Mass. 27, 30 (2023).

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

The extent of the court's review generally is limited to the factual allegations in the complaint and any facts contained in any attached exhibits. See Eigerman v. Putnam Invs., Inc., 450 Mass. 281, 285 n.6 (2007). However, the court also may consider matters of public record, items in the record of the case, and documents cited and relied upon in the complaint. Schaer v. Brandeis Univ., 432 Mass. 474, 477 (2000).

B. Wrongful Death Statute and Emotional Distress Claims

The defendants argue that the plaintiffs' emotional distress claims are subsumed by the Massachusetts wrongful death statute, G. L. c. 229, § 2. Among other provisions, the statute identifies the following as recoverable damages:

> "the fair monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to receive the damages recovered, as provided in section one, including but not limited to compensation for the loss of the reasonably expected net income, services, protection, care, assistance, society, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice of the decedent to the persons entitled to the damages recovered."

G. L. c. 229, § 2.

Thus, the wrongful death statute contemplates some degree of emotional distress arising from a decedent's death. It addresses the loss of care, assistance, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice, all of which go to the relationship between a decedent and individuals pursuing claims under the statute.

The defendants argue that the independent emotional distress claims asserted by the plaintiffs are redundant to the plaintiffs' wrongful death assertions and consequently should be dismissed. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Cimino v. Milford Keg, Inc., 385 Mass. 323 (1982), the Supreme Judicial Court ("SJC") held:

> "The defendant's . . argument that the plaintiff's claim for emotional distress is 'preempted' by the wrongful death action (G.L. c. 229, s 2) misconstrues the common law cause of action for emotional distress. Emotional distress, as the concept has evolved in this Commonwealth, is a severe psychological shock directly resulting from

> experiencing or witnessing the effects of a defendant's conduct. . . . A claim for damages based on emotional distress does not include an administrator's claim for loss of consortium-which will be present in every wrongful death action such as this. Since emotional distress is a wrong to the plaintiff distinct from that done to [the decedent] and the statutory beneficiaries of the decedent, it is not a duplicative remedy and is not 'preempted' by the wrongful death statute." (quotations omitted).

Cimino, 385 Mass. at 334.

Here, the plaintiffs' direct emotional distress claims go beyond the mere fact that JJ died. Instead, they point to the alleged wrongs they suffered in their individual capacities. They aver that they suffered such harm in observing JJ just after his death, having Read attend family events in the immediate aftermath of JJ's death, and Read developing a public and false narrative that frustrated justice for JJ. These claims are separate from JJ's death and instead are specific to the distress the plaintiffs assert in their individual capacities, rather than their status as relatives of JJ pursuant to the wrongful death statute.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding emotional distress and the wrongful death statute.

C. Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress because their alleged distress did not occur contemporaneously with the accident giving rise to JJ's death. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Stockdale v. Bird & Son, Inc., 399 Mass. 249 (1987), the SJC stated:

> "In Dziokonski v. Babineau, 375 Mass. 555, 568 (1978), we held that 'allegations concerning a parent who sustains substantial physical harm as a result of severe mental distress over some peril or harm to his minor child caused by the defendant's negligence state a claim for which relief might be granted, where the parent either witnesses the accident or soon comes on the scene while the child is still there.' Two years later, in Ferriter v. Daniel O'Connell's Sons, 381 Mass. 507, 518, we held that the wife and children of an employee allegedly injured through his employer's negligence could maintain an action for negligent infliction of emotional distress, even though they first observed the employee in a hospital immediately after the accident. We said that '[a]

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

> plaintiff who rushes onto the accident scene and finds a loved one injured has no greater entitlement to compensation for that shock than a plaintiff who rushes instead to the hospital. So long as the shock follows closely on the heels of the accident, the two types of injury are equally foreseeable.' Id."

Stockdale, 399 Mass. at 251.

Thus, a family member is entitled to emotional distress damages when they either witness the decedent's actual injury or "come upon the injured [kin] promptly after the injury." Nancy P. v. D'Amato, 401 Mass. 516, 520 (1988).

The plaintiffs allege that Read discovered JJ buried in the snow at approximately 6:03 a.m. on January 29, 2022, and he was subsequently pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 a.m. that day. Margaret, John, and Paul each aver that they "learned of JJ's admission to [ ] Hospital immediately and came upon JJ's body at the Hospital shortly thereafter." Complaint, paragraphs 82, 88, 95, 102, 109, 116, 123, 131, and 139. Against this backdrop, the complaint alleges sufficient facts that JJ's parents and brother arrived promptly at the hospital upon learning of JJ's death and thus have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley's negligent infliction of emotional distress claim stands on different footing, however. She alleges that she "learned of JJ's death or injury when defendant Read woke Kayley up approximately 4:30 am on January 29, 2022." Complaint, paragraph 147. Further, Kayley alleges she "heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Lastly, Kayley states that, as a result of Read's conversations in her presence, she "perceived the injuries caused to her guardian, uncle JJ, and perceived the injury producing event." Complaint, paragraph 151.

Taken together, the complaint does not allege that Kayley learned of JJ's death or injury at 4:30 a.m., but instead learned he was maybe injured at that time. There are also no averments

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth

regarding when and the circumstances under which she first observed the deceased JJ. Her averments concern her perceptions of JJ's injuries, rather than her actual observations.

The case law cited by the parties addresses scenarios whereby a family member has observed another family member actually being injured or otherwise suffering shock after promptly encountering the injured family member. Kayley cannot make this showing. In making this assessment, the court acknowledges the following case law cited in the plaintiffs' opposition:

> "the determination whether there should be liability for the injury sustained depends on a number of factors, such as where, when, and how the injury to the third person entered into the consciousness of the claimant, and what degree there was of familial or other relationship between the claimant and the third person" (emphasis in original).

Dziokonski, 375 Mass. at 568.

Such language is inapposite here, as the Dziokonski court's decision turned on liability for negligent infliction of emotional distress and the parameters for when a family member arrived at the scene of an accident giving rise to a relative's injury. Stockdale extended the scope of Dziokonski to family members who promptly arrive at a hospital. Neither of these cases, nor any other cases provided by the parties, creates authority to find negligent infliction of emotional distress for family members who learn of a death beyond this prompt timeframe. Thus, Dziokonski's language about when JJ's injury "entered into the consciousness of the claimant" does not support Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to Margaret, John, and Paul's claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress and ALLOWED as to Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

D. Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for reckless infliction of emotional distress because there was no extreme or outrageous conduct directed towards them that resulted in severe harm.[7] In the context of such claims, conduct is "extreme and outrageous" if it "goes beyond all possible bounds of decency, and is regarded as atrocious, and utterly intolerable in a civilized community" (quotations omitted). Roman v. Trustees of Tufts Coll., 461 Mass. 707, 718 (2012). The standard of extreme and outrageous conduct is a high bar. Such conduct means more than "workaday insults, annoyances, or even threats and petty oppressions . . . . It means, for example, a high order of reckless ruthlessness or deliberate malevolence that . . . is simply intolerable" (quotations omitted). Conway v. Smerling, 37 Mass. App. Ct. 1, 8 (1994).

The plaintiffs allege that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death, which caused them to suffer emotional distress. In support of their opposition to the instant motions, they have produced a search warrant affidavit, which is a matter of public record that the court may consider in assessing whether the complaint plausibly suggests an entitlement to relief.[8]

According to the search warrant materials, on January 22, 2024, Detective Lieutenant Brian Tully ("Tully") of the Massachusetts State Police applied for a warrant to seize "[a]ny

[7] With reference to the defendants' arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct, the plaintiffs' opposition frames the issue in the context of reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. In the complaint, however, Magaret, John, and Paul do not assert claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Instead, at Counts, X, XI, and XII, they assert claims against Read for negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress. Thus, in ruling upon this motion, the court does not impute an additional cause of action for Margaret, John, and Paul that is not included in the complaint. As discussed below, Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

mobile device capable of communicating and cellphones used by Karen Read."[9] He filed a return of the search warrant on January 24, 2024.

Tully submitted an affidavit in support of the search warrant application. The affidavit comprises thirty-one pages and discusses Read's communications regarding JJ's death. Briefly stated, the affidavit largely describes actions by a local blogger, Aidan Kearney, who runs a series of social media websites under the name "Turtleboy."

The affidavit states that Kearney posted articles on social media accounts that reflected personal attacks on civilian witnesses, members of their families, and their friends. The affidavit also states that throughout various postings and videos, Kearney identified several individuals who socialized with JJ and Read, stated that they, not Read, were responsible for JJ's murder, and encouraged his social media followers to contact and harass these individuals. Additionally, the affidavit references certain comments Kearney directed to the O'Keefe family:

> "How much slack are we supposed to give you [John O'Keefe's family] . . . the time period for the grief, whatever, that we are giving you, like we are not going after you because of the grief, that is expired. It's expired because you're trying to send an innocent woman to jail for the rest of her life . . . I don't feel bad for you anymore.

Plaintiffs' Opposition, Exhibit A, paragraph 39.

Per the affidavit, Read communicated with Kearney through an intermediary, Natalie Wiweke Berhsneider. Through this intermediary, Read gave Kearney information concerning her case, some of which was potentially not available to the public, which Kearney then used in his social media postings. Read also shared personal information and pictures of many civilian individuals for whom Kearney argued were responsible for JJ's death.

[9] The court acknowledges that the substance of the search warrant affidavit is highly disputed. The court's references to such affidavit are viewed through the lens of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, which requires the court to view facts and draw inferences in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death.[10] Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had "expired" for "going after" the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard, the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress.

Primarily, the defendants' motions set forth generalized legal statements for extreme and outrageous conduct. As to a substantive argument, Read cites to Polay v. McMahon, 468 Mass. 379 (2014). Polay is arguably similarly because it dealt with "(1) filing false police reports and harassment prevention petitions against the plaintiffs; (2) verbally attacking the plaintiffs; and (3) monitoring and recording the plaintiffs' home on a continuous basis." Id. at 386. The SJC in Polay held that such action did not rise to the level of extreme and outrageous conduct. The court acknowledges that Polay shares parallels as to a dispute between individuals which escalated into allegedly harassing behaviors. However, given the extensive scope of media scrutiny and Read's relationship with Kearney, as alleged in the complaint and search warrant affidavit, the facts of this case rise above those at issue in Polay because of their public and pervasive nature.

[10] In making this assessment, the court is not ruling on whether Read's "narrative" was true or false. As with its consideration of the search warrant affidavit, the court is exercising its legal authority regarding the instant motions, which is limited to applying a plausibility standard with facts and inferences viewed in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct.

E. Claims Asserted by Kayley Furbush

The defendants argue that the complaint does not assert sufficient facts that Kayley suffered emotional distress, and that it does not describe which conduct applies to which claim. As discussed above, Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress must be dismissed for failure to state a viable claim. However, consistent with Margaret's, John's, and Paul's claims, Kayley was also plausibly distressed by the public and pervasive nature of Read's alleged false narrative. The alleged facts surrounding Kayley's interactions with Read in the early morning hours on January 29, 2022, can also be plausibly characterized as extreme and outrageous. Such determination supports Kayley's claim for reckless infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. A claim for intentional infliction of emotion distress requires sufficient averments that Read "intended to inflict emotional distress or that [she] knew or should have known that emotional distress was the likely result of [her] conduct." Agis v. Howard Johnson Co., 371 Mass. 140, 144–145 (1976). With reference to the specific allegations of the complaint, Read's motion states that "Defendant's questioning what happened during a phone call with third parties, even if in Kayley Furbush's presence, is also not actionable conduct." This does not convey the full scope of what occurred during the early morning hours of January 29, 2022, in the manner alleged in the complaint. Instead, the complaint plausibly pleads that Read made multiple distressing calls about JJ's physical condition, namely being struck by Read's vehicle or

Superior Court - Plymouth

by a snowplow. Moreover, Read made these statements upon waking Kayley up at 4:30 a.m., which plausibly contributed to the distressing nature of that interaction.

Even if this court were to accept Read's position that she was merely engaging in telephone conversations, "[c]onduct otherwise reasonable may become tortious when directed at an individual known to be particularly susceptible to infliction of emotional distress." Boyle v. Wenk, 378 Mass. 592, 596 (1979). At time of this interaction, it can be inferred that Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent. Given such status, Kayley would be particularly vulnerable to distress caused by an additional loss of a parental figure. Thus, based upon Kayley's vulnerability and susceptibility, Read, at a minimum, knew or should have known that her conduct would cause Kayley to suffer emotional distress. This plausibly supports a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions to dismiss are DENIED as to their arguments regarding the sufficiency of Kayley's claims.

ORDER

Wherefore, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to their claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

Commonwealth v. Karen Read

Order on Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order

Before the Court is Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order Regarding Sharing of Cell Phone Data. After a hearing on March 28th, 2025, and a review of the submissions related thereto, the Motion is ALLOWED in part.

The Intervenor has raised significant concerns regarding confidentiality related to the Commonwealth's prosecution of Mr. Kearney in 2382-cr-00313 - specifically, his concerns over law enforcement's use and/or dissemination of data obtained by search warrant and extracted from Mr. Kearney's cell phones. The Court deems Intervenor's concerns sufficient to warrant further Court action, however, only as it pertains to data that is being produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 order in this case [Dkt. 615] , and only as it relates to the above-captioned case (2282-cr-00117). The Court acknowledges that other investigative materials or discovery beyond that covered by this Order are already the subject of the Court's prior Order [Dkt. 555] concerning counsel's obligations. And, Intervenor Kearney has also moved for an identical Protective Order in the pending case in which he is a Defendant (2382-cr-00313); that Motion is not currently before this Court.

With regard to the data extracted from Mr. Kearney's phones and produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 Order (the "DATA"), the Court ORDERS:

1. All agents of the Commonwealth, including but not limited to any members of any law enforcement agency or agent or contractor thereof, shall maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant.

2. This protective order shall take effect when entered and shall remain in effect unless terminated by entry of a Court Order.
3. Any person who violates this Order shall be in contempt of Court.

SO ORDERED this 31st day of March 2025.

Re: Paul O'Keefe et al. v. C&C Hospitality, LLC et al., Plymouth Superior Court, Civil Action No. 2483-CV-00692

Dear Mr. Diller:

I write on behalf of the Norfolk District Attorney's Office ("NDAO") in response to the subpoena that you issued in the above-referenced action on February 25, 2026, requesting records and access to Karen Read's cell phones; records of communications, including emails by or to Karen Read and/or Aidan Kearney; and records pertaining to the prosecution of Aidan Kearney. Pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1), this letter serves as the NDAO's written objection to the subpoena.

The NDAO objects to your requests on the grounds that they are overbroad, unduly burdensome, costly, and seek information that is publicly available. See Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (c) (for good cause shown the court should protect record holders from undue burden or expense, particularly when the material is available from some other source, duplicative, unduly cumulative, and in considering the importance of the requested material in resolving the issues); Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4) (additional considerations to the burdens of producing electronically stored data). The NDAO, a non-party record holder, emphasizes the undue burden particularly where the majority of the requests are obtainable from another source, namely defendant Karen Read. See generally Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (NDAO Notices of Discovery 34, 35, 47).

The NDAO objects to producing any information that would jeopardize pending criminal investigations; whose disclosure is proscribed by law, including grand jury materials, and documents that are sealed, impounded, subject to protective orders, or would contravene court orders, including previously raised confidentiality concerns and pending criminal cases. See Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (docket entries 636, 650); Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088] (docket -00313 entries 22, 47, 61, 62, 76).[1]

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Moreover, your request no. 5 and no. 12 appear to contravene the Plymouth Superior Court's March 1, 2026 order to the "Plaintiff's Emergency Moton for Temporary Restraining Order Pursuant to Rule 65 to Prevent Release of Evidence" (Gildea, J.) as well as the Plaintiff's pending request to intervene in Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088], where the issue of access to cellphones seized from Karen Read is pending a decision of the Court (Krupp, J.).

The NDAO objects to the subpoena to the extent that it calls for the production of materials that are protected by the work-product doctrine, the attorney-client privilege, or other applicable protections, privileges, or immunities against disclosure, including but not limited to internal communications and notes containing attorney work product and/or mental impressions. The NDAO further objects to searching sources of electronically stored information that are not reasonably accessible without the investment of significant time or expense. Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4).

Sincerely,

/s/ Laura A. McLaughlin

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO COMPEL RESPONSES TO PLAINTIFFS' SUPPLEMENTAL KEEPER OF RECORDS SUBPOENA FROM AIDAN KEARNEY

NOW COME the Plaintiffs in the above-captioned matter, and respectfully request that this Honorable Court, pursuant to Rule 45 of the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure and other relevant rules governing discovery, issue an order compelling Aidan Kearney to provide responses and documents to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026. As of the date of service, Plaintiffs have yet to receive responses, objections, or any request for extension from Kearney.

I. RELEVANT BACKGROUND

On April 21, 2026, Plaintiffs served a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena on Aidan Kearney. Responses were due by April 30, 2026. EXHIBIT A. To date, Kearney has made no effort to respond, object, or request an extension. This Subpoena is directly tied to Plaintiffs'

underlying civil action filed on August 23, 2024, against Defendants Karen Read, C.F. McCarthy's, and Waterfall Bar & Grill seeking damages arising from the death of John O'Keefe III. The Complaint asserts claims against Defendant Karen Read for wrongful death (Count III), negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress (Counts X-XII), and reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress (Count XIII). EXHIBIT B.

Central to Plaintiffs' emotional distress claims is the allegation that Karen Read, acting through Aidan Kearney, orchestrated a coordinated public campaign to promote a false narrative surrounding John O'Keefe's death. Kearney, a blogger operating under the pseudonym "Turtleboy," served as Read's agent, mouthpiece, and primary instrumentality in disseminating this harmful content. Communications between Read and Kearney are therefore essential to proving the emotional distress claims.

On August 12, 2025, Karen Read filed a partial motion to dismiss. In ruling on said motion, the Court found the allegations sufficiently plausible to survive dismissal, stating:

> "When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death. Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had 'expired' for 'going after' the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress." EXHIBIT C.

In denying the motion to dismiss, Judge O'Shea endorsed the plausibility of the O'Keefe family's infliction-of-emotional-distress claims, finding that sufficient facts exist to support these claim. These claims remain active today and warrant full discovery.

Separate from this civil action, the Norfolk Grand Jury indicted Kearney on nine counts of witness intimidation, five counts of illegal picketing of a witness, and three counts of conspiracy

to intimidate a witness. The Norfolk District Attorney's Office has conducted criminal investigations into both Read and Kearney. Through these investigations, the NDAO obtained forensic extractions from cell phones belonging to both Read[1] and Kearney. These extractions contain the very communications between Read and Kearney that Plaintiffs require to prove their claims.

On March 31, 2025, the Court entered a Protective Order governing the sharing of Kearney's cell phone data, directing all agents of the Commonwealth to "maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant." See EXHIBIT D.

Plaintiffs have pursued every available avenue to obtain the discoverable materials in the NDAO's possession. On February 24, 2026, Plaintiffs served the NDAO with a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena seeking materials related to Kearney. On March 6, 2026, the NDAO objected, citing the Protective Order and confidentiality concerns as the primary impediments to production. See EXHIBIT E. Notably, the NDAO did not assert that the materials lack relevance or discoverability. On March 4, 2026, Plaintiffs filed a Motion to Intervene in Commonwealth v. Kearney for the limited purpose of expanding the Protective Order to permit production of these materials to Plaintiffs. That motion remains pending.

Despite these efforts, Plaintiffs still lack access to communications and materials. Kearney's complete failure to respond to the Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026, necessitates this motion.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

[1] Plaintiffs have reached an agreement with Read's counsel regarding the production and handling of the phone extraction data pertaining to Read.

Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C) authorizes a subpoena commanding a non-party to produce documents. Where a non-party fails to respond, the party serving the subpoena may move for an order compelling production. Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B). "Failure by any person without adequate excuse to obey a subpoena served upon that person may be deemed a contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued." Mass. R. Civ. P. 45.

In interpreting the scope of discovery under the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure, the Supreme Judicial Court has followed the approach taken under the federal rules, and defined "relevant" evidence "broadly to encompass any matter that bears on, or that reasonably could lead to other matter that could bear on, any issue that is or may be in the case... discovery is not limited to issues raised by the pleadings, for discovery itself is designed to help define and clarify the issues...Nor is discovery limited to the merits of a case, for a variety of fact-oriented issues may arise during litigation that are not related to the merits." Cronin v. Strayer, 392 Mass. 525, 534 (1984), quoting Oppenheimer Fund, Inc. v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 351 (1978).

As such, discovery should ordinarily be allowed under the concept of relevancy unless it is clear that the information sought can have no possible bearing upon the subject matter of the action. See E.A. Miller, Inc., v. South Shore Bank, 405 Mass. 95, 101 (1989) (holding that litigants should be afforded an opportunity for discovery where a party has “made even a minimal showing warranting the requested discovery").

III. ARGUMENT

A. The Requested Materials Are Directly Relevant And Crucial To Plaintiffs’ Emotional Distress Claims

The materials sought through the supplemental keeper of records subpoena are directly relevant to Plaintiffs’ claims. Plaintiffs’ emotional distress claims rest on Karen Read’s coordinated campaign with Aidan Kearney to promote a false narrative and pit the Read’s against the

O'Keefe's. Publicly communicating this false narrative directly resulted in frustrating justice for John O'Keefe and caused additional harm to the already grieving O'Keefe family. Karen Read's primary vehicle for disseminating this false narrative was her relationship with Aidan Kearney, who operates under the pseudonym "Turtleboy." Aidan Kearney manages various websites and social media accounts through which he publishes the inflammatory and harmful content at Karen Read's direction and active collaboration. As part of its investigation into Aidan Kearney, the Commonwealth obtained search warrants and ultimately seized multiple electronic devices including cell phones, laptops, cameras, SD cards, etc. The Plaintiffs have a good faith basis to believe that the data contained on these electronic devices will prove Plaintiffs' allegations and multiple aspects of their claims. Without relief, Plaintiffs cannot timely authenticate these materials.

B. The Plaintiffs Require These Materials Urgently In Order To Conduct Discovery In Their Civil Case

With the discovery deadline fast approaching in the civil matter, the Plaintiffs have an urgent need for these materials. Plaintiffs have noticed the deposition of Aidan Kearney and Karen Read and require communications and device extractions to effectively for and conduct that deposition. Additionally, Plaintiffs require these materials to prepare their cases. Without such materials the Plaintiffs will suffer prejudice.

IV. REQUESTED RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Honorable Court: (1) GRANT this Motion to Compel; (2) ORDER Aidan Kearney to produce all documents and materials responsive

to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena within ten (10) days of the Court's Order; and (3) GRANT such other and further relief as this Court deems just and appropriate.

35. After hitting JJ with her SUV, defendant Read fled the scene and returned to JJ's residence at 1 Meadows Ave.

36. At all relevant times, defendant Read knew that it was snowing, knew there was an impending blizzard and knew or should have known that leaving JJ outside in the blizzard would likely result in serious injury or death.

37. At all relevant times when defendant Read drove her SUV and hit JJ, defendant Read:

    a. Failed to use any care to avoid creating an unreasonable risk of harm to the public and JJ;

    b. Voluntarily took an obvious risk under the circumstances, knew or should have known that death or serious injury was reasonably predictable;

    c. Persisted in a clearly negligent course of conduct over a noticeable period of time;

    d. Was impatient with reasonable precautions;

    e. Was deliberately inattentive to the predictable hazards of her actions; and/or

f. Was deliberatively inattentive when there was a risk of great and immediate danger.

38. At all relevant times when defendant Read drove her SUV and hit JJ, defendant Read was reckless when:

a. She intended the reckless conduct that resulted in JJ's injuries/death;

b. Her conduct made it highly likely that someone, namely JJ, would suffer serious injury or die;

c. She knew or had reason to know of the risk of grave injury or death to JJ; or said risk would have been obvious to a reasonable person; and

d. She intentionally or unreasonably disregarded that risk.

e. JJ's injuries or death resulted from defendant Read's decision to engage in the conduct referenced above in 16-17, 26 and 37 a.-d.

39. On January 29, 2022, at approximately 4:30 am, defendant Read knew that she hit JJ with her SUV. Nevertheless, she woke up JJ's 14-year-old niece Kayley and talked about JJ's death, talked about hitting JJ with her SUV and otherwise involved Kayley in her frantic calls about JJ's death.

40. At all relevant times on or about January 29, 2022, defendant Read knew that Kayley was a vulnerable minor, who already lost her parents tragically and depended on her custodial uncle, JJ, who became her surrogate parent.

41. At or about 5:07 am on January 29, 2022, defendant Read left 1 Meadows Ave.

42. Between 5:18 am and 5:35 a.m., defendant Read knew JJ was seriously injured, buried in the snow and laying on the ground in front of 34 Fairview Rd., Canton, where defendant Read left JJ to die hours earlier.

46. At or about 7:50 am on January 29, 2022, JJ was pronounced dead at the Hospital.

48. On January 29, 2022, defendant Read's blood was drawn reading of 93 mg/dl.

A serum conversion and retrograde extrapolation was done of the results of defendant Read's blood, with the results showing her BAC would have been between .13% - .29% around the time she drove the SUV and hit JJ.

49. Read's BAC of .13% - .29% all exceeds the legal limit to drive a motor vehicle in Massachusetts.

50. At relevant times on or about January 29, 2022, defendant Read drove her SUV while under the influence of alcohol and hit JJ with her SUV.

51. As a direct and/or proximate cause of Read's drunk driving, JJ sustained serious injuries of body and mind, conscious pain and suffering, fear of impending death, lost earnings, medical, funeral and burial expenses, and died.

52. Notwithstanding her 5th amendment right not to speak; defendant Read chose to speak publicly. She knowingly and deliberately changed her story and fabricated a conspiracy

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER ON DEFENDANTS' PARTIAL MOTIONS TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO MASS. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6) (Paper Nos: 37, 37.3, 37.4)

This matter arises out of the January 29, 2022, death of John Joseph O'Keefe, III ("JJ").[4] Defendant and moving party, Karen Read ("Read"), was previously charged with several crimes in connection with JJ's death. During the pendency of Read's criminal case, plaintiffs Margaret O'Keefe ("Margaret," JJ's mother), John O'Keefe, II ("John," JJ's father), Paul O'Keefe ("Paul," JJ's brother and personal representative of JJ's estate), and Kayley Furbursh ("Kayley," JJ's niece) filed this civil lawsuit asserting claims against Read for Wrongful Death (Count III), Negligent and/or Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts X, XI, and XII), and Negligent, Reckless, and/or Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress (Count XIII).

The plaintiffs also asserted claims for Wrongful Death (Counts I and II), and Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, and IX) against C&C Hospitality,

LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's, G&S Hospitality, LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's (collectively, "C.F. McCarthy's") and Waterfall Bar & Grill, LTD d/b/a Waterfall Bar & Grill ("Waterfall"). These defendants are corporate entities that owned bars that allegedly served Read alcohol in the hours leading up to the events at issue.

Read filed a motion to dismiss all emotional distress claims asserted against her. C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall joined on Read's motion to dismiss, similarly seeking to dismiss the emotional distress claims asserted against them.[5] For the foregoing reasons, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to Kayley's claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

BACKGROUND

The following facts are drawn from the plaintiffs' complaint and accepted as true for purposes of this motion.[6]

On January 28, 2022, Read patronized C.F. McCarthy's from 8:51 p.m. through 10:29 p.m. She consumed seven alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Read then patronized Waterfall from 10:54 p.m. that night through 12:10 a.m. the next morning. She consumed two alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Her blood was drawn on January 29, 2022, and testing revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

[5] C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall's motions are technically motions for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12(c), as they previously filed answers to the plaintiffs' complaint. However, a "defendant's rule 12(c) motion is actually a motion to dismiss that argues that the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted" (quotations omitted). Jarosz v. Palmer, 436 Mass. 526, 529 (2002). Thus, the court will apply the same legal framework for C.F. McCarthy and Waterfall's motions as that used in assessing Read's motion to dismiss.

revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

During the timeframe relevant to the instant lawsuit, Read and JJ were in a dating relationship. JJ was with Read that evening, and they had been arguing. After leaving Waterfall, Read got into a motor vehicle with JJ and drove to a residence at 34 Fairview Road in Canton while intoxicated. After arriving at the residence, JJ exited Read's vehicle. Read then drove her vehicle and hit JJ. JJ was knocked to the ground, suffering serious injuries that ultimately led to his death.

Read fled the scene and drove to JJ's residence at 1 Meadows Avenue in Canton. At approximately 4:30 a.m. on January 29, 2022, Read woke up JJ's niece, Kayley, who lived with JJ. Read began discussing JJ's death with Kayley and talked about striking him with her vehicle. "Kayley heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Read also called multiple people between 4:30 a.m. and 5:00 a.m. on January 29, 2022, while in Kayley's presence. At the time, Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who had previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent.

Read left JJ's residence at approximately 5:07 a.m. on January 29, 2022. She arrived at 34 Fairview Road at approximately 6:03 a.m. and discovered JJ buried in snow. JJ was pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 am. "At relevant times after 7:50 am on January 29, 2022, defendant Read went to the grieving house of JJ, feigned comfort to JJ's family, and used the opportunity to, amongst other things, remove the offending weapon, her vehicle, and/or destroy relevant evidence." Complaint, paragraph 47.

Subsequently, over the course of several years, Read made many public statements. "She knowingly and deliberately changed her story and fabricated a conspiracy knowing the same to be false. She publicly communicated this false 'narrative' thereby frustrating Justice for JJ. Such false narrative caused the Plaintiffs aggravated emotional distress." Complaint, paragraph 52.

DISCUSSION

The defendants argue that the emotional distress claims should be dismissed for multiple reasons: 1) distress claims are subsumed by the wrongful death statute; 2) the plaintiffs' claimed distress was not contemporaneous with JJ allegedly being struck by Read's vehicle; 3) there was no extreme or outrageous conduct direct towards the plaintiff that resulted in severe harm; and 4) Kayley's claims for emotional distress fail as a matter of law. The court will address each of these arguments in turn.

A. Standard of Review

To survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12 (b)(6), a complaint must contain "factual 'allegations plausibly suggesting (not merely consistent with)' an entitlement to relief." Iannacchino v. Ford Motor Co., 451 Mass. 623, 636 (2008), quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 557 (2007). The factual allegations must be "more than labels and conclusions" and "raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Iannacchino, 451 Mass. at 636, quoting Bell Atl. Corp., 550 U.S. at 555. In assessing a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6), the court accepts as true the well-pleaded factual allegations in the complaint and draws all reasonable inferences in the claimant's favor. See Fairhaven Hous. Auth. v. Commonwealth, 493 Mass. 27, 30 (2023).

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

The extent of the court's review generally is limited to the factual allegations in the complaint and any facts contained in any attached exhibits. See Eigerman v. Putnam Invs., Inc., 450 Mass. 281, 285 n.6 (2007). However, the court also may consider matters of public record, items in the record of the case, and documents cited and relied upon in the complaint. Schaer v. Brandeis Univ., 432 Mass. 474, 477 (2000).

B. Wrongful Death Statute and Emotional Distress Claims

The defendants argue that the plaintiffs' emotional distress claims are subsumed by the Massachusetts wrongful death statute, G. L. c. 229, § 2. Among other provisions, the statute identifies the following as recoverable damages:

> "the fair monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to receive the damages recovered, as provided in section one, including but not limited to compensation for the loss of the reasonably expected net income, services, protection, care, assistance, society, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice of the decedent to the persons entitled to the damages recovered."

G. L. c. 229, § 2.

Thus, the wrongful death statute contemplates some degree of emotional distress arising from a decedent's death. It addresses the loss of care, assistance, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice, all of which go to the relationship between a decedent and individuals pursuing claims under the statute.

The defendants argue that the independent emotional distress claims asserted by the plaintiffs are redundant to the plaintiffs' wrongful death assertions and consequently should be dismissed. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Cimino v. Milford Keg, Inc., 385 Mass. 323 (1982), the Supreme Judicial Court ("SJC") held:

> "The defendant's . . argument that the plaintiff's claim for emotional distress is 'preempted' by the wrongful death action (G.L. c. 229, s 2) misconstrues the common law cause of action for emotional distress. Emotional distress, as the concept has evolved in this Commonwealth, is a severe psychological shock directly resulting from

> experiencing or witnessing the effects of a defendant's conduct. . . . A claim for damages based on emotional distress does not include an administrator's claim for loss of consortium-which will be present in every wrongful death action such as this. Since emotional distress is a wrong to the plaintiff distinct from that done to [the decedent] and the statutory beneficiaries of the decedent, it is not a duplicative remedy and is not 'preempted' by the wrongful death statute." (quotations omitted).

Cimino, 385 Mass. at 334.

Here, the plaintiffs' direct emotional distress claims go beyond the mere fact that JJ died. Instead, they point to the alleged wrongs they suffered in their individual capacities. They aver that they suffered such harm in observing JJ just after his death, having Read attend family events in the immediate aftermath of JJ's death, and Read developing a public and false narrative that frustrated justice for JJ. These claims are separate from JJ's death and instead are specific to the distress the plaintiffs assert in their individual capacities, rather than their status as relatives of JJ pursuant to the wrongful death statute.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding emotional distress and the wrongful death statute.

C. Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress because their alleged distress did not occur contemporaneously with the accident giving rise to JJ's death. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Stockdale v. Bird & Son, Inc., 399 Mass. 249 (1987), the SJC stated:

> "In Dziokonski v. Babineau, 375 Mass. 555, 568 (1978), we held that 'allegations concerning a parent who sustains substantial physical harm as a result of severe mental distress over some peril or harm to his minor child caused by the defendant's negligence state a claim for which relief might be granted, where the parent either witnesses the accident or soon comes on the scene while the child is still there.' Two years later, in Ferriter v. Daniel O'Connell's Sons, 381 Mass. 507, 518, we held that the wife and children of an employee allegedly injured through his employer's negligence could maintain an action for negligent infliction of emotional distress, even though they first observed the employee in a hospital immediately after the accident. We said that '[a]

Superior Court - Plymouth

> plaintiff who rushes onto the accident scene and finds a loved one injured has no greater entitlement to compensation for that shock than a plaintiff who rushes instead to the hospital. So long as the shock follows closely on the heels of the accident, the two types of injury are equally foreseeable.' Id."

Stockdale, 399 Mass. at 251.

Thus, a family member is entitled to emotional distress damages when they either witness the decedent's actual injury or "come upon the injured [kin] promptly after the injury." Nancy P. v. D'Amato, 401 Mass. 516, 520 (1988).

The plaintiffs allege that Read discovered JJ buried in the snow at approximately 6:03 a.m. on January 29, 2022, and he was subsequently pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 a.m. that day. Margaret, John, and Paul each aver that they "learned of JJ's admission to [ ] Hospital immediately and came upon JJ's body at the Hospital shortly thereafter." Complaint, paragraphs 82, 88, 95, 102, 109, 116, 123, 131, and 139. Against this backdrop, the complaint alleges sufficient facts that JJ's parents and brother arrived promptly at the hospital upon learning of JJ's death and thus have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley's negligent infliction of emotional distress claim stands on different footing, however. She alleges that she "learned of JJ's death or injury when defendant Read woke Kayley up approximately 4:30 am on January 29, 2022." Complaint, paragraph 147. Further, Kayley alleges she "heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Lastly, Kayley states that, as a result of Read's conversations in her presence, she "perceived the injuries caused to her guardian, uncle JJ, and perceived the injury producing event." Complaint, paragraph 151.

Taken together, the complaint does not allege that Kayley learned of JJ's death or injury at 4:30 a.m., but instead learned he was maybe injured at that time. There are also no averments

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth

regarding when and the circumstances under which she first observed the deceased JJ. Her averments concern her perceptions of JJ's injuries, rather than her actual observations.

The case law cited by the parties addresses scenarios whereby a family member has observed another family member actually being injured or otherwise suffering shock after promptly encountering the injured family member. Kayley cannot make this showing. In making this assessment, the court acknowledges the following case law cited in the plaintiffs' opposition:

> "the determination whether there should be liability for the injury sustained depends on a number of factors, such as where, when, and how the injury to the third person entered into the consciousness of the claimant, and what degree there was of familial or other relationship between the claimant and the third person" (emphasis in original).

Dziokonski, 375 Mass. at 568.

Such language is inapposite here, as the Dziokonski court's decision turned on liability for negligent infliction of emotional distress and the parameters for when a family member arrived at the scene of an accident giving rise to a relative's injury. Stockdale extended the scope of Dziokonski to family members who promptly arrive at a hospital. Neither of these cases, nor any other cases provided by the parties, creates authority to find negligent infliction of emotional distress for family members who learn of a death beyond this prompt timeframe. Thus, Dziokonski's language about when JJ's injury "entered into the consciousness of the claimant" does not support Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to Margaret, John, and Paul's claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress and ALLOWED as to Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

D. Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for reckless infliction of emotional distress because there was no extreme or outrageous conduct directed towards them that resulted in severe harm.[7] In the context of such claims, conduct is "extreme and outrageous" if it "goes beyond all possible bounds of decency, and is regarded as atrocious, and utterly intolerable in a civilized community" (quotations omitted). Roman v. Trustees of Tufts Coll., 461 Mass. 707, 718 (2012). The standard of extreme and outrageous conduct is a high bar. Such conduct means more than "workaday insults, annoyances, or even threats and petty oppressions . . . . It means, for example, a high order of reckless ruthlessness or deliberate malevolence that . . . is simply intolerable" (quotations omitted). Conway v. Smerling, 37 Mass. App. Ct. 1, 8 (1994).

The plaintiffs allege that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death, which caused them to suffer emotional distress. In support of their opposition to the instant motions, they have produced a search warrant affidavit, which is a matter of public record that the court may consider in assessing whether the complaint plausibly suggests an entitlement to relief.[8]

According to the search warrant materials, on January 22, 2024, Detective Lieutenant Brian Tully ("Tully") of the Massachusetts State Police applied for a warrant to seize "[a]ny

[7] With reference to the defendants' arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct, the plaintiffs' opposition frames the issue in the context of reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. In the complaint, however, Magaret, John, and Paul do not assert claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Instead, at Counts, X, XI, and XII, they assert claims against Read for negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress. Thus, in ruling upon this motion, the court does not impute an additional cause of action for Margaret, John, and Paul that is not included in the complaint. As discussed below, Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

mobile device capable of communicating and cellphones used by Karen Read."[9] He filed a return of the search warrant on January 24, 2024.

Tully submitted an affidavit in support of the search warrant application. The affidavit comprises thirty-one pages and discusses Read's communications regarding JJ's death. Briefly stated, the affidavit largely describes actions by a local blogger, Aidan Kearney, who runs a series of social media websites under the name "Turtleboy."

The affidavit states that Kearney posted articles on social media accounts that reflected personal attacks on civilian witnesses, members of their families, and their friends. The affidavit also states that throughout various postings and videos, Kearney identified several individuals who socialized with JJ and Read, stated that they, not Read, were responsible for JJ's murder, and encouraged his social media followers to contact and harass these individuals. Additionally, the affidavit references certain comments Kearney directed to the O'Keefe family:

> "How much slack are we supposed to give you [John O'Keefe's family] . . . the time period for the grief, whatever, that we are giving you, like we are not going after you because of the grief, that is expired. It's expired because you're trying to send an innocent woman to jail for the rest of her life . . . I don't feel bad for you anymore.

Plaintiffs' Opposition, Exhibit A, paragraph 39.

Per the affidavit, Read communicated with Kearney through an intermediary, Natalie Wiweke Berhsneider. Through this intermediary, Read gave Kearney information concerning her case, some of which was potentially not available to the public, which Kearney then used in his social media postings. Read also shared personal information and pictures of many civilian individuals for whom Kearney argued were responsible for JJ's death.

[9] The court acknowledges that the substance of the search warrant affidavit is highly disputed. The court's references to such affidavit are viewed through the lens of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, which requires the court to view facts and draw inferences in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death.[10] Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had "expired" for "going after" the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard, the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress.

Primarily, the defendants' motions set forth generalized legal statements for extreme and outrageous conduct. As to a substantive argument, Read cites to Polay v. McMahon, 468 Mass. 379 (2014). Polay is arguably similarly because it dealt with "(1) filing false police reports and harassment prevention petitions against the plaintiffs; (2) verbally attacking the plaintiffs; and (3) monitoring and recording the plaintiffs' home on a continuous basis." Id. at 386. The SJC in Polay held that such action did not rise to the level of extreme and outrageous conduct. The court acknowledges that Polay shares parallels as to a dispute between individuals which escalated into allegedly harassing behaviors. However, given the extensive scope of media scrutiny and Read's relationship with Kearney, as alleged in the complaint and search warrant affidavit, the facts of this case rise above those at issue in Polay because of their public and pervasive nature.

[10] In making this assessment, the court is not ruling on whether Read's "narrative" was true or false. As with its consideration of the search warrant affidavit, the court is exercising its legal authority regarding the instant motions, which is limited to applying a plausibility standard with facts and inferences viewed in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct.

E. Claims Asserted by Kayley Furbush

The defendants argue that the complaint does not assert sufficient facts that Kayley suffered emotional distress, and that it does not describe which conduct applies to which claim. As discussed above, Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress must be dismissed for failure to state a viable claim. However, consistent with Margaret's, John's, and Paul's claims, Kayley was also plausibly distressed by the public and pervasive nature of Read's alleged false narrative. The alleged facts surrounding Kayley's interactions with Read in the early morning hours on January 29, 2022, can also be plausibly characterized as extreme and outrageous. Such determination supports Kayley's claim for reckless infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. A claim for intentional infliction of emotion distress requires sufficient averments that Read "intended to inflict emotional distress or that [she] knew or should have known that emotional distress was the likely result of [her] conduct." Agis v. Howard Johnson Co., 371 Mass. 140, 144–145 (1976). With reference to the specific allegations of the complaint, Read's motion states that "Defendant's questioning what happened during a phone call with third parties, even if in Kayley Furbush's presence, is also not actionable conduct." This does not convey the full scope of what occurred during the early morning hours of January 29, 2022, in the manner alleged in the complaint. Instead, the complaint plausibly pleads that Read made multiple distressing calls about JJ's physical condition, namely being struck by Read's vehicle or

Superior Court - Plymouth

by a snowplow. Moreover, Read made these statements upon waking Kayley up at 4:30 a.m., which plausibly contributed to the distressing nature of that interaction.

Even if this court were to accept Read's position that she was merely engaging in telephone conversations, "[c]onduct otherwise reasonable may become tortious when directed at an individual known to be particularly susceptible to infliction of emotional distress." Boyle v. Wenk, 378 Mass. 592, 596 (1979). At time of this interaction, it can be inferred that Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent. Given such status, Kayley would be particularly vulnerable to distress caused by an additional loss of a parental figure. Thus, based upon Kayley's vulnerability and susceptibility, Read, at a minimum, knew or should have known that her conduct would cause Kayley to suffer emotional distress. This plausibly supports a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions to dismiss are DENIED as to their arguments regarding the sufficiency of Kayley's claims.

ORDER

Wherefore, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to their claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

Commonwealth v. Karen Read

Order on Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order

Before the Court is Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order Regarding Sharing of Cell Phone Data. After a hearing on March 28th, 2025, and a review of the submissions related thereto, the Motion is ALLOWED in part.

The Intervenor has raised significant concerns regarding confidentiality related to the Commonwealth's prosecution of Mr. Kearney in 2382-cr-00313 - specifically, his concerns over law enforcement's use and/or dissemination of data obtained by search warrant and extracted from Mr. Kearney's cell phones. The Court deems Intervenor's concerns sufficient to warrant further Court action, however, only as it pertains to data that is being produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 order in this case [Dkt. 615] , and only as it relates to the above-captioned case (2282-cr-00117). The Court acknowledges that other investigative materials or discovery beyond that covered by this Order are already the subject of the Court's prior Order [Dkt. 555] concerning counsel's obligations. And, Intervenor Kearney has also moved for an identical Protective Order in the pending case in which he is a Defendant (2382-cr-00313); that Motion is not currently before this Court.

With regard to the data extracted from Mr. Kearney's phones and produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 Order (the "DATA"), the Court ORDERS:

1. All agents of the Commonwealth, including but not limited to any members of any law enforcement agency or agent or contractor thereof, shall maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant.

2. This protective order shall take effect when entered and shall remain in effect unless terminated by entry of a Court Order.
3. Any person who violates this Order shall be in contempt of Court.

Re: Paul O'Keefe et al. v. C&C Hospitality, LLC et al., Plymouth Superior Court, Civil Action No. 2483-CV-00692

Dear Mr. Diller:

I write on behalf of the Norfolk District Attorney's Office ("NDAO") in response to the subpoena that you issued in the above-referenced action on February 25, 2026, requesting records and access to Karen Read's cell phones; records of communications, including emails by or to Karen Read and/or Aidan Kearney; and records pertaining to the prosecution of Aidan Kearney. Pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1), this letter serves as the NDAO's written objection to the subpoena.

The NDAO objects to your requests on the grounds that they are overbroad, unduly burdensome, costly, and seek information that is publicly available. See Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (c) (for good cause shown the court should protect record holders from undue burden or expense, particularly when the material is available from some other source, duplicative, unduly cumulative, and in considering the importance of the requested material in resolving the issues); Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4) (additional considerations to the burdens of producing electronically stored data). The NDAO, a non-party record holder, emphasizes the undue burden particularly where the majority of the requests are obtainable from another source, namely defendant Karen Read. See generally Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (NDAO Notices of Discovery 34, 35, 47).

The NDAO objects to producing any information that would jeopardize pending criminal investigations; whose disclosure is proscribed by law, including grand jury materials, and documents that are sealed, impounded, subject to protective orders, or would contravene court orders, including previously raised confidentiality concerns and pending criminal cases. See Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (docket entries 636, 650); Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088] (docket -00313 entries 22, 47, 61, 62, 76).[1]

Moreover, your request no. 5 and no. 12 appear to contravene the Plymouth Superior Court's March 1, 2026 order to the "Plaintiff's Emergency Moton for Temporary Restraining Order Pursuant to Rule 65 to Prevent Release of Evidence" (Gildea, J.) as well as the Plaintiff's pending request to intervene in Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088], where the issue of access to cellphones seized from Karen Read is pending a decision of the Court (Krupp, J.).

The NDAO objects to the subpoena to the extent that it calls for the production of materials that are protected by the work-product doctrine, the attorney-client privilege, or other applicable protections, privileges, or immunities against disclosure, including but not limited to internal communications and notes containing attorney work product and/or mental impressions. The NDAO further objects to searching sources of electronically stored information that are not reasonably accessible without the investment of significant time or expense. Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4).

Subject to the existing protective order of confidentiality and without waiving the foregoing objections, for your convenience the NDAO has attached the public court orders in Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] governing its decision. The NDAO is also producing a responsive motion transcript from December 17, 2024, in Kearney and a video clip of Karen Read, which was part of the video previously produced on January 9, 2026. Lastly, the NDAO has complied with request no. 10 as that material was denoted confidential and produced to the plaintiff and defendant Karen Read on January 9, 2026. The NDAO reserves all rights, including the right to recover its reasonable expenses in responding to the subpoena.

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO COMPEL RESPONSES TO PLAINTIFFS' SUPPLEMENTAL KEEPER OF RECORDS SUBPOENA FROM AIDAN KEARNEY

NOW COME the Plaintiffs in the above-captioned matter, and respectfully request that this Honorable Court, pursuant to Rule 45 of the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure and other relevant rules governing discovery, issue an order compelling Aidan Kearney to provide responses and documents to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026. As of the date of service, Plaintiffs have yet to receive responses, objections, or any request for extension from Kearney.

I. RELEVANT BACKGROUND

On April 21, 2026, Plaintiffs served a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena on Aidan Kearney. Responses were due by April 30, 2026. EXHIBIT A. To date, Kearney has made no effort to respond, object, or request an extension. This Subpoena is directly tied to Plaintiffs'

underlying civil action filed on August 23, 2024, against Defendants Karen Read, C.F. McCarthy's, and Waterfall Bar & Grill seeking damages arising from the death of John O'Keefe III. The Complaint asserts claims against Defendant Karen Read for wrongful death (Count III), negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress (Counts X-XII), and reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress (Count XIII). EXHIBIT B.

Central to Plaintiffs' emotional distress claims is the allegation that Karen Read, acting through Aidan Kearney, orchestrated a coordinated public campaign to promote a false narrative surrounding John O'Keefe's death. Kearney, a blogger operating under the pseudonym "Turtleboy," served as Read's agent, mouthpiece, and primary instrumentality in disseminating this harmful content. Communications between Read and Kearney are therefore essential to proving the emotional distress claims.

On August 12, 2025, Karen Read filed a partial motion to dismiss. In ruling on said motion, the Court found the allegations sufficiently plausible to survive dismissal, stating:

> "When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death. Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had 'expired' for 'going after' the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress." EXHIBIT C.

In denying the motion to dismiss, Judge O'Shea endorsed the plausibility of the O'Keefe family's infliction-of-emotional-distress claims, finding that sufficient facts exist to support these claim. These claims remain active today and warrant full discovery.

Separate from this civil action, the Norfolk Grand Jury indicted Kearney on nine counts of witness intimidation, five counts of illegal picketing of a witness, and three counts of conspiracy

to intimidate a witness. The Norfolk District Attorney's Office has conducted criminal investigations into both Read and Kearney. Through these investigations, the NDAO obtained forensic extractions from cell phones belonging to both Read[1] and Kearney. These extractions contain the very communications between Read and Kearney that Plaintiffs require to prove their claims.

On March 31, 2025, the Court entered a Protective Order governing the sharing of Kearney's cell phone data, directing all agents of the Commonwealth to "maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant." See EXHIBIT D.

Plaintiffs have pursued every available avenue to obtain the discoverable materials in the NDAO's possession. On February 24, 2026, Plaintiffs served the NDAO with a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena seeking materials related to Kearney. On March 6, 2026, the NDAO objected, citing the Protective Order and confidentiality concerns as the primary impediments to production. See EXHIBIT E. Notably, the NDAO did not assert that the materials lack relevance or discoverability. On March 4, 2026, Plaintiffs filed a Motion to Intervene in Commonwealth v. Kearney for the limited purpose of expanding the Protective Order to permit production of these materials to Plaintiffs. That motion remains pending.

Despite these efforts, Plaintiffs still lack access to communications and materials. Kearney's complete failure to respond to the Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026, necessitates this motion.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

[1] Plaintiffs have reached an agreement with Read's counsel regarding the production and handling of the phone extraction data pertaining to Read.

Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C) authorizes a subpoena commanding a non-party to produce documents. Where a non-party fails to respond, the party serving the subpoena may move for an order compelling production. Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B). "Failure by any person without adequate excuse to obey a subpoena served upon that person may be deemed a contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued." Mass. R. Civ. P. 45.

In interpreting the scope of discovery under the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure, the Supreme Judicial Court has followed the approach taken under the federal rules, and defined "relevant" evidence "broadly to encompass any matter that bears on, or that reasonably could lead to other matter that could bear on, any issue that is or may be in the case... discovery is not limited to issues raised by the pleadings, for discovery itself is designed to help define and clarify the issues...Nor is discovery limited to the merits of a case, for a variety of fact-oriented issues may arise during litigation that are not related to the merits." Cronin v. Strayer, 392 Mass. 525, 534 (1984), quoting Oppenheimer Fund, Inc. v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 351 (1978).

As such, discovery should ordinarily be allowed under the concept of relevancy unless it is clear that the information sought can have no possible bearing upon the subject matter of the action. See E.A. Miller, Inc., v. South Shore Bank, 405 Mass. 95, 101 (1989) (holding that litigants should be afforded an opportunity for discovery where a party has “made even a minimal showing warranting the requested discovery").

III. ARGUMENT

A. The Requested Materials Are Directly Relevant And Crucial To Plaintiffs’ Emotional Distress Claims

The materials sought through the supplemental keeper of records subpoena are directly relevant to Plaintiffs’ claims. Plaintiffs’ emotional distress claims rest on Karen Read’s coordinated campaign with Aidan Kearney to promote a false narrative and pit the Read’s against the

O'Keefe's. Publicly communicating this false narrative directly resulted in frustrating justice for John O'Keefe and caused additional harm to the already grieving O'Keefe family. Karen Read's primary vehicle for disseminating this false narrative was her relationship with Aidan Kearney, who operates under the pseudonym "Turtleboy." Aidan Kearney manages various websites and social media accounts through which he publishes the inflammatory and harmful content at Karen Read's direction and active collaboration. As part of its investigation into Aidan Kearney, the Commonwealth obtained search warrants and ultimately seized multiple electronic devices including cell phones, laptops, cameras, SD cards, etc. The Plaintiffs have a good faith basis to believe that the data contained on these electronic devices will prove Plaintiffs' allegations and multiple aspects of their claims. Without relief, Plaintiffs cannot timely authenticate these materials.

B. The Plaintiffs Require These Materials Urgently In Order To Conduct Discovery In Their Civil Case

With the discovery deadline fast approaching in the civil matter, the Plaintiffs have an urgent need for these materials. Plaintiffs have noticed the deposition of Aidan Kearney and Karen Read and require communications and device extractions to effectively for and conduct that deposition. Additionally, Plaintiffs require these materials to prepare their cases. Without such materials the Plaintiffs will suffer prejudice.

IV. REQUESTED RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Honorable Court: (1) GRANT this Motion to Compel; (2) ORDER Aidan Kearney to produce all documents and materials responsive

to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena within ten (10) days of the Court's Order; and (3) GRANT such other and further relief as this Court deems just and appropriate.

Kayley Furbush v. Karen Read – Negligent, Reckless and/or Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

145. The Plaintiff repeats, re-alleges, and incorporates by reference as set forth hereto in their entirety, prior paragraphs of the Complaint.

146. At all relevant times, Kayley was the niece of JJ. JJ was her guardian since her parents passed away.

157. The emotional distress suffered by Kayley was severe and of a nature that no reasonable person could be expected to endure it.

158. Defendant's extreme and outrageous conduct caused Kayley aggravated emotional distress manifesting in physical symptoms.

159. Kayley also suffered severe and profound emotional injuries as the result of perceiving JJ JJ's death and/or the injurious producing event, the consequences of Read's negligence.

v.

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER ON DEFENDANTS' PARTIAL MOTIONS TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO MASS. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6) (Paper Nos: 37, 37.3, 37.4)

This matter arises out of the January 29, 2022, death of John Joseph O'Keefe, III ("JJ").[4] Defendant and moving party, Karen Read ("Read"), was previously charged with several crimes in connection with JJ's death. During the pendency of Read's criminal case, plaintiffs Margaret O'Keefe ("Margaret," JJ's mother), John O'Keefe, II ("John," JJ's father), Paul O'Keefe ("Paul," JJ's brother and personal representative of JJ's estate), and Kayley Furbursh ("Kayley," JJ's niece) filed this civil lawsuit asserting claims against Read for Wrongful Death (Count III), Negligent and/or Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts X, XI, and XII), and Negligent, Reckless, and/or Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress (Count XIII).

The plaintiffs also asserted claims for Wrongful Death (Counts I and II), and Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, and IX) against C&C Hospitality,

LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's, G&S Hospitality, LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's (collectively, "C.F. McCarthy's") and Waterfall Bar & Grill, LTD d/b/a Waterfall Bar & Grill ("Waterfall"). These defendants are corporate entities that owned bars that allegedly served Read alcohol in the hours leading up to the events at issue.

Read filed a motion to dismiss all emotional distress claims asserted against her. C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall joined on Read's motion to dismiss, similarly seeking to dismiss the emotional distress claims asserted against them.[5] For the foregoing reasons, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to Kayley's claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

BACKGROUND

The following facts are drawn from the plaintiffs' complaint and accepted as true for purposes of this motion.[6]

On January 28, 2022, Read patronized C.F. McCarthy's from 8:51 p.m. through 10:29 p.m. She consumed seven alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Read then patronized Waterfall from 10:54 p.m. that night through 12:10 a.m. the next morning. She consumed two alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Her blood was drawn on January 29, 2022, and testing revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

[5] C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall's motions are technically motions for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12(c), as they previously filed answers to the plaintiffs' complaint. However, a "defendant's rule 12(c) motion is actually a motion to dismiss that argues that the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted" (quotations omitted). Jarosz v. Palmer, 436 Mass. 526, 529 (2002). Thus, the court will apply the same legal framework for C.F. McCarthy and Waterfall's motions as that used in assessing Read's motion to dismiss.

revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

During the timeframe relevant to the instant lawsuit, Read and JJ were in a dating relationship. JJ was with Read that evening, and they had been arguing. After leaving Waterfall, Read got into a motor vehicle with JJ and drove to a residence at 34 Fairview Road in Canton while intoxicated. After arriving at the residence, JJ exited Read's vehicle. Read then drove her vehicle and hit JJ. JJ was knocked to the ground, suffering serious injuries that ultimately led to his death.

Read fled the scene and drove to JJ's residence at 1 Meadows Avenue in Canton. At approximately 4:30 a.m. on January 29, 2022, Read woke up JJ's niece, Kayley, who lived with JJ. Read began discussing JJ's death with Kayley and talked about striking him with her vehicle. "Kayley heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Read also called multiple people between 4:30 a.m. and 5:00 a.m. on January 29, 2022, while in Kayley's presence. At the time, Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who had previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent.

Read left JJ's residence at approximately 5:07 a.m. on January 29, 2022. She arrived at 34 Fairview Road at approximately 6:03 a.m. and discovered JJ buried in snow. JJ was pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 am. "At relevant times after 7:50 am on January 29, 2022, defendant Read went to the grieving house of JJ, feigned comfort to JJ's family, and used the opportunity to, amongst other things, remove the offending weapon, her vehicle, and/or destroy relevant evidence." Complaint, paragraph 47.

Docket Number 2483CV00692

Subsequently, over the course of several years, Read made many public statements. "She knowingly and deliberately changed her story and fabricated a conspiracy knowing the same to be false. She publicly communicated this false 'narrative' thereby frustrating Justice for JJ. Such false narrative caused the Plaintiffs aggravated emotional distress." Complaint, paragraph 52.

DISCUSSION

The defendants argue that the emotional distress claims should be dismissed for multiple reasons: 1) distress claims are subsumed by the wrongful death statute; 2) the plaintiffs' claimed distress was not contemporaneous with JJ allegedly being struck by Read's vehicle; 3) there was no extreme or outrageous conduct direct towards the plaintiff that resulted in severe harm; and 4) Kayley's claims for emotional distress fail as a matter of law. The court will address each of these arguments in turn.

A. Standard of Review

To survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12 (b)(6), a complaint must contain "factual 'allegations plausibly suggesting (not merely consistent with)' an entitlement to relief." Iannacchino v. Ford Motor Co., 451 Mass. 623, 636 (2008), quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 557 (2007). The factual allegations must be "more than labels and conclusions" and "raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Iannacchino, 451 Mass. at 636, quoting Bell Atl. Corp., 550 U.S. at 555. In assessing a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6), the court accepts as true the well-pleaded factual allegations in the complaint and draws all reasonable inferences in the claimant's favor. See Fairhaven Hous. Auth. v. Commonwealth, 493 Mass. 27, 30 (2023).

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

The extent of the court's review generally is limited to the factual allegations in the complaint and any facts contained in any attached exhibits. See Eigerman v. Putnam Invs., Inc., 450 Mass. 281, 285 n.6 (2007). However, the court also may consider matters of public record, items in the record of the case, and documents cited and relied upon in the complaint. Schaer v. Brandeis Univ., 432 Mass. 474, 477 (2000).

B. Wrongful Death Statute and Emotional Distress Claims

The defendants argue that the plaintiffs' emotional distress claims are subsumed by the Massachusetts wrongful death statute, G. L. c. 229, § 2. Among other provisions, the statute identifies the following as recoverable damages:

> "the fair monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to receive the damages recovered, as provided in section one, including but not limited to compensation for the loss of the reasonably expected net income, services, protection, care, assistance, society, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice of the decedent to the persons entitled to the damages recovered."

G. L. c. 229, § 2.

Thus, the wrongful death statute contemplates some degree of emotional distress arising from a decedent's death. It addresses the loss of care, assistance, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice, all of which go to the relationship between a decedent and individuals pursuing claims under the statute.

The defendants argue that the independent emotional distress claims asserted by the plaintiffs are redundant to the plaintiffs' wrongful death assertions and consequently should be dismissed. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Cimino v. Milford Keg, Inc., 385 Mass. 323 (1982), the Supreme Judicial Court ("SJC") held:

> "The defendant's . . argument that the plaintiff's claim for emotional distress is 'preempted' by the wrongful death action (G.L. c. 229, s 2) misconstrues the common law cause of action for emotional distress. Emotional distress, as the concept has evolved in this Commonwealth, is a severe psychological shock directly resulting from

> experiencing or witnessing the effects of a defendant's conduct. . . . A claim for damages based on emotional distress does not include an administrator's claim for loss of consortium-which will be present in every wrongful death action such as this. Since emotional distress is a wrong to the plaintiff distinct from that done to [the decedent] and the statutory beneficiaries of the decedent, it is not a duplicative remedy and is not 'preempted' by the wrongful death statute." (quotations omitted).

Cimino, 385 Mass. at 334.

Here, the plaintiffs' direct emotional distress claims go beyond the mere fact that JJ died. Instead, they point to the alleged wrongs they suffered in their individual capacities. They aver that they suffered such harm in observing JJ just after his death, having Read attend family events in the immediate aftermath of JJ's death, and Read developing a public and false narrative that frustrated justice for JJ. These claims are separate from JJ's death and instead are specific to the distress the plaintiffs assert in their individual capacities, rather than their status as relatives of JJ pursuant to the wrongful death statute.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding emotional distress and the wrongful death statute.

C. Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress because their alleged distress did not occur contemporaneously with the accident giving rise to JJ's death. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Stockdale v. Bird & Son, Inc., 399 Mass. 249 (1987), the SJC stated:

> "In Dziokonski v. Babineau, 375 Mass. 555, 568 (1978), we held that 'allegations concerning a parent who sustains substantial physical harm as a result of severe mental distress over some peril or harm to his minor child caused by the defendant's negligence state a claim for which relief might be granted, where the parent either witnesses the accident or soon comes on the scene while the child is still there.' Two years later, in Ferriter v. Daniel O'Connell's Sons, 381 Mass. 507, 518, we held that the wife and children of an employee allegedly injured through his employer's negligence could maintain an action for negligent infliction of emotional distress, even though they first observed the employee in a hospital immediately after the accident. We said that '[a]

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

> plaintiff who rushes onto the accident scene and finds a loved one injured has no greater entitlement to compensation for that shock than a plaintiff who rushes instead to the hospital. So long as the shock follows closely on the heels of the accident, the two types of injury are equally foreseeable.' Id."

Stockdale, 399 Mass. at 251.

Thus, a family member is entitled to emotional distress damages when they either witness the decedent's actual injury or "come upon the injured [kin] promptly after the injury." Nancy P. v. D'Amato, 401 Mass. 516, 520 (1988).

The plaintiffs allege that Read discovered JJ buried in the snow at approximately 6:03 a.m. on January 29, 2022, and he was subsequently pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 a.m. that day. Margaret, John, and Paul each aver that they "learned of JJ's admission to [ ] Hospital immediately and came upon JJ's body at the Hospital shortly thereafter." Complaint, paragraphs 82, 88, 95, 102, 109, 116, 123, 131, and 139. Against this backdrop, the complaint alleges sufficient facts that JJ's parents and brother arrived promptly at the hospital upon learning of JJ's death and thus have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley's negligent infliction of emotional distress claim stands on different footing, however. She alleges that she "learned of JJ's death or injury when defendant Read woke Kayley up approximately 4:30 am on January 29, 2022." Complaint, paragraph 147. Further, Kayley alleges she "heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Lastly, Kayley states that, as a result of Read's conversations in her presence, she "perceived the injuries caused to her guardian, uncle JJ, and perceived the injury producing event." Complaint, paragraph 151.

Taken together, the complaint does not allege that Kayley learned of JJ's death or injury at 4:30 a.m., but instead learned he was maybe injured at that time. There are also no averments

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth

regarding when and the circumstances under which she first observed the deceased JJ. Her averments concern her perceptions of JJ's injuries, rather than her actual observations.

The case law cited by the parties addresses scenarios whereby a family member has observed another family member actually being injured or otherwise suffering shock after promptly encountering the injured family member. Kayley cannot make this showing. In making this assessment, the court acknowledges the following case law cited in the plaintiffs' opposition:

> "the determination whether there should be liability for the injury sustained depends on a number of factors, such as where, when, and how the injury to the third person entered into the consciousness of the claimant, and what degree there was of familial or other relationship between the claimant and the third person" (emphasis in original).

Dziokonski, 375 Mass. at 568.

Such language is inapposite here, as the Dziokonski court's decision turned on liability for negligent infliction of emotional distress and the parameters for when a family member arrived at the scene of an accident giving rise to a relative's injury. Stockdale extended the scope of Dziokonski to family members who promptly arrive at a hospital. Neither of these cases, nor any other cases provided by the parties, creates authority to find negligent infliction of emotional distress for family members who learn of a death beyond this prompt timeframe. Thus, Dziokonski's language about when JJ's injury "entered into the consciousness of the claimant" does not support Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to Margaret, John, and Paul's claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress and ALLOWED as to Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

D. Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for reckless infliction of emotional distress because there was no extreme or outrageous conduct directed towards them that resulted in severe harm.[7] In the context of such claims, conduct is "extreme and outrageous" if it "goes beyond all possible bounds of decency, and is regarded as atrocious, and utterly intolerable in a civilized community" (quotations omitted). Roman v. Trustees of Tufts Coll., 461 Mass. 707, 718 (2012). The standard of extreme and outrageous conduct is a high bar. Such conduct means more than "workaday insults, annoyances, or even threats and petty oppressions . . . . It means, for example, a high order of reckless ruthlessness or deliberate malevolence that . . . is simply intolerable" (quotations omitted). Conway v. Smerling, 37 Mass. App. Ct. 1, 8 (1994).

The plaintiffs allege that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death, which caused them to suffer emotional distress. In support of their opposition to the instant motions, they have produced a search warrant affidavit, which is a matter of public record that the court may consider in assessing whether the complaint plausibly suggests an entitlement to relief.[8]

According to the search warrant materials, on January 22, 2024, Detective Lieutenant Brian Tully ("Tully") of the Massachusetts State Police applied for a warrant to seize "[a]ny

[7] With reference to the defendants' arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct, the plaintiffs' opposition frames the issue in the context of reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. In the complaint, however, Magaret, John, and Paul do not assert claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Instead, at Counts, X, XI, and XII, they assert claims against Read for negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress. Thus, in ruling upon this motion, the court does not impute an additional cause of action for Margaret, John, and Paul that is not included in the complaint. As discussed below, Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

mobile device capable of communicating and cellphones used by Karen Read."[9] He filed a return of the search warrant on January 24, 2024.

Tully submitted an affidavit in support of the search warrant application. The affidavit comprises thirty-one pages and discusses Read's communications regarding JJ's death. Briefly stated, the affidavit largely describes actions by a local blogger, Aidan Kearney, who runs a series of social media websites under the name "Turtleboy."

The affidavit states that Kearney posted articles on social media accounts that reflected personal attacks on civilian witnesses, members of their families, and their friends. The affidavit also states that throughout various postings and videos, Kearney identified several individuals who socialized with JJ and Read, stated that they, not Read, were responsible for JJ's murder, and encouraged his social media followers to contact and harass these individuals. Additionally, the affidavit references certain comments Kearney directed to the O'Keefe family:

> "How much slack are we supposed to give you [John O'Keefe's family] . . . the time period for the grief, whatever, that we are giving you, like we are not going after you because of the grief, that is expired. It's expired because you're trying to send an innocent woman to jail for the rest of her life . . . I don't feel bad for you anymore.

Plaintiffs' Opposition, Exhibit A, paragraph 39.

Per the affidavit, Read communicated with Kearney through an intermediary, Natalie Wiweke Berhsneider. Through this intermediary, Read gave Kearney information concerning her case, some of which was potentially not available to the public, which Kearney then used in his social media postings. Read also shared personal information and pictures of many civilian individuals for whom Kearney argued were responsible for JJ's death.

[9] The court acknowledges that the substance of the search warrant affidavit is highly disputed. The court's references to such affidavit are viewed through the lens of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, which requires the court to view facts and draw inferences in the plaintiffs' favor.

Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death.[10] Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had "expired" for "going after" the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard, the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress.

Primarily, the defendants' motions set forth generalized legal statements for extreme and outrageous conduct. As to a substantive argument, Read cites to Polay v. McMahon, 468 Mass. 379 (2014). Polay is arguably similarly because it dealt with "(1) filing false police reports and harassment prevention petitions against the plaintiffs; (2) verbally attacking the plaintiffs; and (3) monitoring and recording the plaintiffs' home on a continuous basis." Id. at 386. The SJC in Polay held that such action did not rise to the level of extreme and outrageous conduct. The court acknowledges that Polay shares parallels as to a dispute between individuals which escalated into allegedly harassing behaviors. However, given the extensive scope of media scrutiny and Read's relationship with Kearney, as alleged in the complaint and search warrant affidavit, the facts of this case rise above those at issue in Polay because of their public and pervasive nature.

[10] In making this assessment, the court is not ruling on whether Read's "narrative" was true or false. As with its consideration of the search warrant affidavit, the court is exercising its legal authority regarding the instant motions, which is limited to applying a plausibility standard with facts and inferences viewed in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct.

E. Claims Asserted by Kayley Furbush

The defendants argue that the complaint does not assert sufficient facts that Kayley suffered emotional distress, and that it does not describe which conduct applies to which claim. As discussed above, Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress must be dismissed for failure to state a viable claim. However, consistent with Margaret's, John's, and Paul's claims, Kayley was also plausibly distressed by the public and pervasive nature of Read's alleged false narrative. The alleged facts surrounding Kayley's interactions with Read in the early morning hours on January 29, 2022, can also be plausibly characterized as extreme and outrageous. Such determination supports Kayley's claim for reckless infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. A claim for intentional infliction of emotion distress requires sufficient averments that Read "intended to inflict emotional distress or that [she] knew or should have known that emotional distress was the likely result of [her] conduct." Agis v. Howard Johnson Co., 371 Mass. 140, 144–145 (1976). With reference to the specific allegations of the complaint, Read's motion states that "Defendant's questioning what happened during a phone call with third parties, even if in Kayley Furbush's presence, is also not actionable conduct." This does not convey the full scope of what occurred during the early morning hours of January 29, 2022, in the manner alleged in the complaint. Instead, the complaint plausibly pleads that Read made multiple distressing calls about JJ's physical condition, namely being struck by Read's vehicle or

Superior Court - Plymouth

by a snowplow. Moreover, Read made these statements upon waking Kayley up at 4:30 a.m., which plausibly contributed to the distressing nature of that interaction.

Even if this court were to accept Read's position that she was merely engaging in telephone conversations, "[c]onduct otherwise reasonable may become tortious when directed at an individual known to be particularly susceptible to infliction of emotional distress." Boyle v. Wenk, 378 Mass. 592, 596 (1979). At time of this interaction, it can be inferred that Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent. Given such status, Kayley would be particularly vulnerable to distress caused by an additional loss of a parental figure. Thus, based upon Kayley's vulnerability and susceptibility, Read, at a minimum, knew or should have known that her conduct would cause Kayley to suffer emotional distress. This plausibly supports a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions to dismiss are DENIED as to their arguments regarding the sufficiency of Kayley's claims.

ORDER

Wherefore, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to their claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

NORFOLK, ss. SUPERIOR COURT

Order on Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order

Before the Court is Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order Regarding Sharing of Cell Phone Data. After a hearing on March 28th, 2025, and a review of the submissions related thereto, the Motion is ALLOWED in part.

The Intervenor has raised significant concerns regarding confidentiality related to the Commonwealth's prosecution of Mr. Kearney in 2382-cr-00313 - specifically, his concerns over law enforcement's use and/or dissemination of data obtained by search warrant and extracted from Mr. Kearney's cell phones. The Court deems Intervenor's concerns sufficient to warrant further Court action, however, only as it pertains to data that is being produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 order in this case [Dkt. 615] , and only as it relates to the above-captioned case (2282-cr-00117). The Court acknowledges that other investigative materials or discovery beyond that covered by this Order are already the subject of the Court's prior Order [Dkt. 555] concerning counsel's obligations. And, Intervenor Kearney has also moved for an identical Protective Order in the pending case in which he is a Defendant (2382-cr-00313); that Motion is not currently before this Court.

With regard to the data extracted from Mr. Kearney's phones and produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 Order (the "DATA"), the Court ORDERS:

1. All agents of the Commonwealth, including but not limited to any members of any law enforcement agency or agent or contractor thereof, shall maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant.

2. This protective order shall take effect when entered and shall remain in effect unless terminated by entry of a Court Order.
3. Any person who violates this Order shall be in contempt of Court.

SO ORDERED this 31st day of March 2025.

Re: Paul O'Keefe et al. v. C&C Hospitality, LLC et al., Plymouth Superior Court, Civil Action No. 2483-CV-00692

Dear Mr. Diller:

I write on behalf of the Norfolk District Attorney's Office ("NDAO") in response to the subpoena that you issued in the above-referenced action on February 25, 2026, requesting records and access to Karen Read's cell phones; records of communications, including emails by or to Karen Read and/or Aidan Kearney; and records pertaining to the prosecution of Aidan Kearney. Pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1), this letter serves as the NDAO's written objection to the subpoena.

The NDAO objects to your requests on the grounds that they are overbroad, unduly burdensome, costly, and seek information that is publicly available. See Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (c) (for good cause shown the court should protect record holders from undue burden or expense, particularly when the material is available from some other source, duplicative, unduly cumulative, and in considering the importance of the requested material in resolving the issues); Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4) (additional considerations to the burdens of producing electronically stored data). The NDAO, a non-party record holder, emphasizes the undue burden particularly where the majority of the requests are obtainable from another source, namely defendant Karen Read. See generally Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (NDAO Notices of Discovery 34, 35, 47).

The NDAO objects to producing any information that would jeopardize pending criminal investigations; whose disclosure is proscribed by law, including grand jury materials, and documents that are sealed, impounded, subject to protective orders, or would contravene court orders, including previously raised confidentiality concerns and pending criminal cases. See Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (docket entries 636, 650); Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088] (docket -00313 entries 22, 47, 61, 62, 76).[1]

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Moreover, your request no. 5 and no. 12 appear to contravene the Plymouth Superior Court's March 1, 2026 order to the "Plaintiff's Emergency Moton for Temporary Restraining Order Pursuant to Rule 65 to Prevent Release of Evidence" (Gildea, J.) as well as the Plaintiff's pending request to intervene in Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088], where the issue of access to cellphones seized from Karen Read is pending a decision of the Court (Krupp, J.).

The NDAO objects to the subpoena to the extent that it calls for the production of materials that are protected by the work-product doctrine, the attorney-client privilege, or other applicable protections, privileges, or immunities against disclosure, including but not limited to internal communications and notes containing attorney work product and/or mental impressions. The NDAO further objects to searching sources of electronically stored information that are not reasonably accessible without the investment of significant time or expense. Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4).

Sincerely,

/s/ Laura A. McLaughlin

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO COMPEL RESPONSES TO PLAINTIFFS' SUPPLEMENTAL KEEPER OF RECORDS SUBPOENA FROM AIDAN KEARNEY

NOW COME the Plaintiffs in the above-captioned matter, and respectfully request that this Honorable Court, pursuant to Rule 45 of the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure and other relevant rules governing discovery, issue an order compelling Aidan Kearney to provide responses and documents to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026. As of the date of service, Plaintiffs have yet to receive responses, objections, or any request for extension from Kearney.

I. RELEVANT BACKGROUND

On April 21, 2026, Plaintiffs served a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena on Aidan Kearney. Responses were due by April 30, 2026. EXHIBIT A. To date, Kearney has made no effort to respond, object, or request an extension. This Subpoena is directly tied to Plaintiffs'

underlying civil action filed on August 23, 2024, against Defendants Karen Read, C.F. McCarthy's, and Waterfall Bar & Grill seeking damages arising from the death of John O'Keefe III. The Complaint asserts claims against Defendant Karen Read for wrongful death (Count III), negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress (Counts X-XII), and reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress (Count XIII). EXHIBIT B.

Central to Plaintiffs' emotional distress claims is the allegation that Karen Read, acting through Aidan Kearney, orchestrated a coordinated public campaign to promote a false narrative surrounding John O'Keefe's death. Kearney, a blogger operating under the pseudonym "Turtleboy," served as Read's agent, mouthpiece, and primary instrumentality in disseminating this harmful content. Communications between Read and Kearney are therefore essential to proving the emotional distress claims.

On August 12, 2025, Karen Read filed a partial motion to dismiss. In ruling on said motion, the Court found the allegations sufficiently plausible to survive dismissal, stating:

> "When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death. Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had 'expired' for 'going after' the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress." EXHIBIT C.

In denying the motion to dismiss, Judge O'Shea endorsed the plausibility of the O'Keefe family's infliction-of-emotional-distress claims, finding that sufficient facts exist to support these claim. These claims remain active today and warrant full discovery.

Separate from this civil action, the Norfolk Grand Jury indicted Kearney on nine counts of witness intimidation, five counts of illegal picketing of a witness, and three counts of conspiracy

to intimidate a witness. The Norfolk District Attorney's Office has conducted criminal investigations into both Read and Kearney. Through these investigations, the NDAO obtained forensic extractions from cell phones belonging to both Read[1] and Kearney. These extractions contain the very communications between Read and Kearney that Plaintiffs require to prove their claims.

On March 31, 2025, the Court entered a Protective Order governing the sharing of Kearney's cell phone data, directing all agents of the Commonwealth to "maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant." See EXHIBIT D.

Plaintiffs have pursued every available avenue to obtain the discoverable materials in the NDAO's possession. On February 24, 2026, Plaintiffs served the NDAO with a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena seeking materials related to Kearney. On March 6, 2026, the NDAO objected, citing the Protective Order and confidentiality concerns as the primary impediments to production. See EXHIBIT E. Notably, the NDAO did not assert that the materials lack relevance or discoverability. On March 4, 2026, Plaintiffs filed a Motion to Intervene in Commonwealth v. Kearney for the limited purpose of expanding the Protective Order to permit production of these materials to Plaintiffs. That motion remains pending.

Despite these efforts, Plaintiffs still lack access to communications and materials. Kearney's complete failure to respond to the Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026, necessitates this motion.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

[1] Plaintiffs have reached an agreement with Read's counsel regarding the production and handling of the phone extraction data pertaining to Read.

Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C) authorizes a subpoena commanding a non-party to produce documents. Where a non-party fails to respond, the party serving the subpoena may move for an order compelling production. Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B). "Failure by any person without adequate excuse to obey a subpoena served upon that person may be deemed a contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued." Mass. R. Civ. P. 45.

In interpreting the scope of discovery under the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure, the Supreme Judicial Court has followed the approach taken under the federal rules, and defined "relevant" evidence "broadly to encompass any matter that bears on, or that reasonably could lead to other matter that could bear on, any issue that is or may be in the case... discovery is not limited to issues raised by the pleadings, for discovery itself is designed to help define and clarify the issues...Nor is discovery limited to the merits of a case, for a variety of fact-oriented issues may arise during litigation that are not related to the merits." Cronin v. Strayer, 392 Mass. 525, 534 (1984), quoting Oppenheimer Fund, Inc. v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 351 (1978).

As such, discovery should ordinarily be allowed under the concept of relevancy unless it is clear that the information sought can have no possible bearing upon the subject matter of the action. See E.A. Miller, Inc., v. South Shore Bank, 405 Mass. 95, 101 (1989) (holding that litigants should be afforded an opportunity for discovery where a party has “made even a minimal showing warranting the requested discovery").

III. ARGUMENT

A. The Requested Materials Are Directly Relevant And Crucial To Plaintiffs’ Emotional Distress Claims

The materials sought through the supplemental keeper of records subpoena are directly relevant to Plaintiffs’ claims. Plaintiffs’ emotional distress claims rest on Karen Read’s coordinated campaign with Aidan Kearney to promote a false narrative and pit the Read’s against the

O'Keefe's. Publicly communicating this false narrative directly resulted in frustrating justice for John O'Keefe and caused additional harm to the already grieving O'Keefe family. Karen Read's primary vehicle for disseminating this false narrative was her relationship with Aidan Kearney, who operates under the pseudonym "Turtleboy." Aidan Kearney manages various websites and social media accounts through which he publishes the inflammatory and harmful content at Karen Read's direction and active collaboration. As part of its investigation into Aidan Kearney, the Commonwealth obtained search warrants and ultimately seized multiple electronic devices including cell phones, laptops, cameras, SD cards, etc. The Plaintiffs have a good faith basis to believe that the data contained on these electronic devices will prove Plaintiffs' allegations and multiple aspects of their claims. Without relief, Plaintiffs cannot timely authenticate these materials.

B. The Plaintiffs Require These Materials Urgently In Order To Conduct Discovery In Their Civil Case

With the discovery deadline fast approaching in the civil matter, the Plaintiffs have an urgent need for these materials. Plaintiffs have noticed the deposition of Aidan Kearney and Karen Read and require communications and device extractions to effectively for and conduct that deposition. Additionally, Plaintiffs require these materials to prepare their cases. Without such materials the Plaintiffs will suffer prejudice.

IV. REQUESTED RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Honorable Court: (1) GRANT this Motion to Compel; (2) ORDER Aidan Kearney to produce all documents and materials responsive

to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena within ten (10) days of the Court's Order; and (3) GRANT such other and further relief as this Court deems just and appropriate.

c. She knew or had reason to know of the risk of grave injury or death to JJ; or said risk would have been obvious to a reasonable person; and

d. She intentionally or unreasonably disregarded that risk.

e. JJ's injuries or death resulted from defendant Read's decision to engage in the conduct referenced above in 16-17, 26 and 37 a.-d.

39. On January 29, 2022, at approximately 4:30 am, defendant Read knew that she hit JJ with her SUV. Nevertheless, she woke up JJ's 14-year-old niece Kayley and talked about JJ's death, talked about hitting JJ with her SUV and otherwise involved Kayley in her frantic calls about JJ's death.

40. At all relevant times on or about January 29, 2022, defendant Read knew that Kayley was a vulnerable minor, who already lost her parents tragically and depended on her custodial uncle, JJ, who became her surrogate parent.

41. At or about 5:07 am on January 29, 2022, defendant Read left 1 Meadows Ave.

42. Between 5:18 am and 5:35 a.m., defendant Read knew JJ was seriously injured, buried in the snow and laying on the ground in front of 34 Fairview Rd., Canton, where defendant Read left JJ to die hours earlier.

43. On January 29, 2022, defendant Read admitted repeatedly that she hit JJ.

44. At or about 6:03 am on January 29, 2022, defendant Read arrived at 34 Fairview Rd., Canton and immediately observed JJ laying on the ground, buried in the snow, where she had earlier left him to die.

45. At relevant times on January 29, 2022, JJ suffered trauma injuries before becoming hypothermic.

46. At or about 7:50 am on January 29, 2022, JJ was pronounced dead at the Hospital.

47. At relevant times after 7:50 am on January 29, 2022, defendant Read went to the grieving house of JJ, feigned comfort to JJ's family, and used the opportunity to, amongst other things, remove the offending weapon, her vehicle, and/or destroy relevant evidence.

48. On January 29, 2022, defendant Read's blood was drawn reading of 93 mg/dl.

A serum conversion and retrograde extrapolation was done of the results of defendant Read's blood, with the results showing her BAC would have been between .13% - .29% around the time she drove the SUV and hit JJ.

49. Read's BAC of .13% - .29% all exceeds the legal limit to drive a motor vehicle in Massachusetts.

50. At relevant times on or about January 29, 2022, defendant Read drove her SUV while under the influence of alcohol and hit JJ with her SUV.

51. As a direct and/or proximate cause of Read's drunk driving, JJ sustained serious injuries of body and mind, conscious pain and suffering, fear of impending death, lost earnings, medical, funeral and burial expenses, and died.

52. Notwithstanding her 5th amendment right not to speak; defendant Read chose to speak publicly. She knowingly and deliberately changed her story and fabricated a conspiracy knowing the same to be false. She publicly communicated this false narrative thereby frustrating Justice for JJ. Such false narrative caused the Plaintiffs aggravated emotional distress.

53. The Plaintiffs listed above bring this Complaint seeking full and complete JUSTICE FOR JJ.

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER ON DEFENDANTS' PARTIAL MOTIONS TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO MASS. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6) (Paper Nos: 37, 37.3, 37.4)

This matter arises out of the January 29, 2022, death of John Joseph O'Keefe, III ("JJ").[4] Defendant and moving party, Karen Read ("Read"), was previously charged with several crimes in connection with JJ's death. During the pendency of Read's criminal case, plaintiffs Margaret O'Keefe ("Margaret," JJ's mother), John O'Keefe, II ("John," JJ's father), Paul O'Keefe ("Paul," JJ's brother and personal representative of JJ's estate), and Kayley Furbursh ("Kayley," JJ's niece) filed this civil lawsuit asserting claims against Read for Wrongful Death (Count III), Negligent and/or Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts X, XI, and XII), and Negligent, Reckless, and/or Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress (Count XIII).

The plaintiffs also asserted claims for Wrongful Death (Counts I and II), and Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, and IX) against C&C Hospitality,

LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's, G&S Hospitality, LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's (collectively, "C.F. McCarthy's") and Waterfall Bar & Grill, LTD d/b/a Waterfall Bar & Grill ("Waterfall"). These defendants are corporate entities that owned bars that allegedly served Read alcohol in the hours leading up to the events at issue.

Read filed a motion to dismiss all emotional distress claims asserted against her. C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall joined on Read's motion to dismiss, similarly seeking to dismiss the emotional distress claims asserted against them.[5] For the foregoing reasons, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to Kayley's claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

BACKGROUND

The following facts are drawn from the plaintiffs' complaint and accepted as true for purposes of this motion.[6]

On January 28, 2022, Read patronized C.F. McCarthy's from 8:51 p.m. through 10:29 p.m. She consumed seven alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Read then patronized Waterfall from 10:54 p.m. that night through 12:10 a.m. the next morning. She consumed two alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Her blood was drawn on January 29, 2022, and testing revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

[5] C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall's motions are technically motions for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12(c), as they previously filed answers to the plaintiffs' complaint. However, a "defendant's rule 12(c) motion is actually a motion to dismiss that argues that the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted" (quotations omitted). Jarosz v. Palmer, 436 Mass. 526, 529 (2002). Thus, the court will apply the same legal framework for C.F. McCarthy and Waterfall's motions as that used in assessing Read's motion to dismiss.

revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

During the timeframe relevant to the instant lawsuit, Read and JJ were in a dating relationship. JJ was with Read that evening, and they had been arguing. After leaving Waterfall, Read got into a motor vehicle with JJ and drove to a residence at 34 Fairview Road in Canton while intoxicated. After arriving at the residence, JJ exited Read's vehicle. Read then drove her vehicle and hit JJ. JJ was knocked to the ground, suffering serious injuries that ultimately led to his death.

Read fled the scene and drove to JJ's residence at 1 Meadows Avenue in Canton. At approximately 4:30 a.m. on January 29, 2022, Read woke up JJ's niece, Kayley, who lived with JJ. Read began discussing JJ's death with Kayley and talked about striking him with her vehicle. "Kayley heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Read also called multiple people between 4:30 a.m. and 5:00 a.m. on January 29, 2022, while in Kayley's presence. At the time, Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who had previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent.

Read left JJ's residence at approximately 5:07 a.m. on January 29, 2022. She arrived at 34 Fairview Road at approximately 6:03 a.m. and discovered JJ buried in snow. JJ was pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 am. "At relevant times after 7:50 am on January 29, 2022, defendant Read went to the grieving house of JJ, feigned comfort to JJ's family, and used the opportunity to, amongst other things, remove the offending weapon, her vehicle, and/or destroy relevant evidence." Complaint, paragraph 47.

Subsequently, over the course of several years, Read made many public statements. "She knowingly and deliberately changed her story and fabricated a conspiracy knowing the same to be false. She publicly communicated this false 'narrative' thereby frustrating Justice for JJ. Such false narrative caused the Plaintiffs aggravated emotional distress." Complaint, paragraph 52.

DISCUSSION

The defendants argue that the emotional distress claims should be dismissed for multiple reasons: 1) distress claims are subsumed by the wrongful death statute; 2) the plaintiffs' claimed distress was not contemporaneous with JJ allegedly being struck by Read's vehicle; 3) there was no extreme or outrageous conduct direct towards the plaintiff that resulted in severe harm; and 4) Kayley's claims for emotional distress fail as a matter of law. The court will address each of these arguments in turn.

A. Standard of Review

To survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12 (b)(6), a complaint must contain "factual 'allegations plausibly suggesting (not merely consistent with)' an entitlement to relief." Iannacchino v. Ford Motor Co., 451 Mass. 623, 636 (2008), quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 557 (2007). The factual allegations must be "more than labels and conclusions" and "raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Iannacchino, 451 Mass. at 636, quoting Bell Atl. Corp., 550 U.S. at 555. In assessing a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6), the court accepts as true the well-pleaded factual allegations in the complaint and draws all reasonable inferences in the claimant's favor. See Fairhaven Hous. Auth. v. Commonwealth, 493 Mass. 27, 30 (2023).

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

The extent of the court's review generally is limited to the factual allegations in the complaint and any facts contained in any attached exhibits. See Eigerman v. Putnam Invs., Inc., 450 Mass. 281, 285 n.6 (2007). However, the court also may consider matters of public record, items in the record of the case, and documents cited and relied upon in the complaint. Schaer v. Brandeis Univ., 432 Mass. 474, 477 (2000).

B. Wrongful Death Statute and Emotional Distress Claims

The defendants argue that the plaintiffs' emotional distress claims are subsumed by the Massachusetts wrongful death statute, G. L. c. 229, § 2. Among other provisions, the statute identifies the following as recoverable damages:

> "the fair monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to receive the damages recovered, as provided in section one, including but not limited to compensation for the loss of the reasonably expected net income, services, protection, care, assistance, society, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice of the decedent to the persons entitled to the damages recovered."

G. L. c. 229, § 2.

Thus, the wrongful death statute contemplates some degree of emotional distress arising from a decedent's death. It addresses the loss of care, assistance, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice, all of which go to the relationship between a decedent and individuals pursuing claims under the statute.

The defendants argue that the independent emotional distress claims asserted by the plaintiffs are redundant to the plaintiffs' wrongful death assertions and consequently should be dismissed. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Cimino v. Milford Keg, Inc., 385 Mass. 323 (1982), the Supreme Judicial Court ("SJC") held:

> "The defendant's . . argument that the plaintiff's claim for emotional distress is 'preempted' by the wrongful death action (G.L. c. 229, s 2) misconstrues the common law cause of action for emotional distress. Emotional distress, as the concept has evolved in this Commonwealth, is a severe psychological shock directly resulting from

> experiencing or witnessing the effects of a defendant's conduct. . . . A claim for damages based on emotional distress does not include an administrator's claim for loss of consortium-which will be present in every wrongful death action such as this. Since emotional distress is a wrong to the plaintiff distinct from that done to [the decedent] and the statutory beneficiaries of the decedent, it is not a duplicative remedy and is not 'preempted' by the wrongful death statute." (quotations omitted).

Cimino, 385 Mass. at 334.

Here, the plaintiffs' direct emotional distress claims go beyond the mere fact that JJ died. Instead, they point to the alleged wrongs they suffered in their individual capacities. They aver that they suffered such harm in observing JJ just after his death, having Read attend family events in the immediate aftermath of JJ's death, and Read developing a public and false narrative that frustrated justice for JJ. These claims are separate from JJ's death and instead are specific to the distress the plaintiffs assert in their individual capacities, rather than their status as relatives of JJ pursuant to the wrongful death statute.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding emotional distress and the wrongful death statute.

C. Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress because their alleged distress did not occur contemporaneously with the accident giving rise to JJ's death. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Stockdale v. Bird & Son, Inc., 399 Mass. 249 (1987), the SJC stated:

> "In Dziokonski v. Babineau, 375 Mass. 555, 568 (1978), we held that 'allegations concerning a parent who sustains substantial physical harm as a result of severe mental distress over some peril or harm to his minor child caused by the defendant's negligence state a claim for which relief might be granted, where the parent either witnesses the accident or soon comes on the scene while the child is still there.' Two years later, in Ferriter v. Daniel O'Connell's Sons, 381 Mass. 507, 518, we held that the wife and children of an employee allegedly injured through his employer's negligence could maintain an action for negligent infliction of emotional distress, even though they first observed the employee in a hospital immediately after the accident. We said that '[a]

Superior Court - Plymouth

> plaintiff who rushes onto the accident scene and finds a loved one injured has no greater entitlement to compensation for that shock than a plaintiff who rushes instead to the hospital. So long as the shock follows closely on the heels of the accident, the two types of injury are equally foreseeable.' Id."

Stockdale, 399 Mass. at 251.

Thus, a family member is entitled to emotional distress damages when they either witness the decedent's actual injury or "come upon the injured [kin] promptly after the injury." Nancy P. v. D'Amato, 401 Mass. 516, 520 (1988).

The plaintiffs allege that Read discovered JJ buried in the snow at approximately 6:03 a.m. on January 29, 2022, and he was subsequently pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 a.m. that day. Margaret, John, and Paul each aver that they "learned of JJ's admission to [ ] Hospital immediately and came upon JJ's body at the Hospital shortly thereafter." Complaint, paragraphs 82, 88, 95, 102, 109, 116, 123, 131, and 139. Against this backdrop, the complaint alleges sufficient facts that JJ's parents and brother arrived promptly at the hospital upon learning of JJ's death and thus have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley's negligent infliction of emotional distress claim stands on different footing, however. She alleges that she "learned of JJ's death or injury when defendant Read woke Kayley up approximately 4:30 am on January 29, 2022." Complaint, paragraph 147. Further, Kayley alleges she "heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Lastly, Kayley states that, as a result of Read's conversations in her presence, she "perceived the injuries caused to her guardian, uncle JJ, and perceived the injury producing event." Complaint, paragraph 151.

Taken together, the complaint does not allege that Kayley learned of JJ's death or injury at 4:30 a.m., but instead learned he was maybe injured at that time. There are also no averments

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth

regarding when and the circumstances under which she first observed the deceased JJ. Her averments concern her perceptions of JJ's injuries, rather than her actual observations.

The case law cited by the parties addresses scenarios whereby a family member has observed another family member actually being injured or otherwise suffering shock after promptly encountering the injured family member. Kayley cannot make this showing. In making this assessment, the court acknowledges the following case law cited in the plaintiffs' opposition:

> "the determination whether there should be liability for the injury sustained depends on a number of factors, such as where, when, and how the injury to the third person entered into the consciousness of the claimant, and what degree there was of familial or other relationship between the claimant and the third person" (emphasis in original).

Dziokonski, 375 Mass. at 568.

Such language is inapposite here, as the Dziokonski court's decision turned on liability for negligent infliction of emotional distress and the parameters for when a family member arrived at the scene of an accident giving rise to a relative's injury. Stockdale extended the scope of Dziokonski to family members who promptly arrive at a hospital. Neither of these cases, nor any other cases provided by the parties, creates authority to find negligent infliction of emotional distress for family members who learn of a death beyond this prompt timeframe. Thus, Dziokonski's language about when JJ's injury "entered into the consciousness of the claimant" does not support Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to Margaret, John, and Paul's claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress and ALLOWED as to Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

D. Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for reckless infliction of emotional distress because there was no extreme or outrageous conduct directed towards them that resulted in severe harm.[7] In the context of such claims, conduct is "extreme and outrageous" if it "goes beyond all possible bounds of decency, and is regarded as atrocious, and utterly intolerable in a civilized community" (quotations omitted). Roman v. Trustees of Tufts Coll., 461 Mass. 707, 718 (2012). The standard of extreme and outrageous conduct is a high bar. Such conduct means more than "workaday insults, annoyances, or even threats and petty oppressions . . . . It means, for example, a high order of reckless ruthlessness or deliberate malevolence that . . . is simply intolerable" (quotations omitted). Conway v. Smerling, 37 Mass. App. Ct. 1, 8 (1994).

The plaintiffs allege that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death, which caused them to suffer emotional distress. In support of their opposition to the instant motions, they have produced a search warrant affidavit, which is a matter of public record that the court may consider in assessing whether the complaint plausibly suggests an entitlement to relief.[8]

According to the search warrant materials, on January 22, 2024, Detective Lieutenant Brian Tully ("Tully") of the Massachusetts State Police applied for a warrant to seize "[a]ny

[7] With reference to the defendants' arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct, the plaintiffs' opposition frames the issue in the context of reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. In the complaint, however, Magaret, John, and Paul do not assert claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Instead, at Counts, X, XI, and XII, they assert claims against Read for negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress. Thus, in ruling upon this motion, the court does not impute an additional cause of action for Margaret, John, and Paul that is not included in the complaint. As discussed below, Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

mobile device capable of communicating and cellphones used by Karen Read."[9] He filed a return of the search warrant on January 24, 2024.

Tully submitted an affidavit in support of the search warrant application. The affidavit comprises thirty-one pages and discusses Read's communications regarding JJ's death. Briefly stated, the affidavit largely describes actions by a local blogger, Aidan Kearney, who runs a series of social media websites under the name "Turtleboy."

The affidavit states that Kearney posted articles on social media accounts that reflected personal attacks on civilian witnesses, members of their families, and their friends. The affidavit also states that throughout various postings and videos, Kearney identified several individuals who socialized with JJ and Read, stated that they, not Read, were responsible for JJ's murder, and encouraged his social media followers to contact and harass these individuals. Additionally, the affidavit references certain comments Kearney directed to the O'Keefe family:

> "How much slack are we supposed to give you [John O'Keefe's family] . . . the time period for the grief, whatever, that we are giving you, like we are not going after you because of the grief, that is expired. It's expired because you're trying to send an innocent woman to jail for the rest of her life . . . I don't feel bad for you anymore.

Plaintiffs' Opposition, Exhibit A, paragraph 39.

Per the affidavit, Read communicated with Kearney through an intermediary, Natalie Wiweke Berhsneider. Through this intermediary, Read gave Kearney information concerning her case, some of which was potentially not available to the public, which Kearney then used in his social media postings. Read also shared personal information and pictures of many civilian individuals for whom Kearney argued were responsible for JJ's death.

[9] The court acknowledges that the substance of the search warrant affidavit is highly disputed. The court's references to such affidavit are viewed through the lens of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, which requires the court to view facts and draw inferences in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death.[10] Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had "expired" for "going after" the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard, the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress.

Primarily, the defendants' motions set forth generalized legal statements for extreme and outrageous conduct. As to a substantive argument, Read cites to Polay v. McMahon, 468 Mass. 379 (2014). Polay is arguably similarly because it dealt with "(1) filing false police reports and harassment prevention petitions against the plaintiffs; (2) verbally attacking the plaintiffs; and (3) monitoring and recording the plaintiffs' home on a continuous basis." Id. at 386. The SJC in Polay held that such action did not rise to the level of extreme and outrageous conduct. The court acknowledges that Polay shares parallels as to a dispute between individuals which escalated into allegedly harassing behaviors. However, given the extensive scope of media scrutiny and Read's relationship with Kearney, as alleged in the complaint and search warrant affidavit, the facts of this case rise above those at issue in Polay because of their public and pervasive nature.

[10] In making this assessment, the court is not ruling on whether Read's "narrative" was true or false. As with its consideration of the search warrant affidavit, the court is exercising its legal authority regarding the instant motions, which is limited to applying a plausibility standard with facts and inferences viewed in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct.

E. Claims Asserted by Kayley Furbush

The defendants argue that the complaint does not assert sufficient facts that Kayley suffered emotional distress, and that it does not describe which conduct applies to which claim. As discussed above, Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress must be dismissed for failure to state a viable claim. However, consistent with Margaret's, John's, and Paul's claims, Kayley was also plausibly distressed by the public and pervasive nature of Read's alleged false narrative. The alleged facts surrounding Kayley's interactions with Read in the early morning hours on January 29, 2022, can also be plausibly characterized as extreme and outrageous. Such determination supports Kayley's claim for reckless infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. A claim for intentional infliction of emotion distress requires sufficient averments that Read "intended to inflict emotional distress or that [she] knew or should have known that emotional distress was the likely result of [her] conduct." Agis v. Howard Johnson Co., 371 Mass. 140, 144–145 (1976). With reference to the specific allegations of the complaint, Read's motion states that "Defendant's questioning what happened during a phone call with third parties, even if in Kayley Furbush's presence, is also not actionable conduct." This does not convey the full scope of what occurred during the early morning hours of January 29, 2022, in the manner alleged in the complaint. Instead, the complaint plausibly pleads that Read made multiple distressing calls about JJ's physical condition, namely being struck by Read's vehicle or

Superior Court - Plymouth

by a snowplow. Moreover, Read made these statements upon waking Kayley up at 4:30 a.m., which plausibly contributed to the distressing nature of that interaction.

Even if this court were to accept Read's position that she was merely engaging in telephone conversations, "[c]onduct otherwise reasonable may become tortious when directed at an individual known to be particularly susceptible to infliction of emotional distress." Boyle v. Wenk, 378 Mass. 592, 596 (1979). At time of this interaction, it can be inferred that Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent. Given such status, Kayley would be particularly vulnerable to distress caused by an additional loss of a parental figure. Thus, based upon Kayley's vulnerability and susceptibility, Read, at a minimum, knew or should have known that her conduct would cause Kayley to suffer emotional distress. This plausibly supports a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions to dismiss are DENIED as to their arguments regarding the sufficiency of Kayley's claims.

ORDER

Wherefore, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to their claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

Commonwealth v. Karen Read

Order on Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order

Before the Court is Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order Regarding Sharing of Cell Phone Data. After a hearing on March 28th, 2025, and a review of the submissions related thereto, the Motion is ALLOWED in part.

The Intervenor has raised significant concerns regarding confidentiality related to the Commonwealth's prosecution of Mr. Kearney in 2382-cr-00313 - specifically, his concerns over law enforcement's use and/or dissemination of data obtained by search warrant and extracted from Mr. Kearney's cell phones. The Court deems Intervenor's concerns sufficient to warrant further Court action, however, only as it pertains to data that is being produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 order in this case [Dkt. 615] , and only as it relates to the above-captioned case (2282-cr-00117). The Court acknowledges that other investigative materials or discovery beyond that covered by this Order are already the subject of the Court's prior Order [Dkt. 555] concerning counsel's obligations. And, Intervenor Kearney has also moved for an identical Protective Order in the pending case in which he is a Defendant (2382-cr-00313); that Motion is not currently before this Court.

With regard to the data extracted from Mr. Kearney's phones and produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 Order (the "DATA"), the Court ORDERS:

1. All agents of the Commonwealth, including but not limited to any members of any law enforcement agency or agent or contractor thereof, shall maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant.

2. This protective order shall take effect when entered and shall remain in effect unless terminated by entry of a Court Order.
3. Any person who violates this Order shall be in contempt of Court.

Re: Paul O'Keefe et al. v. C&C Hospitality, LLC et al., Plymouth Superior Court, Civil Action No. 2483-CV-00692

Dear Mr. Diller:

I write on behalf of the Norfolk District Attorney's Office ("NDAO") in response to the subpoena that you issued in the above-referenced action on February 25, 2026, requesting records and access to Karen Read's cell phones; records of communications, including emails by or to Karen Read and/or Aidan Kearney; and records pertaining to the prosecution of Aidan Kearney. Pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1), this letter serves as the NDAO's written objection to the subpoena.

The NDAO objects to your requests on the grounds that they are overbroad, unduly burdensome, costly, and seek information that is publicly available. See Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (c) (for good cause shown the court should protect record holders from undue burden or expense, particularly when the material is available from some other source, duplicative, unduly cumulative, and in considering the importance of the requested material in resolving the issues); Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4) (additional considerations to the burdens of producing electronically stored data). The NDAO, a non-party record holder, emphasizes the undue burden particularly where the majority of the requests are obtainable from another source, namely defendant Karen Read. See generally Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (NDAO Notices of Discovery 34, 35, 47).

The NDAO objects to producing any information that would jeopardize pending criminal investigations; whose disclosure is proscribed by law, including grand jury materials, and documents that are sealed, impounded, subject to protective orders, or would contravene court orders, including previously raised confidentiality concerns and pending criminal cases. See Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (docket entries 636, 650); Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088] (docket -00313 entries 22, 47, 61, 62, 76).[1]

Moreover, your request no. 5 and no. 12 appear to contravene the Plymouth Superior Court's March 1, 2026 order to the "Plaintiff's Emergency Moton for Temporary Restraining Order Pursuant to Rule 65 to Prevent Release of Evidence" (Gildea, J.) as well as the Plaintiff's pending request to intervene in Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088], where the issue of access to cellphones seized from Karen Read is pending a decision of the Court (Krupp, J.).

The NDAO objects to the subpoena to the extent that it calls for the production of materials that are protected by the work-product doctrine, the attorney-client privilege, or other applicable protections, privileges, or immunities against disclosure, including but not limited to internal communications and notes containing attorney work product and/or mental impressions. The NDAO further objects to searching sources of electronically stored information that are not reasonably accessible without the investment of significant time or expense. Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4).

Subject to the existing protective order of confidentiality and without waiving the foregoing objections, for your convenience the NDAO has attached the public court orders in Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] governing its decision. The NDAO is also producing a responsive motion transcript from December 17, 2024, in Kearney and a video clip of Karen Read, which was part of the video previously produced on January 9, 2026. Lastly, the NDAO has complied with request no. 10 as that material was denoted confidential and produced to the plaintiff and defendant Karen Read on January 9, 2026. The NDAO reserves all rights, including the right to recover its reasonable expenses in responding to the subpoena.

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO COMPEL RESPONSES TO PLAINTIFFS' SUPPLEMENTAL KEEPER OF RECORDS SUBPOENA FROM AIDAN KEARNEY

NOW COME the Plaintiffs in the above-captioned matter, and respectfully request that this Honorable Court, pursuant to Rule 45 of the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure and other relevant rules governing discovery, issue an order compelling Aidan Kearney to provide responses and documents to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026. As of the date of service, Plaintiffs have yet to receive responses, objections, or any request for extension from Kearney.

I. RELEVANT BACKGROUND

On April 21, 2026, Plaintiffs served a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena on Aidan Kearney. Responses were due by April 30, 2026. EXHIBIT A. To date, Kearney has made no effort to respond, object, or request an extension. This Subpoena is directly tied to Plaintiffs'

underlying civil action filed on August 23, 2024, against Defendants Karen Read, C.F. McCarthy's, and Waterfall Bar & Grill seeking damages arising from the death of John O'Keefe III. The Complaint asserts claims against Defendant Karen Read for wrongful death (Count III), negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress (Counts X-XII), and reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress (Count XIII). EXHIBIT B.

Central to Plaintiffs' emotional distress claims is the allegation that Karen Read, acting through Aidan Kearney, orchestrated a coordinated public campaign to promote a false narrative surrounding John O'Keefe's death. Kearney, a blogger operating under the pseudonym "Turtleboy," served as Read's agent, mouthpiece, and primary instrumentality in disseminating this harmful content. Communications between Read and Kearney are therefore essential to proving the emotional distress claims.

On August 12, 2025, Karen Read filed a partial motion to dismiss. In ruling on said motion, the Court found the allegations sufficiently plausible to survive dismissal, stating:

> "When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death. Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had 'expired' for 'going after' the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress." EXHIBIT C.

In denying the motion to dismiss, Judge O'Shea endorsed the plausibility of the O'Keefe family's infliction-of-emotional-distress claims, finding that sufficient facts exist to support these claim. These claims remain active today and warrant full discovery.

Separate from this civil action, the Norfolk Grand Jury indicted Kearney on nine counts of witness intimidation, five counts of illegal picketing of a witness, and three counts of conspiracy

to intimidate a witness. The Norfolk District Attorney's Office has conducted criminal investigations into both Read and Kearney. Through these investigations, the NDAO obtained forensic extractions from cell phones belonging to both Read[1] and Kearney. These extractions contain the very communications between Read and Kearney that Plaintiffs require to prove their claims.

On March 31, 2025, the Court entered a Protective Order governing the sharing of Kearney's cell phone data, directing all agents of the Commonwealth to "maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant." See EXHIBIT D.

Plaintiffs have pursued every available avenue to obtain the discoverable materials in the NDAO's possession. On February 24, 2026, Plaintiffs served the NDAO with a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena seeking materials related to Kearney. On March 6, 2026, the NDAO objected, citing the Protective Order and confidentiality concerns as the primary impediments to production. See EXHIBIT E. Notably, the NDAO did not assert that the materials lack relevance or discoverability. On March 4, 2026, Plaintiffs filed a Motion to Intervene in Commonwealth v. Kearney for the limited purpose of expanding the Protective Order to permit production of these materials to Plaintiffs. That motion remains pending.

Despite these efforts, Plaintiffs still lack access to communications and materials. Kearney's complete failure to respond to the Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026, necessitates this motion.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

[1] Plaintiffs have reached an agreement with Read's counsel regarding the production and handling of the phone extraction data pertaining to Read.

Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C) authorizes a subpoena commanding a non-party to produce documents. Where a non-party fails to respond, the party serving the subpoena may move for an order compelling production. Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B). "Failure by any person without adequate excuse to obey a subpoena served upon that person may be deemed a contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued." Mass. R. Civ. P. 45.

In interpreting the scope of discovery under the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure, the Supreme Judicial Court has followed the approach taken under the federal rules, and defined "relevant" evidence "broadly to encompass any matter that bears on, or that reasonably could lead to other matter that could bear on, any issue that is or may be in the case... discovery is not limited to issues raised by the pleadings, for discovery itself is designed to help define and clarify the issues...Nor is discovery limited to the merits of a case, for a variety of fact-oriented issues may arise during litigation that are not related to the merits." Cronin v. Strayer, 392 Mass. 525, 534 (1984), quoting Oppenheimer Fund, Inc. v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 351 (1978).

As such, discovery should ordinarily be allowed under the concept of relevancy unless it is clear that the information sought can have no possible bearing upon the subject matter of the action. See E.A. Miller, Inc., v. South Shore Bank, 405 Mass. 95, 101 (1989) (holding that litigants should be afforded an opportunity for discovery where a party has “made even a minimal showing warranting the requested discovery").

III. ARGUMENT

A. The Requested Materials Are Directly Relevant And Crucial To Plaintiffs’ Emotional Distress Claims

The materials sought through the supplemental keeper of records subpoena are directly relevant to Plaintiffs’ claims. Plaintiffs’ emotional distress claims rest on Karen Read’s coordinated campaign with Aidan Kearney to promote a false narrative and pit the Read’s against the

O'Keefe's. Publicly communicating this false narrative directly resulted in frustrating justice for John O'Keefe and caused additional harm to the already grieving O'Keefe family. Karen Read's primary vehicle for disseminating this false narrative was her relationship with Aidan Kearney, who operates under the pseudonym "Turtleboy." Aidan Kearney manages various websites and social media accounts through which he publishes the inflammatory and harmful content at Karen Read's direction and active collaboration. As part of its investigation into Aidan Kearney, the Commonwealth obtained search warrants and ultimately seized multiple electronic devices including cell phones, laptops, cameras, SD cards, etc. The Plaintiffs have a good faith basis to believe that the data contained on these electronic devices will prove Plaintiffs' allegations and multiple aspects of their claims. Without relief, Plaintiffs cannot timely authenticate these materials.

B. The Plaintiffs Require These Materials Urgently In Order To Conduct Discovery In Their Civil Case

With the discovery deadline fast approaching in the civil matter, the Plaintiffs have an urgent need for these materials. Plaintiffs have noticed the deposition of Aidan Kearney and Karen Read and require communications and device extractions to effectively for and conduct that deposition. Additionally, Plaintiffs require these materials to prepare their cases. Without such materials the Plaintiffs will suffer prejudice.

IV. REQUESTED RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Honorable Court: (1) GRANT this Motion to Compel; (2) ORDER Aidan Kearney to produce all documents and materials responsive

to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena within ten (10) days of the Court's Order; and (3) GRANT such other and further relief as this Court deems just and appropriate.

PAUL O'KEEFE[1] & others[2]

C & C HOSPITALITY, LLC d/b/a C. F. MCCARTHY'S & others[3]

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER ON DEFENDANTS' PARTIAL MOTIONS TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO MASS. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6) (Paper Nos: 37, 37.3, 37.4)

This matter arises out of the January 29, 2022, death of John Joseph O'Keefe, III ("JJ").[4] Defendant and moving party, Karen Read ("Read"), was previously charged with several crimes in connection with JJ's death. During the pendency of Read's criminal case, plaintiffs Margaret O'Keefe ("Margaret," JJ's mother), John O'Keefe, II ("John," JJ's father), Paul O'Keefe ("Paul," JJ's brother and personal representative of JJ's estate), and Kayley Furbursh ("Kayley," JJ's niece) filed this civil lawsuit asserting claims against Read for Wrongful Death (Count III), Negligent and/or Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts X, XI, and XII), and Negligent, Reckless, and/or Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress (Count XIII).

The plaintiffs also asserted claims for Wrongful Death (Counts I and II), and Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, and IX) against C&C Hospitality,

LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's, G&S Hospitality, LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's (collectively, "C.F. McCarthy's") and Waterfall Bar & Grill, LTD d/b/a Waterfall Bar & Grill ("Waterfall"). These defendants are corporate entities that owned bars that allegedly served Read alcohol in the hours leading up to the events at issue.

Read filed a motion to dismiss all emotional distress claims asserted against her. C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall joined on Read's motion to dismiss, similarly seeking to dismiss the emotional distress claims asserted against them.[5] For the foregoing reasons, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to Kayley's claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

BACKGROUND

The following facts are drawn from the plaintiffs' complaint and accepted as true for purposes of this motion.[6]

On January 28, 2022, Read patronized C.F. McCarthy's from 8:51 p.m. through 10:29 p.m. She consumed seven alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Read then patronized Waterfall from 10:54 p.m. that night through 12:10 a.m. the next morning. She consumed two alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Her blood was drawn on January 29, 2022, and testing revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

[5] C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall's motions are technically motions for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12(c), as they previously filed answers to the plaintiffs' complaint. However, a "defendant's rule 12(c) motion is actually a motion to dismiss that argues that the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted" (quotations omitted). Jarosz v. Palmer, 436 Mass. 526, 529 (2002). Thus, the court will apply the same legal framework for C.F. McCarthy and Waterfall's motions as that used in assessing Read's motion to dismiss.

revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

During the timeframe relevant to the instant lawsuit, Read and JJ were in a dating relationship. JJ was with Read that evening, and they had been arguing. After leaving Waterfall, Read got into a motor vehicle with JJ and drove to a residence at 34 Fairview Road in Canton while intoxicated. After arriving at the residence, JJ exited Read's vehicle. Read then drove her vehicle and hit JJ. JJ was knocked to the ground, suffering serious injuries that ultimately led to his death.

Read fled the scene and drove to JJ's residence at 1 Meadows Avenue in Canton. At approximately 4:30 a.m. on January 29, 2022, Read woke up JJ's niece, Kayley, who lived with JJ. Read began discussing JJ's death with Kayley and talked about striking him with her vehicle. "Kayley heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Read also called multiple people between 4:30 a.m. and 5:00 a.m. on January 29, 2022, while in Kayley's presence. At the time, Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who had previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent.

Read left JJ's residence at approximately 5:07 a.m. on January 29, 2022. She arrived at 34 Fairview Road at approximately 6:03 a.m. and discovered JJ buried in snow. JJ was pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 am. "At relevant times after 7:50 am on January 29, 2022, defendant Read went to the grieving house of JJ, feigned comfort to JJ's family, and used the opportunity to, amongst other things, remove the offending weapon, her vehicle, and/or destroy relevant evidence." Complaint, paragraph 47.

Docket Number 2483CV00692

Subsequently, over the course of several years, Read made many public statements. "She knowingly and deliberately changed her story and fabricated a conspiracy knowing the same to be false. She publicly communicated this false 'narrative' thereby frustrating Justice for JJ. Such false narrative caused the Plaintiffs aggravated emotional distress." Complaint, paragraph 52.

DISCUSSION

The defendants argue that the emotional distress claims should be dismissed for multiple reasons: 1) distress claims are subsumed by the wrongful death statute; 2) the plaintiffs' claimed distress was not contemporaneous with JJ allegedly being struck by Read's vehicle; 3) there was no extreme or outrageous conduct direct towards the plaintiff that resulted in severe harm; and 4) Kayley's claims for emotional distress fail as a matter of law. The court will address each of these arguments in turn.

A. Standard of Review

To survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12 (b)(6), a complaint must contain "factual 'allegations plausibly suggesting (not merely consistent with)' an entitlement to relief." Iannacchino v. Ford Motor Co., 451 Mass. 623, 636 (2008), quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 557 (2007). The factual allegations must be "more than labels and conclusions" and "raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Iannacchino, 451 Mass. at 636, quoting Bell Atl. Corp., 550 U.S. at 555. In assessing a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6), the court accepts as true the well-pleaded factual allegations in the complaint and draws all reasonable inferences in the claimant's favor. See Fairhaven Hous. Auth. v. Commonwealth, 493 Mass. 27, 30 (2023).

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

The extent of the court's review generally is limited to the factual allegations in the complaint and any facts contained in any attached exhibits. See Eigerman v. Putnam Invs., Inc., 450 Mass. 281, 285 n.6 (2007). However, the court also may consider matters of public record, items in the record of the case, and documents cited and relied upon in the complaint. Schaer v. Brandeis Univ., 432 Mass. 474, 477 (2000).

B. Wrongful Death Statute and Emotional Distress Claims

The defendants argue that the plaintiffs' emotional distress claims are subsumed by the Massachusetts wrongful death statute, G. L. c. 229, § 2. Among other provisions, the statute identifies the following as recoverable damages:

> "the fair monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to receive the damages recovered, as provided in section one, including but not limited to compensation for the loss of the reasonably expected net income, services, protection, care, assistance, society, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice of the decedent to the persons entitled to the damages recovered."

G. L. c. 229, § 2.

Thus, the wrongful death statute contemplates some degree of emotional distress arising from a decedent's death. It addresses the loss of care, assistance, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice, all of which go to the relationship between a decedent and individuals pursuing claims under the statute.

The defendants argue that the independent emotional distress claims asserted by the plaintiffs are redundant to the plaintiffs' wrongful death assertions and consequently should be dismissed. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Cimino v. Milford Keg, Inc., 385 Mass. 323 (1982), the Supreme Judicial Court ("SJC") held:

> "The defendant's . . argument that the plaintiff's claim for emotional distress is 'preempted' by the wrongful death action (G.L. c. 229, s 2) misconstrues the common law cause of action for emotional distress. Emotional distress, as the concept has evolved in this Commonwealth, is a severe psychological shock directly resulting from

> experiencing or witnessing the effects of a defendant's conduct. . . . A claim for damages based on emotional distress does not include an administrator's claim for loss of consortium-which will be present in every wrongful death action such as this. Since emotional distress is a wrong to the plaintiff distinct from that done to [the decedent] and the statutory beneficiaries of the decedent, it is not a duplicative remedy and is not 'preempted' by the wrongful death statute." (quotations omitted).

Cimino, 385 Mass. at 334.

Here, the plaintiffs' direct emotional distress claims go beyond the mere fact that JJ died. Instead, they point to the alleged wrongs they suffered in their individual capacities. They aver that they suffered such harm in observing JJ just after his death, having Read attend family events in the immediate aftermath of JJ's death, and Read developing a public and false narrative that frustrated justice for JJ. These claims are separate from JJ's death and instead are specific to the distress the plaintiffs assert in their individual capacities, rather than their status as relatives of JJ pursuant to the wrongful death statute.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding emotional distress and the wrongful death statute.

C. Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress because their alleged distress did not occur contemporaneously with the accident giving rise to JJ's death. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Stockdale v. Bird & Son, Inc., 399 Mass. 249 (1987), the SJC stated:

> "In Dziokonski v. Babineau, 375 Mass. 555, 568 (1978), we held that 'allegations concerning a parent who sustains substantial physical harm as a result of severe mental distress over some peril or harm to his minor child caused by the defendant's negligence state a claim for which relief might be granted, where the parent either witnesses the accident or soon comes on the scene while the child is still there.' Two years later, in Ferriter v. Daniel O'Connell's Sons, 381 Mass. 507, 518, we held that the wife and children of an employee allegedly injured through his employer's negligence could maintain an action for negligent infliction of emotional distress, even though they first observed the employee in a hospital immediately after the accident. We said that '[a]

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

> plaintiff who rushes onto the accident scene and finds a loved one injured has no greater entitlement to compensation for that shock than a plaintiff who rushes instead to the hospital. So long as the shock follows closely on the heels of the accident, the two types of injury are equally foreseeable.' Id."

Stockdale, 399 Mass. at 251.

Thus, a family member is entitled to emotional distress damages when they either witness the decedent's actual injury or "come upon the injured [kin] promptly after the injury." Nancy P. v. D'Amato, 401 Mass. 516, 520 (1988).

The plaintiffs allege that Read discovered JJ buried in the snow at approximately 6:03 a.m. on January 29, 2022, and he was subsequently pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 a.m. that day. Margaret, John, and Paul each aver that they "learned of JJ's admission to [ ] Hospital immediately and came upon JJ's body at the Hospital shortly thereafter." Complaint, paragraphs 82, 88, 95, 102, 109, 116, 123, 131, and 139. Against this backdrop, the complaint alleges sufficient facts that JJ's parents and brother arrived promptly at the hospital upon learning of JJ's death and thus have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley's negligent infliction of emotional distress claim stands on different footing, however. She alleges that she "learned of JJ's death or injury when defendant Read woke Kayley up approximately 4:30 am on January 29, 2022." Complaint, paragraph 147. Further, Kayley alleges she "heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Lastly, Kayley states that, as a result of Read's conversations in her presence, she "perceived the injuries caused to her guardian, uncle JJ, and perceived the injury producing event." Complaint, paragraph 151.

Taken together, the complaint does not allege that Kayley learned of JJ's death or injury at 4:30 a.m., but instead learned he was maybe injured at that time. There are also no averments

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth

regarding when and the circumstances under which she first observed the deceased JJ. Her averments concern her perceptions of JJ's injuries, rather than her actual observations.

The case law cited by the parties addresses scenarios whereby a family member has observed another family member actually being injured or otherwise suffering shock after promptly encountering the injured family member. Kayley cannot make this showing. In making this assessment, the court acknowledges the following case law cited in the plaintiffs' opposition:

> "the determination whether there should be liability for the injury sustained depends on a number of factors, such as where, when, and how the injury to the third person entered into the consciousness of the claimant, and what degree there was of familial or other relationship between the claimant and the third person" (emphasis in original).

Dziokonski, 375 Mass. at 568.

Such language is inapposite here, as the Dziokonski court's decision turned on liability for negligent infliction of emotional distress and the parameters for when a family member arrived at the scene of an accident giving rise to a relative's injury. Stockdale extended the scope of Dziokonski to family members who promptly arrive at a hospital. Neither of these cases, nor any other cases provided by the parties, creates authority to find negligent infliction of emotional distress for family members who learn of a death beyond this prompt timeframe. Thus, Dziokonski's language about when JJ's injury "entered into the consciousness of the claimant" does not support Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to Margaret, John, and Paul's claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress and ALLOWED as to Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

D. Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for reckless infliction of emotional distress because there was no extreme or outrageous conduct directed towards them that resulted in severe harm.[7] In the context of such claims, conduct is "extreme and outrageous" if it "goes beyond all possible bounds of decency, and is regarded as atrocious, and utterly intolerable in a civilized community" (quotations omitted). Roman v. Trustees of Tufts Coll., 461 Mass. 707, 718 (2012). The standard of extreme and outrageous conduct is a high bar. Such conduct means more than "workaday insults, annoyances, or even threats and petty oppressions . . . . It means, for example, a high order of reckless ruthlessness or deliberate malevolence that . . . is simply intolerable" (quotations omitted). Conway v. Smerling, 37 Mass. App. Ct. 1, 8 (1994).

The plaintiffs allege that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death, which caused them to suffer emotional distress. In support of their opposition to the instant motions, they have produced a search warrant affidavit, which is a matter of public record that the court may consider in assessing whether the complaint plausibly suggests an entitlement to relief.[8]

According to the search warrant materials, on January 22, 2024, Detective Lieutenant Brian Tully ("Tully") of the Massachusetts State Police applied for a warrant to seize "[a]ny

[7] With reference to the defendants' arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct, the plaintiffs' opposition frames the issue in the context of reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. In the complaint, however, Magaret, John, and Paul do not assert claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Instead, at Counts, X, XI, and XII, they assert claims against Read for negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress. Thus, in ruling upon this motion, the court does not impute an additional cause of action for Margaret, John, and Paul that is not included in the complaint. As discussed below, Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

mobile device capable of communicating and cellphones used by Karen Read."[9] He filed a return of the search warrant on January 24, 2024.

Tully submitted an affidavit in support of the search warrant application. The affidavit comprises thirty-one pages and discusses Read's communications regarding JJ's death. Briefly stated, the affidavit largely describes actions by a local blogger, Aidan Kearney, who runs a series of social media websites under the name "Turtleboy."

The affidavit states that Kearney posted articles on social media accounts that reflected personal attacks on civilian witnesses, members of their families, and their friends. The affidavit also states that throughout various postings and videos, Kearney identified several individuals who socialized with JJ and Read, stated that they, not Read, were responsible for JJ's murder, and encouraged his social media followers to contact and harass these individuals. Additionally, the affidavit references certain comments Kearney directed to the O'Keefe family:

> "How much slack are we supposed to give you [John O'Keefe's family] . . . the time period for the grief, whatever, that we are giving you, like we are not going after you because of the grief, that is expired. It's expired because you're trying to send an innocent woman to jail for the rest of her life . . . I don't feel bad for you anymore.

Plaintiffs' Opposition, Exhibit A, paragraph 39.

Per the affidavit, Read communicated with Kearney through an intermediary, Natalie Wiweke Berhsneider. Through this intermediary, Read gave Kearney information concerning her case, some of which was potentially not available to the public, which Kearney then used in his social media postings. Read also shared personal information and pictures of many civilian individuals for whom Kearney argued were responsible for JJ's death.

[9] The court acknowledges that the substance of the search warrant affidavit is highly disputed. The court's references to such affidavit are viewed through the lens of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, which requires the court to view facts and draw inferences in the plaintiffs' favor.

Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death.[10] Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had "expired" for "going after" the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard, the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress.

Primarily, the defendants' motions set forth generalized legal statements for extreme and outrageous conduct. As to a substantive argument, Read cites to Polay v. McMahon, 468 Mass. 379 (2014). Polay is arguably similarly because it dealt with "(1) filing false police reports and harassment prevention petitions against the plaintiffs; (2) verbally attacking the plaintiffs; and (3) monitoring and recording the plaintiffs' home on a continuous basis." Id. at 386. The SJC in Polay held that such action did not rise to the level of extreme and outrageous conduct. The court acknowledges that Polay shares parallels as to a dispute between individuals which escalated into allegedly harassing behaviors. However, given the extensive scope of media scrutiny and Read's relationship with Kearney, as alleged in the complaint and search warrant affidavit, the facts of this case rise above those at issue in Polay because of their public and pervasive nature.

[10] In making this assessment, the court is not ruling on whether Read's "narrative" was true or false. As with its consideration of the search warrant affidavit, the court is exercising its legal authority regarding the instant motions, which is limited to applying a plausibility standard with facts and inferences viewed in the plaintiffs' favor.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct.

E. Claims Asserted by Kayley Furbush

The defendants argue that the complaint does not assert sufficient facts that Kayley suffered emotional distress, and that it does not describe which conduct applies to which claim. As discussed above, Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress must be dismissed for failure to state a viable claim. However, consistent with Margaret's, John's, and Paul's claims, Kayley was also plausibly distressed by the public and pervasive nature of Read's alleged false narrative. The alleged facts surrounding Kayley's interactions with Read in the early morning hours on January 29, 2022, can also be plausibly characterized as extreme and outrageous. Such determination supports Kayley's claim for reckless infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. A claim for intentional infliction of emotion distress requires sufficient averments that Read "intended to inflict emotional distress or that [she] knew or should have known that emotional distress was the likely result of [her] conduct." Agis v. Howard Johnson Co., 371 Mass. 140, 144–145 (1976). With reference to the specific allegations of the complaint, Read's motion states that "Defendant's questioning what happened during a phone call with third parties, even if in Kayley Furbush's presence, is also not actionable conduct." This does not convey the full scope of what occurred during the early morning hours of January 29, 2022, in the manner alleged in the complaint. Instead, the complaint plausibly pleads that Read made multiple distressing calls about JJ's physical condition, namely being struck by Read's vehicle or

Superior Court - Plymouth

by a snowplow. Moreover, Read made these statements upon waking Kayley up at 4:30 a.m., which plausibly contributed to the distressing nature of that interaction.

Even if this court were to accept Read's position that she was merely engaging in telephone conversations, "[c]onduct otherwise reasonable may become tortious when directed at an individual known to be particularly susceptible to infliction of emotional distress." Boyle v. Wenk, 378 Mass. 592, 596 (1979). At time of this interaction, it can be inferred that Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent. Given such status, Kayley would be particularly vulnerable to distress caused by an additional loss of a parental figure. Thus, based upon Kayley's vulnerability and susceptibility, Read, at a minimum, knew or should have known that her conduct would cause Kayley to suffer emotional distress. This plausibly supports a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions to dismiss are DENIED as to their arguments regarding the sufficiency of Kayley's claims.

ORDER

Wherefore, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to their claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

NORFOLK, ss. SUPERIOR COURT

Commonwealth v. Karen Read

Order on Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order

Before the Court is Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order Regarding Sharing of Cell Phone Data. After a hearing on March 28th, 2025, and a review of the submissions related thereto, the Motion is ALLOWED in part.

The Intervenor has raised significant concerns regarding confidentiality related to the Commonwealth's prosecution of Mr. Kearney in 2382-cr-00313 - specifically, his concerns over law enforcement's use and/or dissemination of data obtained by search warrant and extracted from Mr. Kearney's cell phones. The Court deems Intervenor's concerns sufficient to warrant further Court action, however, only as it pertains to data that is being produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 order in this case [Dkt. 615] , and only as it relates to the above-captioned case (2282-cr-00117). The Court acknowledges that other investigative materials or discovery beyond that covered by this Order are already the subject of the Court's prior Order [Dkt. 555] concerning counsel's obligations. And, Intervenor Kearney has also moved for an identical Protective Order in the pending case in which he is a Defendant (2382-cr-00313); that Motion is not currently before this Court.

With regard to the data extracted from Mr. Kearney's phones and produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 Order (the "DATA"), the Court ORDERS:

1. All agents of the Commonwealth, including but not limited to any members of any law enforcement agency or agent or contractor thereof, shall maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant.

2. This protective order shall take effect when entered and shall remain in effect unless terminated by entry of a Court Order.
3. Any person who violates this Order shall be in contempt of Court.

SO ORDERED this 31st day of March 2025.

Re: Paul O'Keefe et al. v. C&C Hospitality, LLC et al., Plymouth Superior Court, Civil Action No. 2483-CV-00692

Dear Mr. Diller:

I write on behalf of the Norfolk District Attorney's Office ("NDAO") in response to the subpoena that you issued in the above-referenced action on February 25, 2026, requesting records and access to Karen Read's cell phones; records of communications, including emails by or to Karen Read and/or Aidan Kearney; and records pertaining to the prosecution of Aidan Kearney. Pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1), this letter serves as the NDAO's written objection to the subpoena.

The NDAO objects to your requests on the grounds that they are overbroad, unduly burdensome, costly, and seek information that is publicly available. See Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (c) (for good cause shown the court should protect record holders from undue burden or expense, particularly when the material is available from some other source, duplicative, unduly cumulative, and in considering the importance of the requested material in resolving the issues); Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4) (additional considerations to the burdens of producing electronically stored data). The NDAO, a non-party record holder, emphasizes the undue burden particularly where the majority of the requests are obtainable from another source, namely defendant Karen Read. See generally Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (NDAO Notices of Discovery 34, 35, 47).

The NDAO objects to producing any information that would jeopardize pending criminal investigations; whose disclosure is proscribed by law, including grand jury materials, and documents that are sealed, impounded, subject to protective orders, or would contravene court orders, including previously raised confidentiality concerns and pending criminal cases. See Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (docket entries 636, 650); Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088] (docket -00313 entries 22, 47, 61, 62, 76).[1]

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Moreover, your request no. 5 and no. 12 appear to contravene the Plymouth Superior Court's March 1, 2026 order to the "Plaintiff's Emergency Moton for Temporary Restraining Order Pursuant to Rule 65 to Prevent Release of Evidence" (Gildea, J.) as well as the Plaintiff's pending request to intervene in Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088], where the issue of access to cellphones seized from Karen Read is pending a decision of the Court (Krupp, J.).

The NDAO objects to the subpoena to the extent that it calls for the production of materials that are protected by the work-product doctrine, the attorney-client privilege, or other applicable protections, privileges, or immunities against disclosure, including but not limited to internal communications and notes containing attorney work product and/or mental impressions. The NDAO further objects to searching sources of electronically stored information that are not reasonably accessible without the investment of significant time or expense. Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4).

Sincerely,

/s/ Laura A. McLaughlin

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO COMPEL RESPONSES TO PLAINTIFFS' SUPPLEMENTAL KEEPER OF RECORDS SUBPOENA FROM AIDAN KEARNEY

NOW COME the Plaintiffs in the above-captioned matter, and respectfully request that this Honorable Court, pursuant to Rule 45 of the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure and other relevant rules governing discovery, issue an order compelling Aidan Kearney to provide responses and documents to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026. As of the date of service, Plaintiffs have yet to receive responses, objections, or any request for extension from Kearney.

I. RELEVANT BACKGROUND

On April 21, 2026, Plaintiffs served a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena on Aidan Kearney. Responses were due by April 30, 2026. EXHIBIT A. To date, Kearney has made no effort to respond, object, or request an extension. This Subpoena is directly tied to Plaintiffs'

underlying civil action filed on August 23, 2024, against Defendants Karen Read, C.F. McCarthy's, and Waterfall Bar & Grill seeking damages arising from the death of John O'Keefe III. The Complaint asserts claims against Defendant Karen Read for wrongful death (Count III), negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress (Counts X-XII), and reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress (Count XIII). EXHIBIT B.

Central to Plaintiffs' emotional distress claims is the allegation that Karen Read, acting through Aidan Kearney, orchestrated a coordinated public campaign to promote a false narrative surrounding John O'Keefe's death. Kearney, a blogger operating under the pseudonym "Turtleboy," served as Read's agent, mouthpiece, and primary instrumentality in disseminating this harmful content. Communications between Read and Kearney are therefore essential to proving the emotional distress claims.

On August 12, 2025, Karen Read filed a partial motion to dismiss. In ruling on said motion, the Court found the allegations sufficiently plausible to survive dismissal, stating:

> "When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death. Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had 'expired' for 'going after' the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress." EXHIBIT C.

In denying the motion to dismiss, Judge O'Shea endorsed the plausibility of the O'Keefe family's infliction-of-emotional-distress claims, finding that sufficient facts exist to support these claim. These claims remain active today and warrant full discovery.

Separate from this civil action, the Norfolk Grand Jury indicted Kearney on nine counts of witness intimidation, five counts of illegal picketing of a witness, and three counts of conspiracy

to intimidate a witness. The Norfolk District Attorney's Office has conducted criminal investigations into both Read and Kearney. Through these investigations, the NDAO obtained forensic extractions from cell phones belonging to both Read[1] and Kearney. These extractions contain the very communications between Read and Kearney that Plaintiffs require to prove their claims.

On March 31, 2025, the Court entered a Protective Order governing the sharing of Kearney's cell phone data, directing all agents of the Commonwealth to "maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant." See EXHIBIT D.

Plaintiffs have pursued every available avenue to obtain the discoverable materials in the NDAO's possession. On February 24, 2026, Plaintiffs served the NDAO with a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena seeking materials related to Kearney. On March 6, 2026, the NDAO objected, citing the Protective Order and confidentiality concerns as the primary impediments to production. See EXHIBIT E. Notably, the NDAO did not assert that the materials lack relevance or discoverability. On March 4, 2026, Plaintiffs filed a Motion to Intervene in Commonwealth v. Kearney for the limited purpose of expanding the Protective Order to permit production of these materials to Plaintiffs. That motion remains pending.

Despite these efforts, Plaintiffs still lack access to communications and materials. Kearney's complete failure to respond to the Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026, necessitates this motion.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

[1] Plaintiffs have reached an agreement with Read's counsel regarding the production and handling of the phone extraction data pertaining to Read.

Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C) authorizes a subpoena commanding a non-party to produce documents. Where a non-party fails to respond, the party serving the subpoena may move for an order compelling production. Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B). "Failure by any person without adequate excuse to obey a subpoena served upon that person may be deemed a contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued." Mass. R. Civ. P. 45.

In interpreting the scope of discovery under the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure, the Supreme Judicial Court has followed the approach taken under the federal rules, and defined "relevant" evidence "broadly to encompass any matter that bears on, or that reasonably could lead to other matter that could bear on, any issue that is or may be in the case... discovery is not limited to issues raised by the pleadings, for discovery itself is designed to help define and clarify the issues...Nor is discovery limited to the merits of a case, for a variety of fact-oriented issues may arise during litigation that are not related to the merits." Cronin v. Strayer, 392 Mass. 525, 534 (1984), quoting Oppenheimer Fund, Inc. v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 351 (1978).

As such, discovery should ordinarily be allowed under the concept of relevancy unless it is clear that the information sought can have no possible bearing upon the subject matter of the action. See E.A. Miller, Inc., v. South Shore Bank, 405 Mass. 95, 101 (1989) (holding that litigants should be afforded an opportunity for discovery where a party has “made even a minimal showing warranting the requested discovery").

III. ARGUMENT

A. The Requested Materials Are Directly Relevant And Crucial To Plaintiffs’ Emotional Distress Claims

The materials sought through the supplemental keeper of records subpoena are directly relevant to Plaintiffs’ claims. Plaintiffs’ emotional distress claims rest on Karen Read’s coordinated campaign with Aidan Kearney to promote a false narrative and pit the Read’s against the

O'Keefe's. Publicly communicating this false narrative directly resulted in frustrating justice for John O'Keefe and caused additional harm to the already grieving O'Keefe family. Karen Read's primary vehicle for disseminating this false narrative was her relationship with Aidan Kearney, who operates under the pseudonym "Turtleboy." Aidan Kearney manages various websites and social media accounts through which he publishes the inflammatory and harmful content at Karen Read's direction and active collaboration. As part of its investigation into Aidan Kearney, the Commonwealth obtained search warrants and ultimately seized multiple electronic devices including cell phones, laptops, cameras, SD cards, etc. The Plaintiffs have a good faith basis to believe that the data contained on these electronic devices will prove Plaintiffs' allegations and multiple aspects of their claims. Without relief, Plaintiffs cannot timely authenticate these materials.

B. The Plaintiffs Require These Materials Urgently In Order To Conduct Discovery In Their Civil Case

With the discovery deadline fast approaching in the civil matter, the Plaintiffs have an urgent need for these materials. Plaintiffs have noticed the deposition of Aidan Kearney and Karen Read and require communications and device extractions to effectively for and conduct that deposition. Additionally, Plaintiffs require these materials to prepare their cases. Without such materials the Plaintiffs will suffer prejudice.

IV. REQUESTED RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Honorable Court: (1) GRANT this Motion to Compel; (2) ORDER Aidan Kearney to produce all documents and materials responsive

to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena within ten (10) days of the Court's Order; and (3) GRANT such other and further relief as this Court deems just and appropriate.

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER ON DEFENDANTS' PARTIAL MOTIONS TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO MASS. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6) (Paper Nos: 37, 37.3, 37.4)

This matter arises out of the January 29, 2022, death of John Joseph O'Keefe, III ("JJ").[4] Defendant and moving party, Karen Read ("Read"), was previously charged with several crimes in connection with JJ's death. During the pendency of Read's criminal case, plaintiffs Margaret O'Keefe ("Margaret," JJ's mother), John O'Keefe, II ("John," JJ's father), Paul O'Keefe ("Paul," JJ's brother and personal representative of JJ's estate), and Kayley Furbursh ("Kayley," JJ's niece) filed this civil lawsuit asserting claims against Read for Wrongful Death (Count III), Negligent and/or Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts X, XI, and XII), and Negligent, Reckless, and/or Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress (Count XIII).

The plaintiffs also asserted claims for Wrongful Death (Counts I and II), and Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, and IX) against C&C Hospitality,

LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's, G&S Hospitality, LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's (collectively, "C.F. McCarthy's") and Waterfall Bar & Grill, LTD d/b/a Waterfall Bar & Grill ("Waterfall"). These defendants are corporate entities that owned bars that allegedly served Read alcohol in the hours leading up to the events at issue.

Read filed a motion to dismiss all emotional distress claims asserted against her. C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall joined on Read's motion to dismiss, similarly seeking to dismiss the emotional distress claims asserted against them.[5] For the foregoing reasons, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to Kayley's claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

BACKGROUND

The following facts are drawn from the plaintiffs' complaint and accepted as true for purposes of this motion.[6]

On January 28, 2022, Read patronized C.F. McCarthy's from 8:51 p.m. through 10:29 p.m. She consumed seven alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Read then patronized Waterfall from 10:54 p.m. that night through 12:10 a.m. the next morning. She consumed two alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Her blood was drawn on January 29, 2022, and testing revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

[5] C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall's motions are technically motions for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12(c), as they previously filed answers to the plaintiffs' complaint. However, a "defendant's rule 12(c) motion is actually a motion to dismiss that argues that the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted" (quotations omitted). Jarosz v. Palmer, 436 Mass. 526, 529 (2002). Thus, the court will apply the same legal framework for C.F. McCarthy and Waterfall's motions as that used in assessing Read's motion to dismiss.

revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

During the timeframe relevant to the instant lawsuit, Read and JJ were in a dating relationship. JJ was with Read that evening, and they had been arguing. After leaving Waterfall, Read got into a motor vehicle with JJ and drove to a residence at 34 Fairview Road in Canton while intoxicated. After arriving at the residence, JJ exited Read's vehicle. Read then drove her vehicle and hit JJ. JJ was knocked to the ground, suffering serious injuries that ultimately led to his death.

Read fled the scene and drove to JJ's residence at 1 Meadows Avenue in Canton. At approximately 4:30 a.m. on January 29, 2022, Read woke up JJ's niece, Kayley, who lived with JJ. Read began discussing JJ's death with Kayley and talked about striking him with her vehicle. "Kayley heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Read also called multiple people between 4:30 a.m. and 5:00 a.m. on January 29, 2022, while in Kayley's presence. At the time, Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who had previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent.

Read left JJ's residence at approximately 5:07 a.m. on January 29, 2022. She arrived at 34 Fairview Road at approximately 6:03 a.m. and discovered JJ buried in snow. JJ was pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 am. "At relevant times after 7:50 am on January 29, 2022, defendant Read went to the grieving house of JJ, feigned comfort to JJ's family, and used the opportunity to, amongst other things, remove the offending weapon, her vehicle, and/or destroy relevant evidence." Complaint, paragraph 47.

Subsequently, over the course of several years, Read made many public statements. "She knowingly and deliberately changed her story and fabricated a conspiracy knowing the same to be false. She publicly communicated this false 'narrative' thereby frustrating Justice for JJ. Such false narrative caused the Plaintiffs aggravated emotional distress." Complaint, paragraph 52.

DISCUSSION

The defendants argue that the emotional distress claims should be dismissed for multiple reasons: 1) distress claims are subsumed by the wrongful death statute; 2) the plaintiffs' claimed distress was not contemporaneous with JJ allegedly being struck by Read's vehicle; 3) there was no extreme or outrageous conduct direct towards the plaintiff that resulted in severe harm; and 4) Kayley's claims for emotional distress fail as a matter of law. The court will address each of these arguments in turn.

A. Standard of Review

To survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12 (b)(6), a complaint must contain "factual 'allegations plausibly suggesting (not merely consistent with)' an entitlement to relief." Iannacchino v. Ford Motor Co., 451 Mass. 623, 636 (2008), quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 557 (2007). The factual allegations must be "more than labels and conclusions" and "raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Iannacchino, 451 Mass. at 636, quoting Bell Atl. Corp., 550 U.S. at 555. In assessing a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6), the court accepts as true the well-pleaded factual allegations in the complaint and draws all reasonable inferences in the claimant's favor. See Fairhaven Hous. Auth. v. Commonwealth, 493 Mass. 27, 30 (2023).

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

The extent of the court's review generally is limited to the factual allegations in the complaint and any facts contained in any attached exhibits. See Eigerman v. Putnam Invs., Inc., 450 Mass. 281, 285 n.6 (2007). However, the court also may consider matters of public record, items in the record of the case, and documents cited and relied upon in the complaint. Schaer v. Brandeis Univ., 432 Mass. 474, 477 (2000).

B. Wrongful Death Statute and Emotional Distress Claims

The defendants argue that the plaintiffs' emotional distress claims are subsumed by the Massachusetts wrongful death statute, G. L. c. 229, § 2. Among other provisions, the statute identifies the following as recoverable damages:

> "the fair monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to receive the damages recovered, as provided in section one, including but not limited to compensation for the loss of the reasonably expected net income, services, protection, care, assistance, society, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice of the decedent to the persons entitled to the damages recovered."

G. L. c. 229, § 2.

Thus, the wrongful death statute contemplates some degree of emotional distress arising from a decedent's death. It addresses the loss of care, assistance, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice, all of which go to the relationship between a decedent and individuals pursuing claims under the statute.

The defendants argue that the independent emotional distress claims asserted by the plaintiffs are redundant to the plaintiffs' wrongful death assertions and consequently should be dismissed. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Cimino v. Milford Keg, Inc., 385 Mass. 323 (1982), the Supreme Judicial Court ("SJC") held:

> "The defendant's . . argument that the plaintiff's claim for emotional distress is 'preempted' by the wrongful death action (G.L. c. 229, s 2) misconstrues the common law cause of action for emotional distress. Emotional distress, as the concept has evolved in this Commonwealth, is a severe psychological shock directly resulting from

> experiencing or witnessing the effects of a defendant's conduct. . . . A claim for damages based on emotional distress does not include an administrator's claim for loss of consortium-which will be present in every wrongful death action such as this. Since emotional distress is a wrong to the plaintiff distinct from that done to [the decedent] and the statutory beneficiaries of the decedent, it is not a duplicative remedy and is not 'preempted' by the wrongful death statute." (quotations omitted).

Cimino, 385 Mass. at 334.

Here, the plaintiffs' direct emotional distress claims go beyond the mere fact that JJ died. Instead, they point to the alleged wrongs they suffered in their individual capacities. They aver that they suffered such harm in observing JJ just after his death, having Read attend family events in the immediate aftermath of JJ's death, and Read developing a public and false narrative that frustrated justice for JJ. These claims are separate from JJ's death and instead are specific to the distress the plaintiffs assert in their individual capacities, rather than their status as relatives of JJ pursuant to the wrongful death statute.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding emotional distress and the wrongful death statute.

C. Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress because their alleged distress did not occur contemporaneously with the accident giving rise to JJ's death. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Stockdale v. Bird & Son, Inc., 399 Mass. 249 (1987), the SJC stated:

> "In Dziokonski v. Babineau, 375 Mass. 555, 568 (1978), we held that 'allegations concerning a parent who sustains substantial physical harm as a result of severe mental distress over some peril or harm to his minor child caused by the defendant's negligence state a claim for which relief might be granted, where the parent either witnesses the accident or soon comes on the scene while the child is still there.' Two years later, in Ferriter v. Daniel O'Connell's Sons, 381 Mass. 507, 518, we held that the wife and children of an employee allegedly injured through his employer's negligence could maintain an action for negligent infliction of emotional distress, even though they first observed the employee in a hospital immediately after the accident. We said that '[a]

Superior Court - Plymouth

> plaintiff who rushes onto the accident scene and finds a loved one injured has no greater entitlement to compensation for that shock than a plaintiff who rushes instead to the hospital. So long as the shock follows closely on the heels of the accident, the two types of injury are equally foreseeable.' Id."

Stockdale, 399 Mass. at 251.

Thus, a family member is entitled to emotional distress damages when they either witness the decedent's actual injury or "come upon the injured [kin] promptly after the injury." Nancy P. v. D'Amato, 401 Mass. 516, 520 (1988).

The plaintiffs allege that Read discovered JJ buried in the snow at approximately 6:03 a.m. on January 29, 2022, and he was subsequently pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 a.m. that day. Margaret, John, and Paul each aver that they "learned of JJ's admission to [ ] Hospital immediately and came upon JJ's body at the Hospital shortly thereafter." Complaint, paragraphs 82, 88, 95, 102, 109, 116, 123, 131, and 139. Against this backdrop, the complaint alleges sufficient facts that JJ's parents and brother arrived promptly at the hospital upon learning of JJ's death and thus have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley's negligent infliction of emotional distress claim stands on different footing, however. She alleges that she "learned of JJ's death or injury when defendant Read woke Kayley up approximately 4:30 am on January 29, 2022." Complaint, paragraph 147. Further, Kayley alleges she "heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Lastly, Kayley states that, as a result of Read's conversations in her presence, she "perceived the injuries caused to her guardian, uncle JJ, and perceived the injury producing event." Complaint, paragraph 151.

Taken together, the complaint does not allege that Kayley learned of JJ's death or injury at 4:30 a.m., but instead learned he was maybe injured at that time. There are also no averments

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth

regarding when and the circumstances under which she first observed the deceased JJ. Her averments concern her perceptions of JJ's injuries, rather than her actual observations.

The case law cited by the parties addresses scenarios whereby a family member has observed another family member actually being injured or otherwise suffering shock after promptly encountering the injured family member. Kayley cannot make this showing. In making this assessment, the court acknowledges the following case law cited in the plaintiffs' opposition:

> "the determination whether there should be liability for the injury sustained depends on a number of factors, such as where, when, and how the injury to the third person entered into the consciousness of the claimant, and what degree there was of familial or other relationship between the claimant and the third person" (emphasis in original).

Dziokonski, 375 Mass. at 568.

Such language is inapposite here, as the Dziokonski court's decision turned on liability for negligent infliction of emotional distress and the parameters for when a family member arrived at the scene of an accident giving rise to a relative's injury. Stockdale extended the scope of Dziokonski to family members who promptly arrive at a hospital. Neither of these cases, nor any other cases provided by the parties, creates authority to find negligent infliction of emotional distress for family members who learn of a death beyond this prompt timeframe. Thus, Dziokonski's language about when JJ's injury "entered into the consciousness of the claimant" does not support Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to Margaret, John, and Paul's claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress and ALLOWED as to Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

D. Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for reckless infliction of emotional distress because there was no extreme or outrageous conduct directed towards them that resulted in severe harm.[7] In the context of such claims, conduct is "extreme and outrageous" if it "goes beyond all possible bounds of decency, and is regarded as atrocious, and utterly intolerable in a civilized community" (quotations omitted). Roman v. Trustees of Tufts Coll., 461 Mass. 707, 718 (2012). The standard of extreme and outrageous conduct is a high bar. Such conduct means more than "workaday insults, annoyances, or even threats and petty oppressions . . . . It means, for example, a high order of reckless ruthlessness or deliberate malevolence that . . . is simply intolerable" (quotations omitted). Conway v. Smerling, 37 Mass. App. Ct. 1, 8 (1994).

The plaintiffs allege that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death, which caused them to suffer emotional distress. In support of their opposition to the instant motions, they have produced a search warrant affidavit, which is a matter of public record that the court may consider in assessing whether the complaint plausibly suggests an entitlement to relief.[8]

According to the search warrant materials, on January 22, 2024, Detective Lieutenant Brian Tully ("Tully") of the Massachusetts State Police applied for a warrant to seize "[a]ny

[7] With reference to the defendants' arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct, the plaintiffs' opposition frames the issue in the context of reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. In the complaint, however, Magaret, John, and Paul do not assert claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Instead, at Counts, X, XI, and XII, they assert claims against Read for negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress. Thus, in ruling upon this motion, the court does not impute an additional cause of action for Margaret, John, and Paul that is not included in the complaint. As discussed below, Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

mobile device capable of communicating and cellphones used by Karen Read."[9] He filed a return of the search warrant on January 24, 2024.

Tully submitted an affidavit in support of the search warrant application. The affidavit comprises thirty-one pages and discusses Read's communications regarding JJ's death. Briefly stated, the affidavit largely describes actions by a local blogger, Aidan Kearney, who runs a series of social media websites under the name "Turtleboy."

The affidavit states that Kearney posted articles on social media accounts that reflected personal attacks on civilian witnesses, members of their families, and their friends. The affidavit also states that throughout various postings and videos, Kearney identified several individuals who socialized with JJ and Read, stated that they, not Read, were responsible for JJ's murder, and encouraged his social media followers to contact and harass these individuals. Additionally, the affidavit references certain comments Kearney directed to the O'Keefe family:

> "How much slack are we supposed to give you [John O'Keefe's family] . . . the time period for the grief, whatever, that we are giving you, like we are not going after you because of the grief, that is expired. It's expired because you're trying to send an innocent woman to jail for the rest of her life . . . I don't feel bad for you anymore.

Plaintiffs' Opposition, Exhibit A, paragraph 39.

Per the affidavit, Read communicated with Kearney through an intermediary, Natalie Wiweke Berhsneider. Through this intermediary, Read gave Kearney information concerning her case, some of which was potentially not available to the public, which Kearney then used in his social media postings. Read also shared personal information and pictures of many civilian individuals for whom Kearney argued were responsible for JJ's death.

[9] The court acknowledges that the substance of the search warrant affidavit is highly disputed. The court's references to such affidavit are viewed through the lens of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, which requires the court to view facts and draw inferences in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death.[10] Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had "expired" for "going after" the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard, the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress.

Primarily, the defendants' motions set forth generalized legal statements for extreme and outrageous conduct. As to a substantive argument, Read cites to Polay v. McMahon, 468 Mass. 379 (2014). Polay is arguably similarly because it dealt with "(1) filing false police reports and harassment prevention petitions against the plaintiffs; (2) verbally attacking the plaintiffs; and (3) monitoring and recording the plaintiffs' home on a continuous basis." Id. at 386. The SJC in Polay held that such action did not rise to the level of extreme and outrageous conduct. The court acknowledges that Polay shares parallels as to a dispute between individuals which escalated into allegedly harassing behaviors. However, given the extensive scope of media scrutiny and Read's relationship with Kearney, as alleged in the complaint and search warrant affidavit, the facts of this case rise above those at issue in Polay because of their public and pervasive nature.

[10] In making this assessment, the court is not ruling on whether Read's "narrative" was true or false. As with its consideration of the search warrant affidavit, the court is exercising its legal authority regarding the instant motions, which is limited to applying a plausibility standard with facts and inferences viewed in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct.

E. Claims Asserted by Kayley Furbush

The defendants argue that the complaint does not assert sufficient facts that Kayley suffered emotional distress, and that it does not describe which conduct applies to which claim. As discussed above, Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress must be dismissed for failure to state a viable claim. However, consistent with Margaret's, John's, and Paul's claims, Kayley was also plausibly distressed by the public and pervasive nature of Read's alleged false narrative. The alleged facts surrounding Kayley's interactions with Read in the early morning hours on January 29, 2022, can also be plausibly characterized as extreme and outrageous. Such determination supports Kayley's claim for reckless infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. A claim for intentional infliction of emotion distress requires sufficient averments that Read "intended to inflict emotional distress or that [she] knew or should have known that emotional distress was the likely result of [her] conduct." Agis v. Howard Johnson Co., 371 Mass. 140, 144–145 (1976). With reference to the specific allegations of the complaint, Read's motion states that "Defendant's questioning what happened during a phone call with third parties, even if in Kayley Furbush's presence, is also not actionable conduct." This does not convey the full scope of what occurred during the early morning hours of January 29, 2022, in the manner alleged in the complaint. Instead, the complaint plausibly pleads that Read made multiple distressing calls about JJ's physical condition, namely being struck by Read's vehicle or

Superior Court - Plymouth

by a snowplow. Moreover, Read made these statements upon waking Kayley up at 4:30 a.m., which plausibly contributed to the distressing nature of that interaction.

Even if this court were to accept Read's position that she was merely engaging in telephone conversations, "[c]onduct otherwise reasonable may become tortious when directed at an individual known to be particularly susceptible to infliction of emotional distress." Boyle v. Wenk, 378 Mass. 592, 596 (1979). At time of this interaction, it can be inferred that Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent. Given such status, Kayley would be particularly vulnerable to distress caused by an additional loss of a parental figure. Thus, based upon Kayley's vulnerability and susceptibility, Read, at a minimum, knew or should have known that her conduct would cause Kayley to suffer emotional distress. This plausibly supports a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions to dismiss are DENIED as to their arguments regarding the sufficiency of Kayley's claims.

ORDER

Wherefore, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to their claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

Commonwealth v. Karen Read

Order on Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order

Before the Court is Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order Regarding Sharing of Cell Phone Data. After a hearing on March 28th, 2025, and a review of the submissions related thereto, the Motion is ALLOWED in part.

The Intervenor has raised significant concerns regarding confidentiality related to the Commonwealth's prosecution of Mr. Kearney in 2382-cr-00313 - specifically, his concerns over law enforcement's use and/or dissemination of data obtained by search warrant and extracted from Mr. Kearney's cell phones. The Court deems Intervenor's concerns sufficient to warrant further Court action, however, only as it pertains to data that is being produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 order in this case [Dkt. 615] , and only as it relates to the above-captioned case (2282-cr-00117). The Court acknowledges that other investigative materials or discovery beyond that covered by this Order are already the subject of the Court's prior Order [Dkt. 555] concerning counsel's obligations. And, Intervenor Kearney has also moved for an identical Protective Order in the pending case in which he is a Defendant (2382-cr-00313); that Motion is not currently before this Court.

With regard to the data extracted from Mr. Kearney's phones and produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 Order (the "DATA"), the Court ORDERS:

1. All agents of the Commonwealth, including but not limited to any members of any law enforcement agency or agent or contractor thereof, shall maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant.

2. This protective order shall take effect when entered and shall remain in effect unless terminated by entry of a Court Order.
3. Any person who violates this Order shall be in contempt of Court.

SO ORDERED this 31st day of March 2025.

Re: Paul O'Keefe et al. v. C&C Hospitality, LLC et al., Plymouth Superior Court, Civil Action No. 2483-CV-00692

Dear Mr. Diller:

I write on behalf of the Norfolk District Attorney's Office ("NDAO") in response to the subpoena that you issued in the above-referenced action on February 25, 2026, requesting records and access to Karen Read's cell phones; records of communications, including emails by or to Karen Read and/or Aidan Kearney; and records pertaining to the prosecution of Aidan Kearney. Pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1), this letter serves as the NDAO's written objection to the subpoena.

The NDAO objects to your requests on the grounds that they are overbroad, unduly burdensome, costly, and seek information that is publicly available. See Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (c) (for good cause shown the court should protect record holders from undue burden or expense, particularly when the material is available from some other source, duplicative, unduly cumulative, and in considering the importance of the requested material in resolving the issues); Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4) (additional considerations to the burdens of producing electronically stored data). The NDAO, a non-party record holder, emphasizes the undue burden particularly where the majority of the requests are obtainable from another source, namely defendant Karen Read. See generally Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (NDAO Notices of Discovery 34, 35, 47).

The NDAO objects to producing any information that would jeopardize pending criminal investigations; whose disclosure is proscribed by law, including grand jury materials, and documents that are sealed, impounded, subject to protective orders, or would contravene court orders, including previously raised confidentiality concerns and pending criminal cases. See Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (docket entries 636, 650); Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088] (docket -00313 entries 22, 47, 61, 62, 76).[1]

Moreover, your request no. 5 and no. 12 appear to contravene the Plymouth Superior Court's March 1, 2026 order to the "Plaintiff's Emergency Moton for Temporary Restraining Order Pursuant to Rule 65 to Prevent Release of Evidence" (Gildea, J.) as well as the Plaintiff's pending request to intervene in Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088], where the issue of access to cellphones seized from Karen Read is pending a decision of the Court (Krupp, J.).

The NDAO objects to the subpoena to the extent that it calls for the production of materials that are protected by the work-product doctrine, the attorney-client privilege, or other applicable protections, privileges, or immunities against disclosure, including but not limited to internal communications and notes containing attorney work product and/or mental impressions. The NDAO further objects to searching sources of electronically stored information that are not reasonably accessible without the investment of significant time or expense. Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4).

Subject to the existing protective order of confidentiality and without waiving the foregoing objections, for your convenience the NDAO has attached the public court orders in Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] governing its decision. The NDAO is also producing a responsive motion transcript from December 17, 2024, in Kearney and a video clip of Karen Read, which was part of the video previously produced on January 9, 2026. Lastly, the NDAO has complied with request no. 10 as that material was denoted confidential and produced to the plaintiff and defendant Karen Read on January 9, 2026. The NDAO reserves all rights, including the right to recover its reasonable expenses in responding to the subpoena.

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO COMPEL RESPONSES TO PLAINTIFFS' SUPPLEMENTAL KEEPER OF RECORDS SUBPOENA FROM AIDAN KEARNEY

NOW COME the Plaintiffs in the above-captioned matter, and respectfully request that this Honorable Court, pursuant to Rule 45 of the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure and other relevant rules governing discovery, issue an order compelling Aidan Kearney to provide responses and documents to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026. As of the date of service, Plaintiffs have yet to receive responses, objections, or any request for extension from Kearney.

I. RELEVANT BACKGROUND

On April 21, 2026, Plaintiffs served a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena on Aidan Kearney. Responses were due by April 30, 2026. EXHIBIT A. To date, Kearney has made no effort to respond, object, or request an extension. This Subpoena is directly tied to Plaintiffs'

underlying civil action filed on August 23, 2024, against Defendants Karen Read, C.F. McCarthy's, and Waterfall Bar & Grill seeking damages arising from the death of John O'Keefe III. The Complaint asserts claims against Defendant Karen Read for wrongful death (Count III), negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress (Counts X-XII), and reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress (Count XIII). EXHIBIT B.

Central to Plaintiffs' emotional distress claims is the allegation that Karen Read, acting through Aidan Kearney, orchestrated a coordinated public campaign to promote a false narrative surrounding John O'Keefe's death. Kearney, a blogger operating under the pseudonym "Turtleboy," served as Read's agent, mouthpiece, and primary instrumentality in disseminating this harmful content. Communications between Read and Kearney are therefore essential to proving the emotional distress claims.

On August 12, 2025, Karen Read filed a partial motion to dismiss. In ruling on said motion, the Court found the allegations sufficiently plausible to survive dismissal, stating:

> "When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death. Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had 'expired' for 'going after' the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress." EXHIBIT C.

In denying the motion to dismiss, Judge O'Shea endorsed the plausibility of the O'Keefe family's infliction-of-emotional-distress claims, finding that sufficient facts exist to support these claim. These claims remain active today and warrant full discovery.

Separate from this civil action, the Norfolk Grand Jury indicted Kearney on nine counts of witness intimidation, five counts of illegal picketing of a witness, and three counts of conspiracy

to intimidate a witness. The Norfolk District Attorney's Office has conducted criminal investigations into both Read and Kearney. Through these investigations, the NDAO obtained forensic extractions from cell phones belonging to both Read[1] and Kearney. These extractions contain the very communications between Read and Kearney that Plaintiffs require to prove their claims.

On March 31, 2025, the Court entered a Protective Order governing the sharing of Kearney's cell phone data, directing all agents of the Commonwealth to "maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant." See EXHIBIT D.

Plaintiffs have pursued every available avenue to obtain the discoverable materials in the NDAO's possession. On February 24, 2026, Plaintiffs served the NDAO with a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena seeking materials related to Kearney. On March 6, 2026, the NDAO objected, citing the Protective Order and confidentiality concerns as the primary impediments to production. See EXHIBIT E. Notably, the NDAO did not assert that the materials lack relevance or discoverability. On March 4, 2026, Plaintiffs filed a Motion to Intervene in Commonwealth v. Kearney for the limited purpose of expanding the Protective Order to permit production of these materials to Plaintiffs. That motion remains pending.

Despite these efforts, Plaintiffs still lack access to communications and materials. Kearney's complete failure to respond to the Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026, necessitates this motion.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

[1] Plaintiffs have reached an agreement with Read's counsel regarding the production and handling of the phone extraction data pertaining to Read.

Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C) authorizes a subpoena commanding a non-party to produce documents. Where a non-party fails to respond, the party serving the subpoena may move for an order compelling production. Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B). "Failure by any person without adequate excuse to obey a subpoena served upon that person may be deemed a contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued." Mass. R. Civ. P. 45.

In interpreting the scope of discovery under the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure, the Supreme Judicial Court has followed the approach taken under the federal rules, and defined "relevant" evidence "broadly to encompass any matter that bears on, or that reasonably could lead to other matter that could bear on, any issue that is or may be in the case... discovery is not limited to issues raised by the pleadings, for discovery itself is designed to help define and clarify the issues...Nor is discovery limited to the merits of a case, for a variety of fact-oriented issues may arise during litigation that are not related to the merits." Cronin v. Strayer, 392 Mass. 525, 534 (1984), quoting Oppenheimer Fund, Inc. v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 351 (1978).

As such, discovery should ordinarily be allowed under the concept of relevancy unless it is clear that the information sought can have no possible bearing upon the subject matter of the action. See E.A. Miller, Inc., v. South Shore Bank, 405 Mass. 95, 101 (1989) (holding that litigants should be afforded an opportunity for discovery where a party has “made even a minimal showing warranting the requested discovery").

III. ARGUMENT

A. The Requested Materials Are Directly Relevant And Crucial To Plaintiffs’ Emotional Distress Claims

The materials sought through the supplemental keeper of records subpoena are directly relevant to Plaintiffs’ claims. Plaintiffs’ emotional distress claims rest on Karen Read’s coordinated campaign with Aidan Kearney to promote a false narrative and pit the Read’s against the

O'Keefe's. Publicly communicating this false narrative directly resulted in frustrating justice for John O'Keefe and caused additional harm to the already grieving O'Keefe family. Karen Read's primary vehicle for disseminating this false narrative was her relationship with Aidan Kearney, who operates under the pseudonym "Turtleboy." Aidan Kearney manages various websites and social media accounts through which he publishes the inflammatory and harmful content at Karen Read's direction and active collaboration. As part of its investigation into Aidan Kearney, the Commonwealth obtained search warrants and ultimately seized multiple electronic devices including cell phones, laptops, cameras, SD cards, etc. The Plaintiffs have a good faith basis to believe that the data contained on these electronic devices will prove Plaintiffs' allegations and multiple aspects of their claims. Without relief, Plaintiffs cannot timely authenticate these materials.

B. The Plaintiffs Require These Materials Urgently In Order To Conduct Discovery In Their Civil Case

With the discovery deadline fast approaching in the civil matter, the Plaintiffs have an urgent need for these materials. Plaintiffs have noticed the deposition of Aidan Kearney and Karen Read and require communications and device extractions to effectively for and conduct that deposition. Additionally, Plaintiffs require these materials to prepare their cases. Without such materials the Plaintiffs will suffer prejudice.

IV. REQUESTED RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Honorable Court: (1) GRANT this Motion to Compel; (2) ORDER Aidan Kearney to produce all documents and materials responsive

to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena within ten (10) days of the Court's Order; and (3) GRANT such other and further relief as this Court deems just and appropriate.

C & C HOSPITALITY, LLC d/b/a C. F. MCCARTHY'S & others[3]

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER ON DEFENDANTS' PARTIAL MOTIONS TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO MASS. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6) (Paper Nos: 37, 37.3, 37.4)

This matter arises out of the January 29, 2022, death of John Joseph O'Keefe, III ("JJ").[4] Defendant and moving party, Karen Read ("Read"), was previously charged with several crimes in connection with JJ's death. During the pendency of Read's criminal case, plaintiffs Margaret O'Keefe ("Margaret," JJ's mother), John O'Keefe, II ("John," JJ's father), Paul O'Keefe ("Paul," JJ's brother and personal representative of JJ's estate), and Kayley Furbursh ("Kayley," JJ's niece) filed this civil lawsuit asserting claims against Read for Wrongful Death (Count III), Negligent and/or Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts X, XI, and XII), and Negligent, Reckless, and/or Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress (Count XIII).

The plaintiffs also asserted claims for Wrongful Death (Counts I and II), and Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, and IX) against C&C Hospitality,

LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's, G&S Hospitality, LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's (collectively, "C.F. McCarthy's") and Waterfall Bar & Grill, LTD d/b/a Waterfall Bar & Grill ("Waterfall"). These defendants are corporate entities that owned bars that allegedly served Read alcohol in the hours leading up to the events at issue.

Read filed a motion to dismiss all emotional distress claims asserted against her. C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall joined on Read's motion to dismiss, similarly seeking to dismiss the emotional distress claims asserted against them.[5] For the foregoing reasons, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to Kayley's claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

BACKGROUND

The following facts are drawn from the plaintiffs' complaint and accepted as true for purposes of this motion.[6]

On January 28, 2022, Read patronized C.F. McCarthy's from 8:51 p.m. through 10:29 p.m. She consumed seven alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Read then patronized Waterfall from 10:54 p.m. that night through 12:10 a.m. the next morning. She consumed two alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Her blood was drawn on January 29, 2022, and testing revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

[5] C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall's motions are technically motions for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12(c), as they previously filed answers to the plaintiffs' complaint. However, a "defendant's rule 12(c) motion is actually a motion to dismiss that argues that the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted" (quotations omitted). Jarosz v. Palmer, 436 Mass. 526, 529 (2002). Thus, the court will apply the same legal framework for C.F. McCarthy and Waterfall's motions as that used in assessing Read's motion to dismiss.

revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

During the timeframe relevant to the instant lawsuit, Read and JJ were in a dating relationship. JJ was with Read that evening, and they had been arguing. After leaving Waterfall, Read got into a motor vehicle with JJ and drove to a residence at 34 Fairview Road in Canton while intoxicated. After arriving at the residence, JJ exited Read's vehicle. Read then drove her vehicle and hit JJ. JJ was knocked to the ground, suffering serious injuries that ultimately led to his death.

Read fled the scene and drove to JJ's residence at 1 Meadows Avenue in Canton. At approximately 4:30 a.m. on January 29, 2022, Read woke up JJ's niece, Kayley, who lived with JJ. Read began discussing JJ's death with Kayley and talked about striking him with her vehicle. "Kayley heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Read also called multiple people between 4:30 a.m. and 5:00 a.m. on January 29, 2022, while in Kayley's presence. At the time, Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who had previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent.

Read left JJ's residence at approximately 5:07 a.m. on January 29, 2022. She arrived at 34 Fairview Road at approximately 6:03 a.m. and discovered JJ buried in snow. JJ was pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 am. "At relevant times after 7:50 am on January 29, 2022, defendant Read went to the grieving house of JJ, feigned comfort to JJ's family, and used the opportunity to, amongst other things, remove the offending weapon, her vehicle, and/or destroy relevant evidence." Complaint, paragraph 47.

Subsequently, over the course of several years, Read made many public statements. "She knowingly and deliberately changed her story and fabricated a conspiracy knowing the same to be false. She publicly communicated this false 'narrative' thereby frustrating Justice for JJ. Such false narrative caused the Plaintiffs aggravated emotional distress." Complaint, paragraph 52.

DISCUSSION

The defendants argue that the emotional distress claims should be dismissed for multiple reasons: 1) distress claims are subsumed by the wrongful death statute; 2) the plaintiffs' claimed distress was not contemporaneous with JJ allegedly being struck by Read's vehicle; 3) there was no extreme or outrageous conduct direct towards the plaintiff that resulted in severe harm; and 4) Kayley's claims for emotional distress fail as a matter of law. The court will address each of these arguments in turn.

A. Standard of Review

To survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12 (b)(6), a complaint must contain "factual 'allegations plausibly suggesting (not merely consistent with)' an entitlement to relief." Iannacchino v. Ford Motor Co., 451 Mass. 623, 636 (2008), quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 557 (2007). The factual allegations must be "more than labels and conclusions" and "raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Iannacchino, 451 Mass. at 636, quoting Bell Atl. Corp., 550 U.S. at 555. In assessing a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6), the court accepts as true the well-pleaded factual allegations in the complaint and draws all reasonable inferences in the claimant's favor. See Fairhaven Hous. Auth. v. Commonwealth, 493 Mass. 27, 30 (2023).

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

The extent of the court's review generally is limited to the factual allegations in the complaint and any facts contained in any attached exhibits. See Eigerman v. Putnam Invs., Inc., 450 Mass. 281, 285 n.6 (2007). However, the court also may consider matters of public record, items in the record of the case, and documents cited and relied upon in the complaint. Schaer v. Brandeis Univ., 432 Mass. 474, 477 (2000).

B. Wrongful Death Statute and Emotional Distress Claims

The defendants argue that the plaintiffs' emotional distress claims are subsumed by the Massachusetts wrongful death statute, G. L. c. 229, § 2. Among other provisions, the statute identifies the following as recoverable damages:

> "the fair monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to receive the damages recovered, as provided in section one, including but not limited to compensation for the loss of the reasonably expected net income, services, protection, care, assistance, society, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice of the decedent to the persons entitled to the damages recovered."

G. L. c. 229, § 2.

Thus, the wrongful death statute contemplates some degree of emotional distress arising from a decedent's death. It addresses the loss of care, assistance, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice, all of which go to the relationship between a decedent and individuals pursuing claims under the statute.

The defendants argue that the independent emotional distress claims asserted by the plaintiffs are redundant to the plaintiffs' wrongful death assertions and consequently should be dismissed. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Cimino v. Milford Keg, Inc., 385 Mass. 323 (1982), the Supreme Judicial Court ("SJC") held:

> "The defendant's . . argument that the plaintiff's claim for emotional distress is 'preempted' by the wrongful death action (G.L. c. 229, s 2) misconstrues the common law cause of action for emotional distress. Emotional distress, as the concept has evolved in this Commonwealth, is a severe psychological shock directly resulting from

> experiencing or witnessing the effects of a defendant's conduct. . . . A claim for damages based on emotional distress does not include an administrator's claim for loss of consortium-which will be present in every wrongful death action such as this. Since emotional distress is a wrong to the plaintiff distinct from that done to [the decedent] and the statutory beneficiaries of the decedent, it is not a duplicative remedy and is not 'preempted' by the wrongful death statute." (quotations omitted).

Cimino, 385 Mass. at 334.

Here, the plaintiffs' direct emotional distress claims go beyond the mere fact that JJ died. Instead, they point to the alleged wrongs they suffered in their individual capacities. They aver that they suffered such harm in observing JJ just after his death, having Read attend family events in the immediate aftermath of JJ's death, and Read developing a public and false narrative that frustrated justice for JJ. These claims are separate from JJ's death and instead are specific to the distress the plaintiffs assert in their individual capacities, rather than their status as relatives of JJ pursuant to the wrongful death statute.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding emotional distress and the wrongful death statute.

C. Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress because their alleged distress did not occur contemporaneously with the accident giving rise to JJ's death. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Stockdale v. Bird & Son, Inc., 399 Mass. 249 (1987), the SJC stated:

> "In Dziokonski v. Babineau, 375 Mass. 555, 568 (1978), we held that 'allegations concerning a parent who sustains substantial physical harm as a result of severe mental distress over some peril or harm to his minor child caused by the defendant's negligence state a claim for which relief might be granted, where the parent either witnesses the accident or soon comes on the scene while the child is still there.' Two years later, in Ferriter v. Daniel O'Connell's Sons, 381 Mass. 507, 518, we held that the wife and children of an employee allegedly injured through his employer's negligence could maintain an action for negligent infliction of emotional distress, even though they first observed the employee in a hospital immediately after the accident. We said that '[a]

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

> plaintiff who rushes onto the accident scene and finds a loved one injured has no greater entitlement to compensation for that shock than a plaintiff who rushes instead to the hospital. So long as the shock follows closely on the heels of the accident, the two types of injury are equally foreseeable.' Id."

Stockdale, 399 Mass. at 251.

Thus, a family member is entitled to emotional distress damages when they either witness the decedent's actual injury or "come upon the injured [kin] promptly after the injury." Nancy P. v. D'Amato, 401 Mass. 516, 520 (1988).

The plaintiffs allege that Read discovered JJ buried in the snow at approximately 6:03 a.m. on January 29, 2022, and he was subsequently pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 a.m. that day. Margaret, John, and Paul each aver that they "learned of JJ's admission to [ ] Hospital immediately and came upon JJ's body at the Hospital shortly thereafter." Complaint, paragraphs 82, 88, 95, 102, 109, 116, 123, 131, and 139. Against this backdrop, the complaint alleges sufficient facts that JJ's parents and brother arrived promptly at the hospital upon learning of JJ's death and thus have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley's negligent infliction of emotional distress claim stands on different footing, however. She alleges that she "learned of JJ's death or injury when defendant Read woke Kayley up approximately 4:30 am on January 29, 2022." Complaint, paragraph 147. Further, Kayley alleges she "heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Lastly, Kayley states that, as a result of Read's conversations in her presence, she "perceived the injuries caused to her guardian, uncle JJ, and perceived the injury producing event." Complaint, paragraph 151.

Taken together, the complaint does not allege that Kayley learned of JJ's death or injury at 4:30 a.m., but instead learned he was maybe injured at that time. There are also no averments

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth

regarding when and the circumstances under which she first observed the deceased JJ. Her averments concern her perceptions of JJ's injuries, rather than her actual observations.

The case law cited by the parties addresses scenarios whereby a family member has observed another family member actually being injured or otherwise suffering shock after promptly encountering the injured family member. Kayley cannot make this showing. In making this assessment, the court acknowledges the following case law cited in the plaintiffs' opposition:

> "the determination whether there should be liability for the injury sustained depends on a number of factors, such as where, when, and how the injury to the third person entered into the consciousness of the claimant, and what degree there was of familial or other relationship between the claimant and the third person" (emphasis in original).

Dziokonski, 375 Mass. at 568.

Such language is inapposite here, as the Dziokonski court's decision turned on liability for negligent infliction of emotional distress and the parameters for when a family member arrived at the scene of an accident giving rise to a relative's injury. Stockdale extended the scope of Dziokonski to family members who promptly arrive at a hospital. Neither of these cases, nor any other cases provided by the parties, creates authority to find negligent infliction of emotional distress for family members who learn of a death beyond this prompt timeframe. Thus, Dziokonski's language about when JJ's injury "entered into the consciousness of the claimant" does not support Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to Margaret, John, and Paul's claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress and ALLOWED as to Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

D. Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for reckless infliction of emotional distress because there was no extreme or outrageous conduct directed towards them that resulted in severe harm.[7] In the context of such claims, conduct is "extreme and outrageous" if it "goes beyond all possible bounds of decency, and is regarded as atrocious, and utterly intolerable in a civilized community" (quotations omitted). Roman v. Trustees of Tufts Coll., 461 Mass. 707, 718 (2012). The standard of extreme and outrageous conduct is a high bar. Such conduct means more than "workaday insults, annoyances, or even threats and petty oppressions . . . . It means, for example, a high order of reckless ruthlessness or deliberate malevolence that . . . is simply intolerable" (quotations omitted). Conway v. Smerling, 37 Mass. App. Ct. 1, 8 (1994).

The plaintiffs allege that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death, which caused them to suffer emotional distress. In support of their opposition to the instant motions, they have produced a search warrant affidavit, which is a matter of public record that the court may consider in assessing whether the complaint plausibly suggests an entitlement to relief.[8]

According to the search warrant materials, on January 22, 2024, Detective Lieutenant Brian Tully ("Tully") of the Massachusetts State Police applied for a warrant to seize "[a]ny

[7] With reference to the defendants' arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct, the plaintiffs' opposition frames the issue in the context of reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. In the complaint, however, Magaret, John, and Paul do not assert claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Instead, at Counts, X, XI, and XII, they assert claims against Read for negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress. Thus, in ruling upon this motion, the court does not impute an additional cause of action for Margaret, John, and Paul that is not included in the complaint. As discussed below, Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

mobile device capable of communicating and cellphones used by Karen Read."[9] He filed a return of the search warrant on January 24, 2024.

Tully submitted an affidavit in support of the search warrant application. The affidavit comprises thirty-one pages and discusses Read's communications regarding JJ's death. Briefly stated, the affidavit largely describes actions by a local blogger, Aidan Kearney, who runs a series of social media websites under the name "Turtleboy."

The affidavit states that Kearney posted articles on social media accounts that reflected personal attacks on civilian witnesses, members of their families, and their friends. The affidavit also states that throughout various postings and videos, Kearney identified several individuals who socialized with JJ and Read, stated that they, not Read, were responsible for JJ's murder, and encouraged his social media followers to contact and harass these individuals. Additionally, the affidavit references certain comments Kearney directed to the O'Keefe family:

> "How much slack are we supposed to give you [John O'Keefe's family] . . . the time period for the grief, whatever, that we are giving you, like we are not going after you because of the grief, that is expired. It's expired because you're trying to send an innocent woman to jail for the rest of her life . . . I don't feel bad for you anymore.

Plaintiffs' Opposition, Exhibit A, paragraph 39.

Per the affidavit, Read communicated with Kearney through an intermediary, Natalie Wiweke Berhsneider. Through this intermediary, Read gave Kearney information concerning her case, some of which was potentially not available to the public, which Kearney then used in his social media postings. Read also shared personal information and pictures of many civilian individuals for whom Kearney argued were responsible for JJ's death.

[9] The court acknowledges that the substance of the search warrant affidavit is highly disputed. The court's references to such affidavit are viewed through the lens of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, which requires the court to view facts and draw inferences in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death.[10] Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had "expired" for "going after" the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard, the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress.

Primarily, the defendants' motions set forth generalized legal statements for extreme and outrageous conduct. As to a substantive argument, Read cites to Polay v. McMahon, 468 Mass. 379 (2014). Polay is arguably similarly because it dealt with "(1) filing false police reports and harassment prevention petitions against the plaintiffs; (2) verbally attacking the plaintiffs; and (3) monitoring and recording the plaintiffs' home on a continuous basis." Id. at 386. The SJC in Polay held that such action did not rise to the level of extreme and outrageous conduct. The court acknowledges that Polay shares parallels as to a dispute between individuals which escalated into allegedly harassing behaviors. However, given the extensive scope of media scrutiny and Read's relationship with Kearney, as alleged in the complaint and search warrant affidavit, the facts of this case rise above those at issue in Polay because of their public and pervasive nature.

[10] In making this assessment, the court is not ruling on whether Read's "narrative" was true or false. As with its consideration of the search warrant affidavit, the court is exercising its legal authority regarding the instant motions, which is limited to applying a plausibility standard with facts and inferences viewed in the plaintiffs' favor.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct.

E. Claims Asserted by Kayley Furbush

The defendants argue that the complaint does not assert sufficient facts that Kayley suffered emotional distress, and that it does not describe which conduct applies to which claim. As discussed above, Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress must be dismissed for failure to state a viable claim. However, consistent with Margaret's, John's, and Paul's claims, Kayley was also plausibly distressed by the public and pervasive nature of Read's alleged false narrative. The alleged facts surrounding Kayley's interactions with Read in the early morning hours on January 29, 2022, can also be plausibly characterized as extreme and outrageous. Such determination supports Kayley's claim for reckless infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. A claim for intentional infliction of emotion distress requires sufficient averments that Read "intended to inflict emotional distress or that [she] knew or should have known that emotional distress was the likely result of [her] conduct." Agis v. Howard Johnson Co., 371 Mass. 140, 144–145 (1976). With reference to the specific allegations of the complaint, Read's motion states that "Defendant's questioning what happened during a phone call with third parties, even if in Kayley Furbush's presence, is also not actionable conduct." This does not convey the full scope of what occurred during the early morning hours of January 29, 2022, in the manner alleged in the complaint. Instead, the complaint plausibly pleads that Read made multiple distressing calls about JJ's physical condition, namely being struck by Read's vehicle or

Superior Court - Plymouth

by a snowplow. Moreover, Read made these statements upon waking Kayley up at 4:30 a.m., which plausibly contributed to the distressing nature of that interaction.

Even if this court were to accept Read's position that she was merely engaging in telephone conversations, "[c]onduct otherwise reasonable may become tortious when directed at an individual known to be particularly susceptible to infliction of emotional distress." Boyle v. Wenk, 378 Mass. 592, 596 (1979). At time of this interaction, it can be inferred that Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent. Given such status, Kayley would be particularly vulnerable to distress caused by an additional loss of a parental figure. Thus, based upon Kayley's vulnerability and susceptibility, Read, at a minimum, knew or should have known that her conduct would cause Kayley to suffer emotional distress. This plausibly supports a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions to dismiss are DENIED as to their arguments regarding the sufficiency of Kayley's claims.

ORDER

Wherefore, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to their claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

NORFOLK, ss. SUPERIOR COURT

Commonwealth v. Karen Read

Order on Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order

Before the Court is Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order Regarding Sharing of Cell Phone Data. After a hearing on March 28th, 2025, and a review of the submissions related thereto, the Motion is ALLOWED in part.

The Intervenor has raised significant concerns regarding confidentiality related to the Commonwealth's prosecution of Mr. Kearney in 2382-cr-00313 - specifically, his concerns over law enforcement's use and/or dissemination of data obtained by search warrant and extracted from Mr. Kearney's cell phones. The Court deems Intervenor's concerns sufficient to warrant further Court action, however, only as it pertains to data that is being produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 order in this case [Dkt. 615] , and only as it relates to the above-captioned case (2282-cr-00117). The Court acknowledges that other investigative materials or discovery beyond that covered by this Order are already the subject of the Court's prior Order [Dkt. 555] concerning counsel's obligations. And, Intervenor Kearney has also moved for an identical Protective Order in the pending case in which he is a Defendant (2382-cr-00313); that Motion is not currently before this Court.

With regard to the data extracted from Mr. Kearney's phones and produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 Order (the "DATA"), the Court ORDERS:

1. All agents of the Commonwealth, including but not limited to any members of any law enforcement agency or agent or contractor thereof, shall maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant.

2. This protective order shall take effect when entered and shall remain in effect unless terminated by entry of a Court Order.
3. Any person who violates this Order shall be in contempt of Court.

SO ORDERED this 31st day of March 2025.

Re: Paul O'Keefe et al. v. C&C Hospitality, LLC et al., Plymouth Superior Court, Civil Action No. 2483-CV-00692

Dear Mr. Diller:

I write on behalf of the Norfolk District Attorney's Office ("NDAO") in response to the subpoena that you issued in the above-referenced action on February 25, 2026, requesting records and access to Karen Read's cell phones; records of communications, including emails by or to Karen Read and/or Aidan Kearney; and records pertaining to the prosecution of Aidan Kearney. Pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1), this letter serves as the NDAO's written objection to the subpoena.

The NDAO objects to your requests on the grounds that they are overbroad, unduly burdensome, costly, and seek information that is publicly available. See Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (c) (for good cause shown the court should protect record holders from undue burden or expense, particularly when the material is available from some other source, duplicative, unduly cumulative, and in considering the importance of the requested material in resolving the issues); Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4) (additional considerations to the burdens of producing electronically stored data). The NDAO, a non-party record holder, emphasizes the undue burden particularly where the majority of the requests are obtainable from another source, namely defendant Karen Read. See generally Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (NDAO Notices of Discovery 34, 35, 47).

The NDAO objects to producing any information that would jeopardize pending criminal investigations; whose disclosure is proscribed by law, including grand jury materials, and documents that are sealed, impounded, subject to protective orders, or would contravene court orders, including previously raised confidentiality concerns and pending criminal cases. See Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (docket entries 636, 650); Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088] (docket -00313 entries 22, 47, 61, 62, 76).[1]

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Moreover, your request no. 5 and no. 12 appear to contravene the Plymouth Superior Court's March 1, 2026 order to the "Plaintiff's Emergency Moton for Temporary Restraining Order Pursuant to Rule 65 to Prevent Release of Evidence" (Gildea, J.) as well as the Plaintiff's pending request to intervene in Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088], where the issue of access to cellphones seized from Karen Read is pending a decision of the Court (Krupp, J.).

The NDAO objects to the subpoena to the extent that it calls for the production of materials that are protected by the work-product doctrine, the attorney-client privilege, or other applicable protections, privileges, or immunities against disclosure, including but not limited to internal communications and notes containing attorney work product and/or mental impressions. The NDAO further objects to searching sources of electronically stored information that are not reasonably accessible without the investment of significant time or expense. Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4).

Sincerely,

/s/ Laura A. McLaughlin

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO COMPEL RESPONSES TO PLAINTIFFS' SUPPLEMENTAL KEEPER OF RECORDS SUBPOENA FROM AIDAN KEARNEY

NOW COME the Plaintiffs in the above-captioned matter, and respectfully request that this Honorable Court, pursuant to Rule 45 of the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure and other relevant rules governing discovery, issue an order compelling Aidan Kearney to provide responses and documents to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026. As of the date of service, Plaintiffs have yet to receive responses, objections, or any request for extension from Kearney.

I. RELEVANT BACKGROUND

On April 21, 2026, Plaintiffs served a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena on Aidan Kearney. Responses were due by April 30, 2026. EXHIBIT A. To date, Kearney has made no effort to respond, object, or request an extension. This Subpoena is directly tied to Plaintiffs'

underlying civil action filed on August 23, 2024, against Defendants Karen Read, C.F. McCarthy's, and Waterfall Bar & Grill seeking damages arising from the death of John O'Keefe III. The Complaint asserts claims against Defendant Karen Read for wrongful death (Count III), negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress (Counts X-XII), and reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress (Count XIII). EXHIBIT B.

Central to Plaintiffs' emotional distress claims is the allegation that Karen Read, acting through Aidan Kearney, orchestrated a coordinated public campaign to promote a false narrative surrounding John O'Keefe's death. Kearney, a blogger operating under the pseudonym "Turtleboy," served as Read's agent, mouthpiece, and primary instrumentality in disseminating this harmful content. Communications between Read and Kearney are therefore essential to proving the emotional distress claims.

On August 12, 2025, Karen Read filed a partial motion to dismiss. In ruling on said motion, the Court found the allegations sufficiently plausible to survive dismissal, stating:

> "When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death. Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had 'expired' for 'going after' the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress." EXHIBIT C.

In denying the motion to dismiss, Judge O'Shea endorsed the plausibility of the O'Keefe family's infliction-of-emotional-distress claims, finding that sufficient facts exist to support these claim. These claims remain active today and warrant full discovery.

Separate from this civil action, the Norfolk Grand Jury indicted Kearney on nine counts of witness intimidation, five counts of illegal picketing of a witness, and three counts of conspiracy

to intimidate a witness. The Norfolk District Attorney's Office has conducted criminal investigations into both Read and Kearney. Through these investigations, the NDAO obtained forensic extractions from cell phones belonging to both Read[1] and Kearney. These extractions contain the very communications between Read and Kearney that Plaintiffs require to prove their claims.

On March 31, 2025, the Court entered a Protective Order governing the sharing of Kearney's cell phone data, directing all agents of the Commonwealth to "maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant." See EXHIBIT D.

Plaintiffs have pursued every available avenue to obtain the discoverable materials in the NDAO's possession. On February 24, 2026, Plaintiffs served the NDAO with a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena seeking materials related to Kearney. On March 6, 2026, the NDAO objected, citing the Protective Order and confidentiality concerns as the primary impediments to production. See EXHIBIT E. Notably, the NDAO did not assert that the materials lack relevance or discoverability. On March 4, 2026, Plaintiffs filed a Motion to Intervene in Commonwealth v. Kearney for the limited purpose of expanding the Protective Order to permit production of these materials to Plaintiffs. That motion remains pending.

Despite these efforts, Plaintiffs still lack access to communications and materials. Kearney's complete failure to respond to the Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026, necessitates this motion.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

[1] Plaintiffs have reached an agreement with Read's counsel regarding the production and handling of the phone extraction data pertaining to Read.

Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C) authorizes a subpoena commanding a non-party to produce documents. Where a non-party fails to respond, the party serving the subpoena may move for an order compelling production. Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B). "Failure by any person without adequate excuse to obey a subpoena served upon that person may be deemed a contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued." Mass. R. Civ. P. 45.

In interpreting the scope of discovery under the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure, the Supreme Judicial Court has followed the approach taken under the federal rules, and defined "relevant" evidence "broadly to encompass any matter that bears on, or that reasonably could lead to other matter that could bear on, any issue that is or may be in the case... discovery is not limited to issues raised by the pleadings, for discovery itself is designed to help define and clarify the issues...Nor is discovery limited to the merits of a case, for a variety of fact-oriented issues may arise during litigation that are not related to the merits." Cronin v. Strayer, 392 Mass. 525, 534 (1984), quoting Oppenheimer Fund, Inc. v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 351 (1978).

As such, discovery should ordinarily be allowed under the concept of relevancy unless it is clear that the information sought can have no possible bearing upon the subject matter of the action. See E.A. Miller, Inc., v. South Shore Bank, 405 Mass. 95, 101 (1989) (holding that litigants should be afforded an opportunity for discovery where a party has “made even a minimal showing warranting the requested discovery").

III. ARGUMENT

A. The Requested Materials Are Directly Relevant And Crucial To Plaintiffs’ Emotional Distress Claims

The materials sought through the supplemental keeper of records subpoena are directly relevant to Plaintiffs’ claims. Plaintiffs’ emotional distress claims rest on Karen Read’s coordinated campaign with Aidan Kearney to promote a false narrative and pit the Read’s against the

O'Keefe's. Publicly communicating this false narrative directly resulted in frustrating justice for John O'Keefe and caused additional harm to the already grieving O'Keefe family. Karen Read's primary vehicle for disseminating this false narrative was her relationship with Aidan Kearney, who operates under the pseudonym "Turtleboy." Aidan Kearney manages various websites and social media accounts through which he publishes the inflammatory and harmful content at Karen Read's direction and active collaboration. As part of its investigation into Aidan Kearney, the Commonwealth obtained search warrants and ultimately seized multiple electronic devices including cell phones, laptops, cameras, SD cards, etc. The Plaintiffs have a good faith basis to believe that the data contained on these electronic devices will prove Plaintiffs' allegations and multiple aspects of their claims. Without relief, Plaintiffs cannot timely authenticate these materials.

B. The Plaintiffs Require These Materials Urgently In Order To Conduct Discovery In Their Civil Case

With the discovery deadline fast approaching in the civil matter, the Plaintiffs have an urgent need for these materials. Plaintiffs have noticed the deposition of Aidan Kearney and Karen Read and require communications and device extractions to effectively for and conduct that deposition. Additionally, Plaintiffs require these materials to prepare their cases. Without such materials the Plaintiffs will suffer prejudice.

IV. REQUESTED RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Honorable Court: (1) GRANT this Motion to Compel; (2) ORDER Aidan Kearney to produce all documents and materials responsive

to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena within ten (10) days of the Court's Order; and (3) GRANT such other and further relief as this Court deems just and appropriate.

C & C HOSPITALITY, LLC d/b/a C. F. MCCARTHY'S & others[3]

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER ON DEFENDANTS' PARTIAL MOTIONS TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO MASS. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6) (Paper Nos: 37, 37.3, 37.4)

This matter arises out of the January 29, 2022, death of John Joseph O'Keefe, III ("JJ").[4] Defendant and moving party, Karen Read ("Read"), was previously charged with several crimes in connection with JJ's death. During the pendency of Read's criminal case, plaintiffs Margaret O'Keefe ("Margaret," JJ's mother), John O'Keefe, II ("John," JJ's father), Paul O'Keefe ("Paul," JJ's brother and personal representative of JJ's estate), and Kayley Furbursh ("Kayley," JJ's niece) filed this civil lawsuit asserting claims against Read for Wrongful Death (Count III), Negligent and/or Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts X, XI, and XII), and Negligent, Reckless, and/or Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress (Count XIII).

The plaintiffs also asserted claims for Wrongful Death (Counts I and II), and Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, and IX) against C&C Hospitality,

LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's, G&S Hospitality, LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's (collectively, "C.F. McCarthy's") and Waterfall Bar & Grill, LTD d/b/a Waterfall Bar & Grill ("Waterfall"). These defendants are corporate entities that owned bars that allegedly served Read alcohol in the hours leading up to the events at issue.

Read filed a motion to dismiss all emotional distress claims asserted against her. C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall joined on Read's motion to dismiss, similarly seeking to dismiss the emotional distress claims asserted against them.[5] For the foregoing reasons, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to Kayley's claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

BACKGROUND

The following facts are drawn from the plaintiffs' complaint and accepted as true for purposes of this motion.[6]

On January 28, 2022, Read patronized C.F. McCarthy's from 8:51 p.m. through 10:29 p.m. She consumed seven alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Read then patronized Waterfall from 10:54 p.m. that night through 12:10 a.m. the next morning. She consumed two alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Her blood was drawn on January 29, 2022, and testing revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

[5] C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall's motions are technically motions for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12(c), as they previously filed answers to the plaintiffs' complaint. However, a "defendant's rule 12(c) motion is actually a motion to dismiss that argues that the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted" (quotations omitted). Jarosz v. Palmer, 436 Mass. 526, 529 (2002). Thus, the court will apply the same legal framework for C.F. McCarthy and Waterfall's motions as that used in assessing Read's motion to dismiss.

[6] The court also considers facts contained in matters of public record, pursuant to Marram v. Kobrick Offshore Fund, Ltd, 442 Mass. 43, 45 n.4 (2004). These facts are reserved for discussion below.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM

revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

During the timeframe relevant to the instant lawsuit, Read and JJ were in a dating relationship. JJ was with Read that evening, and they had been arguing. After leaving Waterfall, Read got into a motor vehicle with JJ and drove to a residence at 34 Fairview Road in Canton while intoxicated. After arriving at the residence, JJ exited Read's vehicle. Read then drove her vehicle and hit JJ. JJ was knocked to the ground, suffering serious injuries that ultimately led to his death.

Read fled the scene and drove to JJ's residence at 1 Meadows Avenue in Canton. At approximately 4:30 a.m. on January 29, 2022, Read woke up JJ's niece, Kayley, who lived with JJ. Read began discussing JJ's death with Kayley and talked about striking him with her vehicle. "Kayley heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Read also called multiple people between 4:30 a.m. and 5:00 a.m. on January 29, 2022, while in Kayley's presence. At the time, Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who had previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent.

Read left JJ's residence at approximately 5:07 a.m. on January 29, 2022. She arrived at 34 Fairview Road at approximately 6:03 a.m. and discovered JJ buried in snow. JJ was pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 am. "At relevant times after 7:50 am on January 29, 2022, defendant Read went to the grieving house of JJ, feigned comfort to JJ's family, and used the opportunity to, amongst other things, remove the offending weapon, her vehicle, and/or destroy relevant evidence." Complaint, paragraph 47.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Subsequently, over the course of several years, Read made many public statements. "She knowingly and deliberately changed her story and fabricated a conspiracy knowing the same to be false. She publicly communicated this false 'narrative' thereby frustrating Justice for JJ. Such false narrative caused the Plaintiffs aggravated emotional distress." Complaint, paragraph 52.

DISCUSSION

The defendants argue that the emotional distress claims should be dismissed for multiple reasons: 1) distress claims are subsumed by the wrongful death statute; 2) the plaintiffs' claimed distress was not contemporaneous with JJ allegedly being struck by Read's vehicle; 3) there was no extreme or outrageous conduct direct towards the plaintiff that resulted in severe harm; and 4) Kayley's claims for emotional distress fail as a matter of law. The court will address each of these arguments in turn.

A. Standard of Review

To survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12 (b)(6), a complaint must contain "factual 'allegations plausibly suggesting (not merely consistent with)' an entitlement to relief." Iannacchino v. Ford Motor Co., 451 Mass. 623, 636 (2008), quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 557 (2007). The factual allegations must be "more than labels and conclusions" and "raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Iannacchino, 451 Mass. at 636, quoting Bell Atl. Corp., 550 U.S. at 555. In assessing a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6), the court accepts as true the well-pleaded factual allegations in the complaint and draws all reasonable inferences in the claimant's favor. See Fairhaven Hous. Auth. v. Commonwealth, 493 Mass. 27, 30 (2023).

Docket Number 2483CV00692

The extent of the court's review generally is limited to the factual allegations in the complaint and any facts contained in any attached exhibits. See Eigerman v. Putnam Invs., Inc., 450 Mass. 281, 285 n.6 (2007). However, the court also may consider matters of public record, items in the record of the case, and documents cited and relied upon in the complaint. Schaer v. Brandeis Univ., 432 Mass. 474, 477 (2000).

B. Wrongful Death Statute and Emotional Distress Claims

The defendants argue that the plaintiffs' emotional distress claims are subsumed by the Massachusetts wrongful death statute, G. L. c. 229, § 2. Among other provisions, the statute identifies the following as recoverable damages:

> "the fair monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to receive the damages recovered, as provided in section one, including but not limited to compensation for the loss of the reasonably expected net income, services, protection, care, assistance, society, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice of the decedent to the persons entitled to the damages recovered."

G. L. c. 229, § 2.

Thus, the wrongful death statute contemplates some degree of emotional distress arising from a decedent's death. It addresses the loss of care, assistance, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice, all of which go to the relationship between a decedent and individuals pursuing claims under the statute.

The defendants argue that the independent emotional distress claims asserted by the plaintiffs are redundant to the plaintiffs' wrongful death assertions and consequently should be dismissed. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Cimino v. Milford Keg, Inc., 385 Mass. 323 (1982), the Supreme Judicial Court ("SJC") held:

> "The defendant's . . argument that the plaintiff's claim for emotional distress is 'preempted' by the wrongful death action (G.L. c. 229, s 2) misconstrues the common law cause of action for emotional distress. Emotional distress, as the concept has evolved in this Commonwealth, is a severe psychological shock directly resulting from

> experiencing or witnessing the effects of a defendant's conduct. . . . A claim for damages based on emotional distress does not include an administrator's claim for loss of consortium-which will be present in every wrongful death action such as this. Since emotional distress is a wrong to the plaintiff distinct from that done to [the decedent] and the statutory beneficiaries of the decedent, it is not a duplicative remedy and is not 'preempted' by the wrongful death statute." (quotations omitted).

Cimino, 385 Mass. at 334.

Here, the plaintiffs' direct emotional distress claims go beyond the mere fact that JJ died. Instead, they point to the alleged wrongs they suffered in their individual capacities. They aver that they suffered such harm in observing JJ just after his death, having Read attend family events in the immediate aftermath of JJ's death, and Read developing a public and false narrative that frustrated justice for JJ. These claims are separate from JJ's death and instead are specific to the distress the plaintiffs assert in their individual capacities, rather than their status as relatives of JJ pursuant to the wrongful death statute.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding emotional distress and the wrongful death statute.

C. Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress because their alleged distress did not occur contemporaneously with the accident giving rise to JJ's death. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Stockdale v. Bird & Son, Inc., 399 Mass. 249 (1987), the SJC stated:

> "In Dziokonski v. Babineau, 375 Mass. 555, 568 (1978), we held that 'allegations concerning a parent who sustains substantial physical harm as a result of severe mental distress over some peril or harm to his minor child caused by the defendant's negligence state a claim for which relief might be granted, where the parent either witnesses the accident or soon comes on the scene while the child is still there.' Two years later, in Ferriter v. Daniel O'Connell's Sons, 381 Mass. 507, 518, we held that the wife and children of an employee allegedly injured through his employer's negligence could maintain an action for negligent infliction of emotional distress, even though they first observed the employee in a hospital immediately after the accident. We said that '[a]

> plaintiff who rushes onto the accident scene and finds a loved one injured has no greater entitlement to compensation for that shock than a plaintiff who rushes instead to the hospital. So long as the shock follows closely on the heels of the accident, the two types of injury are equally foreseeable.' Id."

Stockdale, 399 Mass. at 251.

Thus, a family member is entitled to emotional distress damages when they either witness the decedent's actual injury or "come upon the injured [kin] promptly after the injury." Nancy P. v. D'Amato, 401 Mass. 516, 520 (1988).

The plaintiffs allege that Read discovered JJ buried in the snow at approximately 6:03 a.m. on January 29, 2022, and he was subsequently pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 a.m. that day. Margaret, John, and Paul each aver that they "learned of JJ's admission to [ ] Hospital immediately and came upon JJ's body at the Hospital shortly thereafter." Complaint, paragraphs 82, 88, 95, 102, 109, 116, 123, 131, and 139. Against this backdrop, the complaint alleges sufficient facts that JJ's parents and brother arrived promptly at the hospital upon learning of JJ's death and thus have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley's negligent infliction of emotional distress claim stands on different footing, however. She alleges that she "learned of JJ's death or injury when defendant Read woke Kayley up approximately 4:30 am on January 29, 2022." Complaint, paragraph 147. Further, Kayley alleges she "heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Lastly, Kayley states that, as a result of Read's conversations in her presence, she "perceived the injuries caused to her guardian, uncle JJ, and perceived the injury producing event." Complaint, paragraph 151.

Taken together, the complaint does not allege that Kayley learned of JJ's death or injury at 4:30 a.m., but instead learned he was maybe injured at that time. There are also no averments

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth

regarding when and the circumstances under which she first observed the deceased JJ. Her averments concern her perceptions of JJ's injuries, rather than her actual observations.

The case law cited by the parties addresses scenarios whereby a family member has observed another family member actually being injured or otherwise suffering shock after promptly encountering the injured family member. Kayley cannot make this showing. In making this assessment, the court acknowledges the following case law cited in the plaintiffs' opposition:

> "the determination whether there should be liability for the injury sustained depends on a number of factors, such as where, when, and how the injury to the third person entered into the consciousness of the claimant, and what degree there was of familial or other relationship between the claimant and the third person" (emphasis in original).

Dziokonski, 375 Mass. at 568.

Such language is inapposite here, as the Dziokonski court's decision turned on liability for negligent infliction of emotional distress and the parameters for when a family member arrived at the scene of an accident giving rise to a relative's injury. Stockdale extended the scope of Dziokonski to family members who promptly arrive at a hospital. Neither of these cases, nor any other cases provided by the parties, creates authority to find negligent infliction of emotional distress for family members who learn of a death beyond this prompt timeframe. Thus, Dziokonski's language about when JJ's injury "entered into the consciousness of the claimant" does not support Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to Margaret, John, and Paul's claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress and ALLOWED as to Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

D. Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for reckless infliction of emotional distress because there was no extreme or outrageous conduct directed towards them that resulted in severe harm.[7] In the context of such claims, conduct is "extreme and outrageous" if it "goes beyond all possible bounds of decency, and is regarded as atrocious, and utterly intolerable in a civilized community" (quotations omitted). Roman v. Trustees of Tufts Coll., 461 Mass. 707, 718 (2012). The standard of extreme and outrageous conduct is a high bar. Such conduct means more than "workaday insults, annoyances, or even threats and petty oppressions . . . . It means, for example, a high order of reckless ruthlessness or deliberate malevolence that . . . is simply intolerable" (quotations omitted). Conway v. Smerling, 37 Mass. App. Ct. 1, 8 (1994).

The plaintiffs allege that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death, which caused them to suffer emotional distress. In support of their opposition to the instant motions, they have produced a search warrant affidavit, which is a matter of public record that the court may consider in assessing whether the complaint plausibly suggests an entitlement to relief.[8]

According to the search warrant materials, on January 22, 2024, Detective Lieutenant Brian Tully ("Tully") of the Massachusetts State Police applied for a warrant to seize "[a]ny

[7] With reference to the defendants' arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct, the plaintiffs' opposition frames the issue in the context of reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. In the complaint, however, Magaret, John, and Paul do not assert claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Instead, at Counts, X, XI, and XII, they assert claims against Read for negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress. Thus, in ruling upon this motion, the court does not impute an additional cause of action for Margaret, John, and Paul that is not included in the complaint. As discussed below, Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

mobile device capable of communicating and cellphones used by Karen Read."[9] He filed a return of the search warrant on January 24, 2024.

Tully submitted an affidavit in support of the search warrant application. The affidavit comprises thirty-one pages and discusses Read's communications regarding JJ's death. Briefly stated, the affidavit largely describes actions by a local blogger, Aidan Kearney, who runs a series of social media websites under the name "Turtleboy."

The affidavit states that Kearney posted articles on social media accounts that reflected personal attacks on civilian witnesses, members of their families, and their friends. The affidavit also states that throughout various postings and videos, Kearney identified several individuals who socialized with JJ and Read, stated that they, not Read, were responsible for JJ's murder, and encouraged his social media followers to contact and harass these individuals. Additionally, the affidavit references certain comments Kearney directed to the O'Keefe family:

> "How much slack are we supposed to give you [John O'Keefe's family] . . . the time period for the grief, whatever, that we are giving you, like we are not going after you because of the grief, that is expired. It's expired because you're trying to send an innocent woman to jail for the rest of her life . . . I don't feel bad for you anymore.

Plaintiffs' Opposition, Exhibit A, paragraph 39.

Per the affidavit, Read communicated with Kearney through an intermediary, Natalie Wiweke Berhsneider. Through this intermediary, Read gave Kearney information concerning her case, some of which was potentially not available to the public, which Kearney then used in his social media postings. Read also shared personal information and pictures of many civilian individuals for whom Kearney argued were responsible for JJ's death.

[9] The court acknowledges that the substance of the search warrant affidavit is highly disputed. The court's references to such affidavit are viewed through the lens of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, which requires the court to view facts and draw inferences in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death.[10] Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had "expired" for "going after" the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard, the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress.

Primarily, the defendants' motions set forth generalized legal statements for extreme and outrageous conduct. As to a substantive argument, Read cites to Polay v. McMahon, 468 Mass. 379 (2014). Polay is arguably similarly because it dealt with "(1) filing false police reports and harassment prevention petitions against the plaintiffs; (2) verbally attacking the plaintiffs; and (3) monitoring and recording the plaintiffs' home on a continuous basis." Id. at 386. The SJC in Polay held that such action did not rise to the level of extreme and outrageous conduct. The court acknowledges that Polay shares parallels as to a dispute between individuals which escalated into allegedly harassing behaviors. However, given the extensive scope of media scrutiny and Read's relationship with Kearney, as alleged in the complaint and search warrant affidavit, the facts of this case rise above those at issue in Polay because of their public and pervasive nature.

[10] In making this assessment, the court is not ruling on whether Read's "narrative" was true or false. As with its consideration of the search warrant affidavit, the court is exercising its legal authority regarding the instant motions, which is limited to applying a plausibility standard with facts and inferences viewed in the plaintiffs' favor.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct.

E. Claims Asserted by Kayley Furbush

The defendants argue that the complaint does not assert sufficient facts that Kayley suffered emotional distress, and that it does not describe which conduct applies to which claim. As discussed above, Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress must be dismissed for failure to state a viable claim. However, consistent with Margaret's, John's, and Paul's claims, Kayley was also plausibly distressed by the public and pervasive nature of Read's alleged false narrative. The alleged facts surrounding Kayley's interactions with Read in the early morning hours on January 29, 2022, can also be plausibly characterized as extreme and outrageous. Such determination supports Kayley's claim for reckless infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. A claim for intentional infliction of emotion distress requires sufficient averments that Read "intended to inflict emotional distress or that [she] knew or should have known that emotional distress was the likely result of [her] conduct." Agis v. Howard Johnson Co., 371 Mass. 140, 144–145 (1976). With reference to the specific allegations of the complaint, Read's motion states that "Defendant's questioning what happened during a phone call with third parties, even if in Kayley Furbush's presence, is also not actionable conduct." This does not convey the full scope of what occurred during the early morning hours of January 29, 2022, in the manner alleged in the complaint. Instead, the complaint plausibly pleads that Read made multiple distressing calls about JJ's physical condition, namely being struck by Read's vehicle or

Superior Court - Plymouth

by a snowplow. Moreover, Read made these statements upon waking Kayley up at 4:30 a.m., which plausibly contributed to the distressing nature of that interaction.

Even if this court were to accept Read's position that she was merely engaging in telephone conversations, "[c]onduct otherwise reasonable may become tortious when directed at an individual known to be particularly susceptible to infliction of emotional distress." Boyle v. Wenk, 378 Mass. 592, 596 (1979). At time of this interaction, it can be inferred that Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent. Given such status, Kayley would be particularly vulnerable to distress caused by an additional loss of a parental figure. Thus, based upon Kayley's vulnerability and susceptibility, Read, at a minimum, knew or should have known that her conduct would cause Kayley to suffer emotional distress. This plausibly supports a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions to dismiss are DENIED as to their arguments regarding the sufficiency of Kayley's claims.

ORDER

Wherefore, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to their claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

Commonwealth v. Karen Read

Order on Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order

Before the Court is Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order Regarding Sharing of Cell Phone Data. After a hearing on March 28th, 2025, and a review of the submissions related thereto, the Motion is ALLOWED in part.

The Intervenor has raised significant concerns regarding confidentiality related to the Commonwealth's prosecution of Mr. Kearney in 2382-cr-00313 - specifically, his concerns over law enforcement's use and/or dissemination of data obtained by search warrant and extracted from Mr. Kearney's cell phones. The Court deems Intervenor's concerns sufficient to warrant further Court action, however, only as it pertains to data that is being produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 order in this case [Dkt. 615] , and only as it relates to the above-captioned case (2282-cr-00117). The Court acknowledges that other investigative materials or discovery beyond that covered by this Order are already the subject of the Court's prior Order [Dkt. 555] concerning counsel's obligations. And, Intervenor Kearney has also moved for an identical Protective Order in the pending case in which he is a Defendant (2382-cr-00313); that Motion is not currently before this Court.

With regard to the data extracted from Mr. Kearney's phones and produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 Order (the "DATA"), the Court ORDERS:

1. All agents of the Commonwealth, including but not limited to any members of any law enforcement agency or agent or contractor thereof, shall maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant.

2. This protective order shall take effect when entered and shall remain in effect unless terminated by entry of a Court Order.
3. Any person who violates this Order shall be in contempt of Court.

SO ORDERED this 31st day of March 2025.

Re: Paul O'Keefe et al. v. C&C Hospitality, LLC et al., Plymouth Superior Court, Civil Action No. 2483-CV-00692

Dear Mr. Diller:

I write on behalf of the Norfolk District Attorney's Office ("NDAO") in response to the subpoena that you issued in the above-referenced action on February 25, 2026, requesting records and access to Karen Read's cell phones; records of communications, including emails by or to Karen Read and/or Aidan Kearney; and records pertaining to the prosecution of Aidan Kearney. Pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1), this letter serves as the NDAO's written objection to the subpoena.

The NDAO objects to your requests on the grounds that they are overbroad, unduly burdensome, costly, and seek information that is publicly available. See Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (c) (for good cause shown the court should protect record holders from undue burden or expense, particularly when the material is available from some other source, duplicative, unduly cumulative, and in considering the importance of the requested material in resolving the issues); Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4) (additional considerations to the burdens of producing electronically stored data). The NDAO, a non-party record holder, emphasizes the undue burden particularly where the majority of the requests are obtainable from another source, namely defendant Karen Read. See generally Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (NDAO Notices of Discovery 34, 35, 47).

The NDAO objects to producing any information that would jeopardize pending criminal investigations; whose disclosure is proscribed by law, including grand jury materials, and documents that are sealed, impounded, subject to protective orders, or would contravene court orders, including previously raised confidentiality concerns and pending criminal cases. See Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (docket entries 636, 650); Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088] (docket -00313 entries 22, 47, 61, 62, 76).[1]

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Moreover, your request no. 5 and no. 12 appear to contravene the Plymouth Superior Court's March 1, 2026 order to the "Plaintiff's Emergency Moton for Temporary Restraining Order Pursuant to Rule 65 to Prevent Release of Evidence" (Gildea, J.) as well as the Plaintiff's pending request to intervene in Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088], where the issue of access to cellphones seized from Karen Read is pending a decision of the Court (Krupp, J.).

The NDAO objects to the subpoena to the extent that it calls for the production of materials that are protected by the work-product doctrine, the attorney-client privilege, or other applicable protections, privileges, or immunities against disclosure, including but not limited to internal communications and notes containing attorney work product and/or mental impressions. The NDAO further objects to searching sources of electronically stored information that are not reasonably accessible without the investment of significant time or expense. Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4).

Subject to the existing protective order of confidentiality and without waiving the foregoing objections, for your convenience the NDAO has attached the public court orders in Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] governing its decision. The NDAO is also producing a responsive motion transcript from December 17, 2024, in Kearney and a video clip of Karen Read, which was part of the video previously produced on January 9, 2026. Lastly, the NDAO has complied with request no. 10 as that material was denoted confidential and produced to the plaintiff and defendant Karen Read on January 9, 2026. The NDAO reserves all rights, including the right to recover its reasonable expenses in responding to the subpoena.

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO COMPEL RESPONSES TO PLAINTIFFS' SUPPLEMENTAL KEEPER OF RECORDS SUBPOENA FROM AIDAN KEARNEY

NOW COME the Plaintiffs in the above-captioned matter, and respectfully request that this Honorable Court, pursuant to Rule 45 of the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure and other relevant rules governing discovery, issue an order compelling Aidan Kearney to provide responses and documents to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026. As of the date of service, Plaintiffs have yet to receive responses, objections, or any request for extension from Kearney.

I. RELEVANT BACKGROUND

On April 21, 2026, Plaintiffs served a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena on Aidan Kearney. Responses were due by April 30, 2026. EXHIBIT A. To date, Kearney has made no effort to respond, object, or request an extension. This Subpoena is directly tied to Plaintiffs'

underlying civil action filed on August 23, 2024, against Defendants Karen Read, C.F. McCarthy's, and Waterfall Bar & Grill seeking damages arising from the death of John O'Keefe III. The Complaint asserts claims against Defendant Karen Read for wrongful death (Count III), negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress (Counts X-XII), and reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress (Count XIII). EXHIBIT B.

Central to Plaintiffs' emotional distress claims is the allegation that Karen Read, acting through Aidan Kearney, orchestrated a coordinated public campaign to promote a false narrative surrounding John O'Keefe's death. Kearney, a blogger operating under the pseudonym "Turtleboy," served as Read's agent, mouthpiece, and primary instrumentality in disseminating this harmful content. Communications between Read and Kearney are therefore essential to proving the emotional distress claims.

On August 12, 2025, Karen Read filed a partial motion to dismiss. In ruling on said motion, the Court found the allegations sufficiently plausible to survive dismissal, stating:

> "When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death. Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had 'expired' for 'going after' the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress." EXHIBIT C.

In denying the motion to dismiss, Judge O'Shea endorsed the plausibility of the O'Keefe family's infliction-of-emotional-distress claims, finding that sufficient facts exist to support these claim. These claims remain active today and warrant full discovery.

Separate from this civil action, the Norfolk Grand Jury indicted Kearney on nine counts of witness intimidation, five counts of illegal picketing of a witness, and three counts of conspiracy

to intimidate a witness. The Norfolk District Attorney's Office has conducted criminal investigations into both Read and Kearney. Through these investigations, the NDAO obtained forensic extractions from cell phones belonging to both Read[1] and Kearney. These extractions contain the very communications between Read and Kearney that Plaintiffs require to prove their claims.

On March 31, 2025, the Court entered a Protective Order governing the sharing of Kearney's cell phone data, directing all agents of the Commonwealth to "maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant." See EXHIBIT D.

Plaintiffs have pursued every available avenue to obtain the discoverable materials in the NDAO's possession. On February 24, 2026, Plaintiffs served the NDAO with a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena seeking materials related to Kearney. On March 6, 2026, the NDAO objected, citing the Protective Order and confidentiality concerns as the primary impediments to production. See EXHIBIT E. Notably, the NDAO did not assert that the materials lack relevance or discoverability. On March 4, 2026, Plaintiffs filed a Motion to Intervene in Commonwealth v. Kearney for the limited purpose of expanding the Protective Order to permit production of these materials to Plaintiffs. That motion remains pending.

Despite these efforts, Plaintiffs still lack access to communications and materials. Kearney's complete failure to respond to the Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026, necessitates this motion.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

[1] Plaintiffs have reached an agreement with Read's counsel regarding the production and handling of the phone extraction data pertaining to Read.

Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C) authorizes a subpoena commanding a non-party to produce documents. Where a non-party fails to respond, the party serving the subpoena may move for an order compelling production. Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B). "Failure by any person without adequate excuse to obey a subpoena served upon that person may be deemed a contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued." Mass. R. Civ. P. 45.

In interpreting the scope of discovery under the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure, the Supreme Judicial Court has followed the approach taken under the federal rules, and defined "relevant" evidence "broadly to encompass any matter that bears on, or that reasonably could lead to other matter that could bear on, any issue that is or may be in the case... discovery is not limited to issues raised by the pleadings, for discovery itself is designed to help define and clarify the issues...Nor is discovery limited to the merits of a case, for a variety of fact-oriented issues may arise during litigation that are not related to the merits." Cronin v. Strayer, 392 Mass. 525, 534 (1984), quoting Oppenheimer Fund, Inc. v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 351 (1978).

As such, discovery should ordinarily be allowed under the concept of relevancy unless it is clear that the information sought can have no possible bearing upon the subject matter of the action. See E.A. Miller, Inc., v. South Shore Bank, 405 Mass. 95, 101 (1989) (holding that litigants should be afforded an opportunity for discovery where a party has “made even a minimal showing warranting the requested discovery").

III. ARGUMENT

A. The Requested Materials Are Directly Relevant And Crucial To Plaintiffs’ Emotional Distress Claims

The materials sought through the supplemental keeper of records subpoena are directly relevant to Plaintiffs’ claims. Plaintiffs’ emotional distress claims rest on Karen Read’s coordinated campaign with Aidan Kearney to promote a false narrative and pit the Read’s against the

O'Keefe's. Publicly communicating this false narrative directly resulted in frustrating justice for John O'Keefe and caused additional harm to the already grieving O'Keefe family. Karen Read's primary vehicle for disseminating this false narrative was her relationship with Aidan Kearney, who operates under the pseudonym "Turtleboy." Aidan Kearney manages various websites and social media accounts through which he publishes the inflammatory and harmful content at Karen Read's direction and active collaboration. As part of its investigation into Aidan Kearney, the Commonwealth obtained search warrants and ultimately seized multiple electronic devices including cell phones, laptops, cameras, SD cards, etc. The Plaintiffs have a good faith basis to believe that the data contained on these electronic devices will prove Plaintiffs' allegations and multiple aspects of their claims. Without relief, Plaintiffs cannot timely authenticate these materials.

B. The Plaintiffs Require These Materials Urgently In Order To Conduct Discovery In Their Civil Case

With the discovery deadline fast approaching in the civil matter, the Plaintiffs have an urgent need for these materials. Plaintiffs have noticed the deposition of Aidan Kearney and Karen Read and require communications and device extractions to effectively for and conduct that deposition. Additionally, Plaintiffs require these materials to prepare their cases. Without such materials the Plaintiffs will suffer prejudice.

IV. REQUESTED RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Honorable Court: (1) GRANT this Motion to Compel; (2) ORDER Aidan Kearney to produce all documents and materials responsive

to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena within ten (10) days of the Court's Order; and (3) GRANT such other and further relief as this Court deems just and appropriate.

128. A reasonable person in the same position as Margaret O'Keefe at the time of JJ's death would have suffered severe and profound emotional distress.

131. John O'Keefe II learned of JJ's admission to the Hospital immediately and came upon JJ's body at the Hospital shortly thereafter.

132. Karen Read's negligence caused the death of John II's son, JJ.

133. John II suffered severe and profound emotional injuries manifesting in physical symptoms as the result of observing JJ at the Hospital and witnessing the consequences of Read's negligence.

134. Defendant Read outrageously created a false narrative.

135. John II's emotional injuries, severe physical pain, anguish, emotional distress and other harm were directly and/or proximately caused by defendant Read's negligence.

136. A reasonable person in the same position as John O'Keefe II at the time of JJ's death would have suffered severe and profound emotional distress.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff demands judgement against the defendant, Karen Read, on Count XII, plus interest, costs and any other relief or damages this Court deems appropriate.

COUNT XIII

Kayley Furbush v. Karen Read – Negligent, Reckless and/or Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

145. The Plaintiff repeats, re-alleges, and incorporates by reference as set forth hereto in their entirety, prior paragraphs of the Complaint.

146. At all relevant times, Kayley was the niece of JJ. JJ was her guardian since her parents passed away.

147. Kayley learned of JJ's death or injury when defendant Read woke Kayley up at approximately 4:30 am on January 29, 2022.

148. Defendant Read knew Kayley was vulnerable, having already lost her parents at age six.

149. Nevertheless, in Kayley's presence, defendant Read spoke on speaker phone to various people between 4:30 am and 5:00 am on January 29, 2022.

150. At relevant times on January 29, 2022, Kayley heard defendant Read say "(JJ) never came home... Maybe I did something... Maybe a snow plow hit him... Maybe I had hit him.... Maybe I hit him... (we) were in an argument... Maybe he got hit by a snow plow."

151. As a result of the conversations defendant Read had in her presence, Kayley perceived the injuries caused to her guardian, uncle JJ, and perceived the injury producing event.

152. At or about 5:00 am, after waking Kayley up and informing her that something happened to JJ, defendant Read left Kayley home alone.

153. Defendant Read intentionally and/or recklessly inflicted severe emotional distress when she woke up Kayley and informed her that she hit her uncle or that a snow plow hit her uncle.

154. Defendant Read either intended to inflict emotional distress in Kayley, or knew or should have known that emotional distress was likely to result from defendant Read's conduct.

155. Defendant Read's conduct was extreme and outrageous, beyond the bounds of decency and was utterly intolerable.

156. Then, after JJ was declared dead, defendant Read came to the family house and feigned concern. Rather, it became clear that defendant Read was only there to collect her belongings and to take possession of the murder weapon.

157. The emotional distress suffered by Kayley was severe and of a nature that no reasonable person could be expected to endure it.

158. Defendant's extreme and outrageous conduct caused Kayley aggravated emotional distress manifesting in physical symptoms.

159. Kayley also suffered severe and profound emotional injuries as the result of perceiving JJ JJ's death and/or the injurious producing event, the consequences of Read's negligence.

160. Then, defendant Read outrageously created a false narrative

161. Kayley's emotional injuries, severe physical pain, anguish, emotional distress and other harm were directly and/or proximately caused by defendant Read's actions.

162. A reasonable person in the same position as Kayley Furbush at relevant times including the time of JJ's death would have suffered severe and profound emotional distress.

C & C HOSPITALITY, LLC d/b/a C. F. MCCARTHY'S & others[3]

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER ON DEFENDANTS' PARTIAL MOTIONS TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO MASS. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6) (Paper Nos: 37, 37.3, 37.4)

This matter arises out of the January 29, 2022, death of John Joseph O'Keefe, III ("JJ").[4] Defendant and moving party, Karen Read ("Read"), was previously charged with several crimes in connection with JJ's death. During the pendency of Read's criminal case, plaintiffs Margaret O'Keefe ("Margaret," JJ's mother), John O'Keefe, II ("John," JJ's father), Paul O'Keefe ("Paul," JJ's brother and personal representative of JJ's estate), and Kayley Furbursh ("Kayley," JJ's niece) filed this civil lawsuit asserting claims against Read for Wrongful Death (Count III), Negligent and/or Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts X, XI, and XII), and Negligent, Reckless, and/or Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress (Count XIII).

The plaintiffs also asserted claims for Wrongful Death (Counts I and II), and Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, and IX) against C&C Hospitality,

LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's, G&S Hospitality, LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's (collectively, "C.F. McCarthy's") and Waterfall Bar & Grill, LTD d/b/a Waterfall Bar & Grill ("Waterfall"). These defendants are corporate entities that owned bars that allegedly served Read alcohol in the hours leading up to the events at issue.

Read filed a motion to dismiss all emotional distress claims asserted against her. C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall joined on Read's motion to dismiss, similarly seeking to dismiss the emotional distress claims asserted against them.[5] For the foregoing reasons, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to Kayley's claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

BACKGROUND

The following facts are drawn from the plaintiffs' complaint and accepted as true for purposes of this motion.[6]

On January 28, 2022, Read patronized C.F. McCarthy's from 8:51 p.m. through 10:29 p.m. She consumed seven alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Read then patronized Waterfall from 10:54 p.m. that night through 12:10 a.m. the next morning. She consumed two alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Her blood was drawn on January 29, 2022, and testing revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

[5] C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall's motions are technically motions for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12(c), as they previously filed answers to the plaintiffs' complaint. However, a "defendant's rule 12(c) motion is actually a motion to dismiss that argues that the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted" (quotations omitted). Jarosz v. Palmer, 436 Mass. 526, 529 (2002). Thus, the court will apply the same legal framework for C.F. McCarthy and Waterfall's motions as that used in assessing Read's motion to dismiss.

revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

During the timeframe relevant to the instant lawsuit, Read and JJ were in a dating relationship. JJ was with Read that evening, and they had been arguing. After leaving Waterfall, Read got into a motor vehicle with JJ and drove to a residence at 34 Fairview Road in Canton while intoxicated. After arriving at the residence, JJ exited Read's vehicle. Read then drove her vehicle and hit JJ. JJ was knocked to the ground, suffering serious injuries that ultimately led to his death.

Read fled the scene and drove to JJ's residence at 1 Meadows Avenue in Canton. At approximately 4:30 a.m. on January 29, 2022, Read woke up JJ's niece, Kayley, who lived with JJ. Read began discussing JJ's death with Kayley and talked about striking him with her vehicle. "Kayley heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Read also called multiple people between 4:30 a.m. and 5:00 a.m. on January 29, 2022, while in Kayley's presence. At the time, Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who had previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent.

Read left JJ's residence at approximately 5:07 a.m. on January 29, 2022. She arrived at 34 Fairview Road at approximately 6:03 a.m. and discovered JJ buried in snow. JJ was pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 am. "At relevant times after 7:50 am on January 29, 2022, defendant Read went to the grieving house of JJ, feigned comfort to JJ's family, and used the opportunity to, amongst other things, remove the offending weapon, her vehicle, and/or destroy relevant evidence." Complaint, paragraph 47.

Subsequently, over the course of several years, Read made many public statements. "She knowingly and deliberately changed her story and fabricated a conspiracy knowing the same to be false. She publicly communicated this false 'narrative' thereby frustrating Justice for JJ. Such false narrative caused the Plaintiffs aggravated emotional distress." Complaint, paragraph 52.

DISCUSSION

The defendants argue that the emotional distress claims should be dismissed for multiple reasons: 1) distress claims are subsumed by the wrongful death statute; 2) the plaintiffs' claimed distress was not contemporaneous with JJ allegedly being struck by Read's vehicle; 3) there was no extreme or outrageous conduct direct towards the plaintiff that resulted in severe harm; and 4) Kayley's claims for emotional distress fail as a matter of law. The court will address each of these arguments in turn.

A. Standard of Review

To survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12 (b)(6), a complaint must contain "factual 'allegations plausibly suggesting (not merely consistent with)' an entitlement to relief." Iannacchino v. Ford Motor Co., 451 Mass. 623, 636 (2008), quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 557 (2007). The factual allegations must be "more than labels and conclusions" and "raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Iannacchino, 451 Mass. at 636, quoting Bell Atl. Corp., 550 U.S. at 555. In assessing a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6), the court accepts as true the well-pleaded factual allegations in the complaint and draws all reasonable inferences in the claimant's favor. See Fairhaven Hous. Auth. v. Commonwealth, 493 Mass. 27, 30 (2023).

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

The extent of the court's review generally is limited to the factual allegations in the complaint and any facts contained in any attached exhibits. See Eigerman v. Putnam Invs., Inc., 450 Mass. 281, 285 n.6 (2007). However, the court also may consider matters of public record, items in the record of the case, and documents cited and relied upon in the complaint. Schaer v. Brandeis Univ., 432 Mass. 474, 477 (2000).

B. Wrongful Death Statute and Emotional Distress Claims

The defendants argue that the plaintiffs' emotional distress claims are subsumed by the Massachusetts wrongful death statute, G. L. c. 229, § 2. Among other provisions, the statute identifies the following as recoverable damages:

> "the fair monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to receive the damages recovered, as provided in section one, including but not limited to compensation for the loss of the reasonably expected net income, services, protection, care, assistance, society, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice of the decedent to the persons entitled to the damages recovered."

G. L. c. 229, § 2.

Thus, the wrongful death statute contemplates some degree of emotional distress arising from a decedent's death. It addresses the loss of care, assistance, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice, all of which go to the relationship between a decedent and individuals pursuing claims under the statute.

The defendants argue that the independent emotional distress claims asserted by the plaintiffs are redundant to the plaintiffs' wrongful death assertions and consequently should be dismissed. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Cimino v. Milford Keg, Inc., 385 Mass. 323 (1982), the Supreme Judicial Court ("SJC") held:

> "The defendant's . . argument that the plaintiff's claim for emotional distress is 'preempted' by the wrongful death action (G.L. c. 229, s 2) misconstrues the common law cause of action for emotional distress. Emotional distress, as the concept has evolved in this Commonwealth, is a severe psychological shock directly resulting from

> experiencing or witnessing the effects of a defendant's conduct. . . . A claim for damages based on emotional distress does not include an administrator's claim for loss of consortium-which will be present in every wrongful death action such as this. Since emotional distress is a wrong to the plaintiff distinct from that done to [the decedent] and the statutory beneficiaries of the decedent, it is not a duplicative remedy and is not 'preempted' by the wrongful death statute." (quotations omitted).

Cimino, 385 Mass. at 334.

Here, the plaintiffs' direct emotional distress claims go beyond the mere fact that JJ died. Instead, they point to the alleged wrongs they suffered in their individual capacities. They aver that they suffered such harm in observing JJ just after his death, having Read attend family events in the immediate aftermath of JJ's death, and Read developing a public and false narrative that frustrated justice for JJ. These claims are separate from JJ's death and instead are specific to the distress the plaintiffs assert in their individual capacities, rather than their status as relatives of JJ pursuant to the wrongful death statute.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding emotional distress and the wrongful death statute.

C. Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress because their alleged distress did not occur contemporaneously with the accident giving rise to JJ's death. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Stockdale v. Bird & Son, Inc., 399 Mass. 249 (1987), the SJC stated:

> "In Dziokonski v. Babineau, 375 Mass. 555, 568 (1978), we held that 'allegations concerning a parent who sustains substantial physical harm as a result of severe mental distress over some peril or harm to his minor child caused by the defendant's negligence state a claim for which relief might be granted, where the parent either witnesses the accident or soon comes on the scene while the child is still there.' Two years later, in Ferriter v. Daniel O'Connell's Sons, 381 Mass. 507, 518, we held that the wife and children of an employee allegedly injured through his employer's negligence could maintain an action for negligent infliction of emotional distress, even though they first observed the employee in a hospital immediately after the accident. We said that '[a]

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

> plaintiff who rushes onto the accident scene and finds a loved one injured has no greater entitlement to compensation for that shock than a plaintiff who rushes instead to the hospital. So long as the shock follows closely on the heels of the accident, the two types of injury are equally foreseeable.' Id."

Stockdale, 399 Mass. at 251.

Thus, a family member is entitled to emotional distress damages when they either witness the decedent's actual injury or "come upon the injured [kin] promptly after the injury." Nancy P. v. D'Amato, 401 Mass. 516, 520 (1988).

The plaintiffs allege that Read discovered JJ buried in the snow at approximately 6:03 a.m. on January 29, 2022, and he was subsequently pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 a.m. that day. Margaret, John, and Paul each aver that they "learned of JJ's admission to [ ] Hospital immediately and came upon JJ's body at the Hospital shortly thereafter." Complaint, paragraphs 82, 88, 95, 102, 109, 116, 123, 131, and 139. Against this backdrop, the complaint alleges sufficient facts that JJ's parents and brother arrived promptly at the hospital upon learning of JJ's death and thus have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley's negligent infliction of emotional distress claim stands on different footing, however. She alleges that she "learned of JJ's death or injury when defendant Read woke Kayley up approximately 4:30 am on January 29, 2022." Complaint, paragraph 147. Further, Kayley alleges she "heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Lastly, Kayley states that, as a result of Read's conversations in her presence, she "perceived the injuries caused to her guardian, uncle JJ, and perceived the injury producing event." Complaint, paragraph 151.

Taken together, the complaint does not allege that Kayley learned of JJ's death or injury at 4:30 a.m., but instead learned he was maybe injured at that time. There are also no averments

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth

regarding when and the circumstances under which she first observed the deceased JJ. Her averments concern her perceptions of JJ's injuries, rather than her actual observations.

The case law cited by the parties addresses scenarios whereby a family member has observed another family member actually being injured or otherwise suffering shock after promptly encountering the injured family member. Kayley cannot make this showing. In making this assessment, the court acknowledges the following case law cited in the plaintiffs' opposition:

> "the determination whether there should be liability for the injury sustained depends on a number of factors, such as where, when, and how the injury to the third person entered into the consciousness of the claimant, and what degree there was of familial or other relationship between the claimant and the third person" (emphasis in original).

Dziokonski, 375 Mass. at 568.

Such language is inapposite here, as the Dziokonski court's decision turned on liability for negligent infliction of emotional distress and the parameters for when a family member arrived at the scene of an accident giving rise to a relative's injury. Stockdale extended the scope of Dziokonski to family members who promptly arrive at a hospital. Neither of these cases, nor any other cases provided by the parties, creates authority to find negligent infliction of emotional distress for family members who learn of a death beyond this prompt timeframe. Thus, Dziokonski's language about when JJ's injury "entered into the consciousness of the claimant" does not support Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to Margaret, John, and Paul's claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress and ALLOWED as to Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

D. Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for reckless infliction of emotional distress because there was no extreme or outrageous conduct directed towards them that resulted in severe harm.[7] In the context of such claims, conduct is "extreme and outrageous" if it "goes beyond all possible bounds of decency, and is regarded as atrocious, and utterly intolerable in a civilized community" (quotations omitted). Roman v. Trustees of Tufts Coll., 461 Mass. 707, 718 (2012). The standard of extreme and outrageous conduct is a high bar. Such conduct means more than "workaday insults, annoyances, or even threats and petty oppressions . . . . It means, for example, a high order of reckless ruthlessness or deliberate malevolence that . . . is simply intolerable" (quotations omitted). Conway v. Smerling, 37 Mass. App. Ct. 1, 8 (1994).

The plaintiffs allege that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death, which caused them to suffer emotional distress. In support of their opposition to the instant motions, they have produced a search warrant affidavit, which is a matter of public record that the court may consider in assessing whether the complaint plausibly suggests an entitlement to relief.[8]

According to the search warrant materials, on January 22, 2024, Detective Lieutenant Brian Tully ("Tully") of the Massachusetts State Police applied for a warrant to seize "[a]ny

[7] With reference to the defendants' arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct, the plaintiffs' opposition frames the issue in the context of reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. In the complaint, however, Magaret, John, and Paul do not assert claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Instead, at Counts, X, XI, and XII, they assert claims against Read for negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress. Thus, in ruling upon this motion, the court does not impute an additional cause of action for Margaret, John, and Paul that is not included in the complaint. As discussed below, Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

mobile device capable of communicating and cellphones used by Karen Read."[9] He filed a return of the search warrant on January 24, 2024.

Tully submitted an affidavit in support of the search warrant application. The affidavit comprises thirty-one pages and discusses Read's communications regarding JJ's death. Briefly stated, the affidavit largely describes actions by a local blogger, Aidan Kearney, who runs a series of social media websites under the name "Turtleboy."

The affidavit states that Kearney posted articles on social media accounts that reflected personal attacks on civilian witnesses, members of their families, and their friends. The affidavit also states that throughout various postings and videos, Kearney identified several individuals who socialized with JJ and Read, stated that they, not Read, were responsible for JJ's murder, and encouraged his social media followers to contact and harass these individuals. Additionally, the affidavit references certain comments Kearney directed to the O'Keefe family:

> "How much slack are we supposed to give you [John O'Keefe's family] . . . the time period for the grief, whatever, that we are giving you, like we are not going after you because of the grief, that is expired. It's expired because you're trying to send an innocent woman to jail for the rest of her life . . . I don't feel bad for you anymore.

Plaintiffs' Opposition, Exhibit A, paragraph 39.

Per the affidavit, Read communicated with Kearney through an intermediary, Natalie Wiweke Berhsneider. Through this intermediary, Read gave Kearney information concerning her case, some of which was potentially not available to the public, which Kearney then used in his social media postings. Read also shared personal information and pictures of many civilian individuals for whom Kearney argued were responsible for JJ's death.

[9] The court acknowledges that the substance of the search warrant affidavit is highly disputed. The court's references to such affidavit are viewed through the lens of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, which requires the court to view facts and draw inferences in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death.[10] Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had "expired" for "going after" the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard, the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress.

Primarily, the defendants' motions set forth generalized legal statements for extreme and outrageous conduct. As to a substantive argument, Read cites to Polay v. McMahon, 468 Mass. 379 (2014). Polay is arguably similarly because it dealt with "(1) filing false police reports and harassment prevention petitions against the plaintiffs; (2) verbally attacking the plaintiffs; and (3) monitoring and recording the plaintiffs' home on a continuous basis." Id. at 386. The SJC in Polay held that such action did not rise to the level of extreme and outrageous conduct. The court acknowledges that Polay shares parallels as to a dispute between individuals which escalated into allegedly harassing behaviors. However, given the extensive scope of media scrutiny and Read's relationship with Kearney, as alleged in the complaint and search warrant affidavit, the facts of this case rise above those at issue in Polay because of their public and pervasive nature.

[10] In making this assessment, the court is not ruling on whether Read's "narrative" was true or false. As with its consideration of the search warrant affidavit, the court is exercising its legal authority regarding the instant motions, which is limited to applying a plausibility standard with facts and inferences viewed in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct.

E. Claims Asserted by Kayley Furbush

The defendants argue that the complaint does not assert sufficient facts that Kayley suffered emotional distress, and that it does not describe which conduct applies to which claim. As discussed above, Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress must be dismissed for failure to state a viable claim. However, consistent with Margaret's, John's, and Paul's claims, Kayley was also plausibly distressed by the public and pervasive nature of Read's alleged false narrative. The alleged facts surrounding Kayley's interactions with Read in the early morning hours on January 29, 2022, can also be plausibly characterized as extreme and outrageous. Such determination supports Kayley's claim for reckless infliction of emotional distress.

by a snowplow. Moreover, Read made these statements upon waking Kayley up at 4:30 a.m., which plausibly contributed to the distressing nature of that interaction.

Even if this court were to accept Read's position that she was merely engaging in telephone conversations, "[c]onduct otherwise reasonable may become tortious when directed at an individual known to be particularly susceptible to infliction of emotional distress." Boyle v. Wenk, 378 Mass. 592, 596 (1979). At time of this interaction, it can be inferred that Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent. Given such status, Kayley would be particularly vulnerable to distress caused by an additional loss of a parental figure. Thus, based upon Kayley's vulnerability and susceptibility, Read, at a minimum, knew or should have known that her conduct would cause Kayley to suffer emotional distress. This plausibly supports a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions to dismiss are DENIED as to their arguments regarding the sufficiency of Kayley's claims.

ORDER

Wherefore, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to their claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

Commonwealth v. Karen Read

Order on Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order

Before the Court is Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order Regarding Sharing of Cell Phone Data. After a hearing on March 28th, 2025, and a review of the submissions related thereto, the Motion is ALLOWED in part.

The Intervenor has raised significant concerns regarding confidentiality related to the Commonwealth's prosecution of Mr. Kearney in 2382-cr-00313 - specifically, his concerns over law enforcement's use and/or dissemination of data obtained by search warrant and extracted from Mr. Kearney's cell phones. The Court deems Intervenor's concerns sufficient to warrant further Court action, however, only as it pertains to data that is being produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 order in this case [Dkt. 615] , and only as it relates to the above-captioned case (2282-cr-00117). The Court acknowledges that other investigative materials or discovery beyond that covered by this Order are already the subject of the Court's prior Order [Dkt. 555] concerning counsel's obligations. And, Intervenor Kearney has also moved for an identical Protective Order in the pending case in which he is a Defendant (2382-cr-00313); that Motion is not currently before this Court.

With regard to the data extracted from Mr. Kearney's phones and produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 Order (the "DATA"), the Court ORDERS:

1. All agents of the Commonwealth, including but not limited to any members of any law enforcement agency or agent or contractor thereof, shall maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant.

2. This protective order shall take effect when entered and shall remain in effect unless terminated by entry of a Court Order.
3. Any person who violates this Order shall be in contempt of Court.

SO ORDERED this 31st day of March 2025.

Dear Mr. Diller:

I write on behalf of the Norfolk District Attorney's Office ("NDAO") in response to the subpoena that you issued in the above-referenced action on February 25, 2026, requesting records and access to Karen Read's cell phones; records of communications, including emails by or to Karen Read and/or Aidan Kearney; and records pertaining to the prosecution of Aidan Kearney. Pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1), this letter serves as the NDAO's written objection to the subpoena.

The NDAO objects to your requests on the grounds that they are overbroad, unduly burdensome, costly, and seek information that is publicly available. See Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (c) (for good cause shown the court should protect record holders from undue burden or expense, particularly when the material is available from some other source, duplicative, unduly cumulative, and in considering the importance of the requested material in resolving the issues); Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4) (additional considerations to the burdens of producing electronically stored data). The NDAO, a non-party record holder, emphasizes the undue burden particularly where the majority of the requests are obtainable from another source, namely defendant Karen Read. See generally Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (NDAO Notices of Discovery 34, 35, 47).

The NDAO objects to producing any information that would jeopardize pending criminal investigations; whose disclosure is proscribed by law, including grand jury materials, and documents that are sealed, impounded, subject to protective orders, or would contravene court orders, including previously raised confidentiality concerns and pending criminal cases. See Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (docket entries 636, 650); Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088] (docket -00313 entries 22, 47, 61, 62, 76).[1]

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Moreover, your request no. 5 and no. 12 appear to contravene the Plymouth Superior Court's March 1, 2026 order to the "Plaintiff's Emergency Moton for Temporary Restraining Order Pursuant to Rule 65 to Prevent Release of Evidence" (Gildea, J.) as well as the Plaintiff's pending request to intervene in Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088], where the issue of access to cellphones seized from Karen Read is pending a decision of the Court (Krupp, J.).

The NDAO objects to the subpoena to the extent that it calls for the production of materials that are protected by the work-product doctrine, the attorney-client privilege, or other applicable protections, privileges, or immunities against disclosure, including but not limited to internal communications and notes containing attorney work product and/or mental impressions. The NDAO further objects to searching sources of electronically stored information that are not reasonably accessible without the investment of significant time or expense. Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4).

Sincerely,

/s/ Laura A. McLaughlin

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO COMPEL RESPONSES TO PLAINTIFFS' SUPPLEMENTAL KEEPER OF RECORDS SUBPOENA FROM AIDAN KEARNEY

NOW COME the Plaintiffs in the above-captioned matter, and respectfully request that this Honorable Court, pursuant to Rule 45 of the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure and other relevant rules governing discovery, issue an order compelling Aidan Kearney to provide responses and documents to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026. As of the date of service, Plaintiffs have yet to receive responses, objections, or any request for extension from Kearney.

I. RELEVANT BACKGROUND

On April 21, 2026, Plaintiffs served a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena on Aidan Kearney. Responses were due by April 30, 2026. EXHIBIT A. To date, Kearney has made no effort to respond, object, or request an extension. This Subpoena is directly tied to Plaintiffs'

underlying civil action filed on August 23, 2024, against Defendants Karen Read, C.F. McCarthy's, and Waterfall Bar & Grill seeking damages arising from the death of John O'Keefe III. The Complaint asserts claims against Defendant Karen Read for wrongful death (Count III), negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress (Counts X-XII), and reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress (Count XIII). EXHIBIT B.

Central to Plaintiffs' emotional distress claims is the allegation that Karen Read, acting through Aidan Kearney, orchestrated a coordinated public campaign to promote a false narrative surrounding John O'Keefe's death. Kearney, a blogger operating under the pseudonym "Turtleboy," served as Read's agent, mouthpiece, and primary instrumentality in disseminating this harmful content. Communications between Read and Kearney are therefore essential to proving the emotional distress claims.

On August 12, 2025, Karen Read filed a partial motion to dismiss. In ruling on said motion, the Court found the allegations sufficiently plausible to survive dismissal, stating:

> "When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death. Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had 'expired' for 'going after' the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress." EXHIBIT C.

In denying the motion to dismiss, Judge O'Shea endorsed the plausibility of the O'Keefe family's infliction-of-emotional-distress claims, finding that sufficient facts exist to support these claim. These claims remain active today and warrant full discovery.

Separate from this civil action, the Norfolk Grand Jury indicted Kearney on nine counts of witness intimidation, five counts of illegal picketing of a witness, and three counts of conspiracy

to intimidate a witness. The Norfolk District Attorney's Office has conducted criminal investigations into both Read and Kearney. Through these investigations, the NDAO obtained forensic extractions from cell phones belonging to both Read[1] and Kearney. These extractions contain the very communications between Read and Kearney that Plaintiffs require to prove their claims.

On March 31, 2025, the Court entered a Protective Order governing the sharing of Kearney's cell phone data, directing all agents of the Commonwealth to "maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant." See EXHIBIT D.

Plaintiffs have pursued every available avenue to obtain the discoverable materials in the NDAO's possession. On February 24, 2026, Plaintiffs served the NDAO with a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena seeking materials related to Kearney. On March 6, 2026, the NDAO objected, citing the Protective Order and confidentiality concerns as the primary impediments to production. See EXHIBIT E. Notably, the NDAO did not assert that the materials lack relevance or discoverability. On March 4, 2026, Plaintiffs filed a Motion to Intervene in Commonwealth v. Kearney for the limited purpose of expanding the Protective Order to permit production of these materials to Plaintiffs. That motion remains pending.

Despite these efforts, Plaintiffs still lack access to communications and materials. Kearney's complete failure to respond to the Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026, necessitates this motion.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

[1] Plaintiffs have reached an agreement with Read's counsel regarding the production and handling of the phone extraction data pertaining to Read.

Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C) authorizes a subpoena commanding a non-party to produce documents. Where a non-party fails to respond, the party serving the subpoena may move for an order compelling production. Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B). "Failure by any person without adequate excuse to obey a subpoena served upon that person may be deemed a contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued." Mass. R. Civ. P. 45.

In interpreting the scope of discovery under the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure, the Supreme Judicial Court has followed the approach taken under the federal rules, and defined "relevant" evidence "broadly to encompass any matter that bears on, or that reasonably could lead to other matter that could bear on, any issue that is or may be in the case... discovery is not limited to issues raised by the pleadings, for discovery itself is designed to help define and clarify the issues...Nor is discovery limited to the merits of a case, for a variety of fact-oriented issues may arise during litigation that are not related to the merits." Cronin v. Strayer, 392 Mass. 525, 534 (1984), quoting Oppenheimer Fund, Inc. v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 351 (1978).

As such, discovery should ordinarily be allowed under the concept of relevancy unless it is clear that the information sought can have no possible bearing upon the subject matter of the action. See E.A. Miller, Inc., v. South Shore Bank, 405 Mass. 95, 101 (1989) (holding that litigants should be afforded an opportunity for discovery where a party has “made even a minimal showing warranting the requested discovery").

III. ARGUMENT

A. The Requested Materials Are Directly Relevant And Crucial To Plaintiffs’ Emotional Distress Claims

The materials sought through the supplemental keeper of records subpoena are directly relevant to Plaintiffs’ claims. Plaintiffs’ emotional distress claims rest on Karen Read’s coordinated campaign with Aidan Kearney to promote a false narrative and pit the Read’s against the

O'Keefe's. Publicly communicating this false narrative directly resulted in frustrating justice for John O'Keefe and caused additional harm to the already grieving O'Keefe family. Karen Read's primary vehicle for disseminating this false narrative was her relationship with Aidan Kearney, who operates under the pseudonym "Turtleboy." Aidan Kearney manages various websites and social media accounts through which he publishes the inflammatory and harmful content at Karen Read's direction and active collaboration. As part of its investigation into Aidan Kearney, the Commonwealth obtained search warrants and ultimately seized multiple electronic devices including cell phones, laptops, cameras, SD cards, etc. The Plaintiffs have a good faith basis to believe that the data contained on these electronic devices will prove Plaintiffs' allegations and multiple aspects of their claims. Without relief, Plaintiffs cannot timely authenticate these materials.

B. The Plaintiffs Require These Materials Urgently In Order To Conduct Discovery In Their Civil Case

With the discovery deadline fast approaching in the civil matter, the Plaintiffs have an urgent need for these materials. Plaintiffs have noticed the deposition of Aidan Kearney and Karen Read and require communications and device extractions to effectively for and conduct that deposition. Additionally, Plaintiffs require these materials to prepare their cases. Without such materials the Plaintiffs will suffer prejudice.

IV. REQUESTED RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Honorable Court: (1) GRANT this Motion to Compel; (2) ORDER Aidan Kearney to produce all documents and materials responsive

to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena within ten (10) days of the Court's Order; and (3) GRANT such other and further relief as this Court deems just and appropriate.

v.

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER ON DEFENDANTS' PARTIAL MOTIONS TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO MASS. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6) (Paper Nos: 37, 37.3, 37.4)

This matter arises out of the January 29, 2022, death of John Joseph O'Keefe, III ("JJ").[4] Defendant and moving party, Karen Read ("Read"), was previously charged with several crimes in connection with JJ's death. During the pendency of Read's criminal case, plaintiffs Margaret O'Keefe ("Margaret," JJ's mother), John O'Keefe, II ("John," JJ's father), Paul O'Keefe ("Paul," JJ's brother and personal representative of JJ's estate), and Kayley Furbursh ("Kayley," JJ's niece) filed this civil lawsuit asserting claims against Read for Wrongful Death (Count III), Negligent and/or Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts X, XI, and XII), and Negligent, Reckless, and/or Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress (Count XIII).

The plaintiffs also asserted claims for Wrongful Death (Counts I and II), and Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, and IX) against C&C Hospitality,

C.C.: M.D., D.B., T.H., L.R., J.A.D., J.M.D., C.L.M., D.H., C.E.M., E.L., W.K., A.J., D.S., C.W., A.R., C.G., M.P.,

LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's, G&S Hospitality, LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's (collectively, "C.F. McCarthy's") and Waterfall Bar & Grill, LTD d/b/a Waterfall Bar & Grill ("Waterfall"). These defendants are corporate entities that owned bars that allegedly served Read alcohol in the hours leading up to the events at issue.

Read filed a motion to dismiss all emotional distress claims asserted against her. C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall joined on Read's motion to dismiss, similarly seeking to dismiss the emotional distress claims asserted against them.[5] For the foregoing reasons, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to Kayley's claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

BACKGROUND

The following facts are drawn from the plaintiffs' complaint and accepted as true for purposes of this motion.[6]

On January 28, 2022, Read patronized C.F. McCarthy's from 8:51 p.m. through 10:29 p.m. She consumed seven alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Read then patronized Waterfall from 10:54 p.m. that night through 12:10 a.m. the next morning. She consumed two alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Her blood was drawn on January 29, 2022, and testing revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

[5] C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall's motions are technically motions for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12(c), as they previously filed answers to the plaintiffs' complaint. However, a "defendant's rule 12(c) motion is actually a motion to dismiss that argues that the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted" (quotations omitted). Jarosz v. Palmer, 436 Mass. 526, 529 (2002). Thus, the court will apply the same legal framework for C.F. McCarthy and Waterfall's motions as that used in assessing Read's motion to dismiss.

[6] The court also considers facts contained in matters of public record, pursuant to Marram v. Kobrick Offshore Fund, Ltd, 442 Mass. 43, 45 n.4 (2004). These facts are reserved for discussion below.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM

revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

During the timeframe relevant to the instant lawsuit, Read and JJ were in a dating relationship. JJ was with Read that evening, and they had been arguing. After leaving Waterfall, Read got into a motor vehicle with JJ and drove to a residence at 34 Fairview Road in Canton while intoxicated. After arriving at the residence, JJ exited Read's vehicle. Read then drove her vehicle and hit JJ. JJ was knocked to the ground, suffering serious injuries that ultimately led to his death.

Read fled the scene and drove to JJ's residence at 1 Meadows Avenue in Canton. At approximately 4:30 a.m. on January 29, 2022, Read woke up JJ's niece, Kayley, who lived with JJ. Read began discussing JJ's death with Kayley and talked about striking him with her vehicle. "Kayley heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Read also called multiple people between 4:30 a.m. and 5:00 a.m. on January 29, 2022, while in Kayley's presence. At the time, Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who had previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent.

Read left JJ's residence at approximately 5:07 a.m. on January 29, 2022. She arrived at 34 Fairview Road at approximately 6:03 a.m. and discovered JJ buried in snow. JJ was pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 am. "At relevant times after 7:50 am on January 29, 2022, defendant Read went to the grieving house of JJ, feigned comfort to JJ's family, and used the opportunity to, amongst other things, remove the offending weapon, her vehicle, and/or destroy relevant evidence." Complaint, paragraph 47.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Subsequently, over the course of several years, Read made many public statements. "She knowingly and deliberately changed her story and fabricated a conspiracy knowing the same to be false. She publicly communicated this false 'narrative' thereby frustrating Justice for JJ. Such false narrative caused the Plaintiffs aggravated emotional distress." Complaint, paragraph 52.

DISCUSSION

The defendants argue that the emotional distress claims should be dismissed for multiple reasons: 1) distress claims are subsumed by the wrongful death statute; 2) the plaintiffs' claimed distress was not contemporaneous with JJ allegedly being struck by Read's vehicle; 3) there was no extreme or outrageous conduct direct towards the plaintiff that resulted in severe harm; and 4) Kayley's claims for emotional distress fail as a matter of law. The court will address each of these arguments in turn.

A. Standard of Review

To survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12 (b)(6), a complaint must contain "factual 'allegations plausibly suggesting (not merely consistent with)' an entitlement to relief." Iannacchino v. Ford Motor Co., 451 Mass. 623, 636 (2008), quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 557 (2007). The factual allegations must be "more than labels and conclusions" and "raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Iannacchino, 451 Mass. at 636, quoting Bell Atl. Corp., 550 U.S. at 555. In assessing a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6), the court accepts as true the well-pleaded factual allegations in the complaint and draws all reasonable inferences in the claimant's favor. See Fairhaven Hous. Auth. v. Commonwealth, 493 Mass. 27, 30 (2023).

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

The extent of the court's review generally is limited to the factual allegations in the complaint and any facts contained in any attached exhibits. See Eigerman v. Putnam Invs., Inc., 450 Mass. 281, 285 n.6 (2007). However, the court also may consider matters of public record, items in the record of the case, and documents cited and relied upon in the complaint. Schaer v. Brandeis Univ., 432 Mass. 474, 477 (2000).

B. Wrongful Death Statute and Emotional Distress Claims

The defendants argue that the plaintiffs' emotional distress claims are subsumed by the Massachusetts wrongful death statute, G. L. c. 229, § 2. Among other provisions, the statute identifies the following as recoverable damages:

> "the fair monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to receive the damages recovered, as provided in section one, including but not limited to compensation for the loss of the reasonably expected net income, services, protection, care, assistance, society, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice of the decedent to the persons entitled to the damages recovered."

G. L. c. 229, § 2.

Thus, the wrongful death statute contemplates some degree of emotional distress arising from a decedent's death. It addresses the loss of care, assistance, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice, all of which go to the relationship between a decedent and individuals pursuing claims under the statute.

The defendants argue that the independent emotional distress claims asserted by the plaintiffs are redundant to the plaintiffs' wrongful death assertions and consequently should be dismissed. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Cimino v. Milford Keg, Inc., 385 Mass. 323 (1982), the Supreme Judicial Court ("SJC") held:

> "The defendant's . . argument that the plaintiff's claim for emotional distress is 'preempted' by the wrongful death action (G.L. c. 229, s 2) misconstrues the common law cause of action for emotional distress. Emotional distress, as the concept has evolved in this Commonwealth, is a severe psychological shock directly resulting from

> experiencing or witnessing the effects of a defendant's conduct. . . . A claim for damages based on emotional distress does not include an administrator's claim for loss of consortium-which will be present in every wrongful death action such as this. Since emotional distress is a wrong to the plaintiff distinct from that done to [the decedent] and the statutory beneficiaries of the decedent, it is not a duplicative remedy and is not 'preempted' by the wrongful death statute." (quotations omitted).

Cimino, 385 Mass. at 334.

Here, the plaintiffs' direct emotional distress claims go beyond the mere fact that JJ died. Instead, they point to the alleged wrongs they suffered in their individual capacities. They aver that they suffered such harm in observing JJ just after his death, having Read attend family events in the immediate aftermath of JJ's death, and Read developing a public and false narrative that frustrated justice for JJ. These claims are separate from JJ's death and instead are specific to the distress the plaintiffs assert in their individual capacities, rather than their status as relatives of JJ pursuant to the wrongful death statute.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding emotional distress and the wrongful death statute.

C. Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress because their alleged distress did not occur contemporaneously with the accident giving rise to JJ's death. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Stockdale v. Bird & Son, Inc., 399 Mass. 249 (1987), the SJC stated:

> "In Dziokonski v. Babineau, 375 Mass. 555, 568 (1978), we held that 'allegations concerning a parent who sustains substantial physical harm as a result of severe mental distress over some peril or harm to his minor child caused by the defendant's negligence state a claim for which relief might be granted, where the parent either witnesses the accident or soon comes on the scene while the child is still there.' Two years later, in Ferriter v. Daniel O'Connell's Sons, 381 Mass. 507, 518, we held that the wife and children of an employee allegedly injured through his employer's negligence could maintain an action for negligent infliction of emotional distress, even though they first observed the employee in a hospital immediately after the accident. We said that '[a]

> plaintiff who rushes onto the accident scene and finds a loved one injured has no greater entitlement to compensation for that shock than a plaintiff who rushes instead to the hospital. So long as the shock follows closely on the heels of the accident, the two types of injury are equally foreseeable.' Id."

Stockdale, 399 Mass. at 251.

Thus, a family member is entitled to emotional distress damages when they either witness the decedent's actual injury or "come upon the injured [kin] promptly after the injury." Nancy P. v. D'Amato, 401 Mass. 516, 520 (1988).

The plaintiffs allege that Read discovered JJ buried in the snow at approximately 6:03 a.m. on January 29, 2022, and he was subsequently pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 a.m. that day. Margaret, John, and Paul each aver that they "learned of JJ's admission to [ ] Hospital immediately and came upon JJ's body at the Hospital shortly thereafter." Complaint, paragraphs 82, 88, 95, 102, 109, 116, 123, 131, and 139. Against this backdrop, the complaint alleges sufficient facts that JJ's parents and brother arrived promptly at the hospital upon learning of JJ's death and thus have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley's negligent infliction of emotional distress claim stands on different footing, however. She alleges that she "learned of JJ's death or injury when defendant Read woke Kayley up approximately 4:30 am on January 29, 2022." Complaint, paragraph 147. Further, Kayley alleges she "heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Lastly, Kayley states that, as a result of Read's conversations in her presence, she "perceived the injuries caused to her guardian, uncle JJ, and perceived the injury producing event." Complaint, paragraph 151.

Taken together, the complaint does not allege that Kayley learned of JJ's death or injury at 4:30 a.m., but instead learned he was maybe injured at that time. There are also no averments

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth

regarding when and the circumstances under which she first observed the deceased JJ. Her averments concern her perceptions of JJ's injuries, rather than her actual observations.

The case law cited by the parties addresses scenarios whereby a family member has observed another family member actually being injured or otherwise suffering shock after promptly encountering the injured family member. Kayley cannot make this showing. In making this assessment, the court acknowledges the following case law cited in the plaintiffs' opposition:

> "the determination whether there should be liability for the injury sustained depends on a number of factors, such as where, when, and how the injury to the third person entered into the consciousness of the claimant, and what degree there was of familial or other relationship between the claimant and the third person" (emphasis in original).

Dziokonski, 375 Mass. at 568.

Such language is inapposite here, as the Dziokonski court's decision turned on liability for negligent infliction of emotional distress and the parameters for when a family member arrived at the scene of an accident giving rise to a relative's injury. Stockdale extended the scope of Dziokonski to family members who promptly arrive at a hospital. Neither of these cases, nor any other cases provided by the parties, creates authority to find negligent infliction of emotional distress for family members who learn of a death beyond this prompt timeframe. Thus, Dziokonski's language about when JJ's injury "entered into the consciousness of the claimant" does not support Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to Margaret, John, and Paul's claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress and ALLOWED as to Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

D. Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for reckless infliction of emotional distress because there was no extreme or outrageous conduct directed towards them that resulted in severe harm.[7] In the context of such claims, conduct is "extreme and outrageous" if it "goes beyond all possible bounds of decency, and is regarded as atrocious, and utterly intolerable in a civilized community" (quotations omitted). Roman v. Trustees of Tufts Coll., 461 Mass. 707, 718 (2012). The standard of extreme and outrageous conduct is a high bar. Such conduct means more than "workaday insults, annoyances, or even threats and petty oppressions . . . . It means, for example, a high order of reckless ruthlessness or deliberate malevolence that . . . is simply intolerable" (quotations omitted). Conway v. Smerling, 37 Mass. App. Ct. 1, 8 (1994).

The plaintiffs allege that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death, which caused them to suffer emotional distress. In support of their opposition to the instant motions, they have produced a search warrant affidavit, which is a matter of public record that the court may consider in assessing whether the complaint plausibly suggests an entitlement to relief.[8]

According to the search warrant materials, on January 22, 2024, Detective Lieutenant Brian Tully ("Tully") of the Massachusetts State Police applied for a warrant to seize "[a]ny

[7] With reference to the defendants' arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct, the plaintiffs' opposition frames the issue in the context of reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. In the complaint, however, Magaret, John, and Paul do not assert claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Instead, at Counts, X, XI, and XII, they assert claims against Read for negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress. Thus, in ruling upon this motion, the court does not impute an additional cause of action for Margaret, John, and Paul that is not included in the complaint. As discussed below, Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

mobile device capable of communicating and cellphones used by Karen Read."[9] He filed a return of the search warrant on January 24, 2024.

Tully submitted an affidavit in support of the search warrant application. The affidavit comprises thirty-one pages and discusses Read's communications regarding JJ's death. Briefly stated, the affidavit largely describes actions by a local blogger, Aidan Kearney, who runs a series of social media websites under the name "Turtleboy."

The affidavit states that Kearney posted articles on social media accounts that reflected personal attacks on civilian witnesses, members of their families, and their friends. The affidavit also states that throughout various postings and videos, Kearney identified several individuals who socialized with JJ and Read, stated that they, not Read, were responsible for JJ's murder, and encouraged his social media followers to contact and harass these individuals. Additionally, the affidavit references certain comments Kearney directed to the O'Keefe family:

> "How much slack are we supposed to give you [John O'Keefe's family] . . . the time period for the grief, whatever, that we are giving you, like we are not going after you because of the grief, that is expired. It's expired because you're trying to send an innocent woman to jail for the rest of her life . . . I don't feel bad for you anymore.

Plaintiffs' Opposition, Exhibit A, paragraph 39.

Per the affidavit, Read communicated with Kearney through an intermediary, Natalie Wiweke Berhsneider. Through this intermediary, Read gave Kearney information concerning her case, some of which was potentially not available to the public, which Kearney then used in his social media postings. Read also shared personal information and pictures of many civilian individuals for whom Kearney argued were responsible for JJ's death.

[9] The court acknowledges that the substance of the search warrant affidavit is highly disputed. The court's references to such affidavit are viewed through the lens of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, which requires the court to view facts and draw inferences in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death.[10] Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had "expired" for "going after" the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard, the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress.

Primarily, the defendants' motions set forth generalized legal statements for extreme and outrageous conduct. As to a substantive argument, Read cites to Polay v. McMahon, 468 Mass. 379 (2014). Polay is arguably similarly because it dealt with "(1) filing false police reports and harassment prevention petitions against the plaintiffs; (2) verbally attacking the plaintiffs; and (3) monitoring and recording the plaintiffs' home on a continuous basis." Id. at 386. The SJC in Polay held that such action did not rise to the level of extreme and outrageous conduct. The court acknowledges that Polay shares parallels as to a dispute between individuals which escalated into allegedly harassing behaviors. However, given the extensive scope of media scrutiny and Read's relationship with Kearney, as alleged in the complaint and search warrant affidavit, the facts of this case rise above those at issue in Polay because of their public and pervasive nature.

[10] In making this assessment, the court is not ruling on whether Read's "narrative" was true or false. As with its consideration of the search warrant affidavit, the court is exercising its legal authority regarding the instant motions, which is limited to applying a plausibility standard with facts and inferences viewed in the plaintiffs' favor.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct.

E. Claims Asserted by Kayley Furbush

The defendants argue that the complaint does not assert sufficient facts that Kayley suffered emotional distress, and that it does not describe which conduct applies to which claim. As discussed above, Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress must be dismissed for failure to state a viable claim. However, consistent with Margaret's, John's, and Paul's claims, Kayley was also plausibly distressed by the public and pervasive nature of Read's alleged false narrative. The alleged facts surrounding Kayley's interactions with Read in the early morning hours on January 29, 2022, can also be plausibly characterized as extreme and outrageous. Such determination supports Kayley's claim for reckless infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. A claim for intentional infliction of emotion distress requires sufficient averments that Read "intended to inflict emotional distress or that [she] knew or should have known that emotional distress was the likely result of [her] conduct." Agis v. Howard Johnson Co., 371 Mass. 140, 144–145 (1976). With reference to the specific allegations of the complaint, Read's motion states that "Defendant's questioning what happened during a phone call with third parties, even if in Kayley Furbush's presence, is also not actionable conduct." This does not convey the full scope of what occurred during the early morning hours of January 29, 2022, in the manner alleged in the complaint. Instead, the complaint plausibly pleads that Read made multiple distressing calls about JJ's physical condition, namely being struck by Read's vehicle or

Superior Court - Plymouth

by a snowplow. Moreover, Read made these statements upon waking Kayley up at 4:30 a.m., which plausibly contributed to the distressing nature of that interaction.

Even if this court were to accept Read's position that she was merely engaging in telephone conversations, "[c]onduct otherwise reasonable may become tortious when directed at an individual known to be particularly susceptible to infliction of emotional distress." Boyle v. Wenk, 378 Mass. 592, 596 (1979). At time of this interaction, it can be inferred that Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent. Given such status, Kayley would be particularly vulnerable to distress caused by an additional loss of a parental figure. Thus, based upon Kayley's vulnerability and susceptibility, Read, at a minimum, knew or should have known that her conduct would cause Kayley to suffer emotional distress. This plausibly supports a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions to dismiss are DENIED as to their arguments regarding the sufficiency of Kayley's claims.

ORDER

Wherefore, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to their claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

Commonwealth v. Karen Read

Order on Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order

Before the Court is Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order Regarding Sharing of Cell Phone Data. After a hearing on March 28th, 2025, and a review of the submissions related thereto, the Motion is ALLOWED in part.

The Intervenor has raised significant concerns regarding confidentiality related to the Commonwealth's prosecution of Mr. Kearney in 2382-cr-00313 - specifically, his concerns over law enforcement's use and/or dissemination of data obtained by search warrant and extracted from Mr. Kearney's cell phones. The Court deems Intervenor's concerns sufficient to warrant further Court action, however, only as it pertains to data that is being produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 order in this case [Dkt. 615] , and only as it relates to the above-captioned case (2282-cr-00117). The Court acknowledges that other investigative materials or discovery beyond that covered by this Order are already the subject of the Court's prior Order [Dkt. 555] concerning counsel's obligations. And, Intervenor Kearney has also moved for an identical Protective Order in the pending case in which he is a Defendant (2382-cr-00313); that Motion is not currently before this Court.

With regard to the data extracted from Mr. Kearney's phones and produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 Order (the "DATA"), the Court ORDERS:

1. All agents of the Commonwealth, including but not limited to any members of any law enforcement agency or agent or contractor thereof, shall maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant.

2. This protective order shall take effect when entered and shall remain in effect unless terminated by entry of a Court Order.
3. Any person who violates this Order shall be in contempt of Court.

SO ORDERED this 31st day of March 2025.

Re: Paul O'Keefe et al. v. C&C Hospitality, LLC et al., Plymouth Superior Court, Civil Action No. 2483-CV-00692

Dear Mr. Diller:

I write on behalf of the Norfolk District Attorney's Office ("NDAO") in response to the subpoena that you issued in the above-referenced action on February 25, 2026, requesting records and access to Karen Read's cell phones; records of communications, including emails by or to Karen Read and/or Aidan Kearney; and records pertaining to the prosecution of Aidan Kearney. Pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1), this letter serves as the NDAO's written objection to the subpoena.

The NDAO objects to your requests on the grounds that they are overbroad, unduly burdensome, costly, and seek information that is publicly available. See Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (c) (for good cause shown the court should protect record holders from undue burden or expense, particularly when the material is available from some other source, duplicative, unduly cumulative, and in considering the importance of the requested material in resolving the issues); Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4) (additional considerations to the burdens of producing electronically stored data). The NDAO, a non-party record holder, emphasizes the undue burden particularly where the majority of the requests are obtainable from another source, namely defendant Karen Read. See generally Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (NDAO Notices of Discovery 34, 35, 47).

The NDAO objects to producing any information that would jeopardize pending criminal investigations; whose disclosure is proscribed by law, including grand jury materials, and documents that are sealed, impounded, subject to protective orders, or would contravene court orders, including previously raised confidentiality concerns and pending criminal cases. See Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (docket entries 636, 650); Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088] (docket -00313 entries 22, 47, 61, 62, 76).[1]

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Moreover, your request no. 5 and no. 12 appear to contravene the Plymouth Superior Court's March 1, 2026 order to the "Plaintiff's Emergency Moton for Temporary Restraining Order Pursuant to Rule 65 to Prevent Release of Evidence" (Gildea, J.) as well as the Plaintiff's pending request to intervene in Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088], where the issue of access to cellphones seized from Karen Read is pending a decision of the Court (Krupp, J.).

The NDAO objects to the subpoena to the extent that it calls for the production of materials that are protected by the work-product doctrine, the attorney-client privilege, or other applicable protections, privileges, or immunities against disclosure, including but not limited to internal communications and notes containing attorney work product and/or mental impressions. The NDAO further objects to searching sources of electronically stored information that are not reasonably accessible without the investment of significant time or expense. Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4).

Subject to the existing protective order of confidentiality and without waiving the foregoing objections, for your convenience the NDAO has attached the public court orders in Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] governing its decision. The NDAO is also producing a responsive motion transcript from December 17, 2024, in Kearney and a video clip of Karen Read, which was part of the video previously produced on January 9, 2026. Lastly, the NDAO has complied with request no. 10 as that material was denoted confidential and produced to the plaintiff and defendant Karen Read on January 9, 2026. The NDAO reserves all rights, including the right to recover its reasonable expenses in responding to the subpoena.

Sincerely,

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO COMPEL RESPONSES TO PLAINTIFFS' SUPPLEMENTAL KEEPER OF RECORDS SUBPOENA FROM AIDAN KEARNEY

NOW COME the Plaintiffs in the above-captioned matter, and respectfully request that this Honorable Court, pursuant to Rule 45 of the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure and other relevant rules governing discovery, issue an order compelling Aidan Kearney to provide responses and documents to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026. As of the date of service, Plaintiffs have yet to receive responses, objections, or any request for extension from Kearney.

I. RELEVANT BACKGROUND

On April 21, 2026, Plaintiffs served a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena on Aidan Kearney. Responses were due by April 30, 2026. EXHIBIT A. To date, Kearney has made no effort to respond, object, or request an extension. This Subpoena is directly tied to Plaintiffs'

underlying civil action filed on August 23, 2024, against Defendants Karen Read, C.F. McCarthy's, and Waterfall Bar & Grill seeking damages arising from the death of John O'Keefe III. The Complaint asserts claims against Defendant Karen Read for wrongful death (Count III), negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress (Counts X-XII), and reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress (Count XIII). EXHIBIT B.

Central to Plaintiffs' emotional distress claims is the allegation that Karen Read, acting through Aidan Kearney, orchestrated a coordinated public campaign to promote a false narrative surrounding John O'Keefe's death. Kearney, a blogger operating under the pseudonym "Turtleboy," served as Read's agent, mouthpiece, and primary instrumentality in disseminating this harmful content. Communications between Read and Kearney are therefore essential to proving the emotional distress claims.

On August 12, 2025, Karen Read filed a partial motion to dismiss. In ruling on said motion, the Court found the allegations sufficiently plausible to survive dismissal, stating:

> "When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death. Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had 'expired' for 'going after' the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress." EXHIBIT C.

In denying the motion to dismiss, Judge O'Shea endorsed the plausibility of the O'Keefe family's infliction-of-emotional-distress claims, finding that sufficient facts exist to support these claim. These claims remain active today and warrant full discovery.

Separate from this civil action, the Norfolk Grand Jury indicted Kearney on nine counts of witness intimidation, five counts of illegal picketing of a witness, and three counts of conspiracy

to intimidate a witness. The Norfolk District Attorney's Office has conducted criminal investigations into both Read and Kearney. Through these investigations, the NDAO obtained forensic extractions from cell phones belonging to both Read[1] and Kearney. These extractions contain the very communications between Read and Kearney that Plaintiffs require to prove their claims.

On March 31, 2025, the Court entered a Protective Order governing the sharing of Kearney's cell phone data, directing all agents of the Commonwealth to "maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant." See EXHIBIT D.

Plaintiffs have pursued every available avenue to obtain the discoverable materials in the NDAO's possession. On February 24, 2026, Plaintiffs served the NDAO with a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena seeking materials related to Kearney. On March 6, 2026, the NDAO objected, citing the Protective Order and confidentiality concerns as the primary impediments to production. See EXHIBIT E. Notably, the NDAO did not assert that the materials lack relevance or discoverability. On March 4, 2026, Plaintiffs filed a Motion to Intervene in Commonwealth v. Kearney for the limited purpose of expanding the Protective Order to permit production of these materials to Plaintiffs. That motion remains pending.

Despite these efforts, Plaintiffs still lack access to communications and materials. Kearney's complete failure to respond to the Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026, necessitates this motion.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

[1] Plaintiffs have reached an agreement with Read's counsel regarding the production and handling of the phone extraction data pertaining to Read.

Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C) authorizes a subpoena commanding a non-party to produce documents. Where a non-party fails to respond, the party serving the subpoena may move for an order compelling production. Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B). "Failure by any person without adequate excuse to obey a subpoena served upon that person may be deemed a contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued." Mass. R. Civ. P. 45.

In interpreting the scope of discovery under the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure, the Supreme Judicial Court has followed the approach taken under the federal rules, and defined "relevant" evidence "broadly to encompass any matter that bears on, or that reasonably could lead to other matter that could bear on, any issue that is or may be in the case... discovery is not limited to issues raised by the pleadings, for discovery itself is designed to help define and clarify the issues...Nor is discovery limited to the merits of a case, for a variety of fact-oriented issues may arise during litigation that are not related to the merits." Cronin v. Strayer, 392 Mass. 525, 534 (1984), quoting Oppenheimer Fund, Inc. v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 351 (1978).

As such, discovery should ordinarily be allowed under the concept of relevancy unless it is clear that the information sought can have no possible bearing upon the subject matter of the action. See E.A. Miller, Inc., v. South Shore Bank, 405 Mass. 95, 101 (1989) (holding that litigants should be afforded an opportunity for discovery where a party has “made even a minimal showing warranting the requested discovery").

III. ARGUMENT

A. The Requested Materials Are Directly Relevant And Crucial To Plaintiffs’ Emotional Distress Claims

The materials sought through the supplemental keeper of records subpoena are directly relevant to Plaintiffs’ claims. Plaintiffs’ emotional distress claims rest on Karen Read’s coordinated campaign with Aidan Kearney to promote a false narrative and pit the Read’s against the

O'Keefe's. Publicly communicating this false narrative directly resulted in frustrating justice for John O'Keefe and caused additional harm to the already grieving O'Keefe family. Karen Read's primary vehicle for disseminating this false narrative was her relationship with Aidan Kearney, who operates under the pseudonym "Turtleboy." Aidan Kearney manages various websites and social media accounts through which he publishes the inflammatory and harmful content at Karen Read's direction and active collaboration. As part of its investigation into Aidan Kearney, the Commonwealth obtained search warrants and ultimately seized multiple electronic devices including cell phones, laptops, cameras, SD cards, etc. The Plaintiffs have a good faith basis to believe that the data contained on these electronic devices will prove Plaintiffs' allegations and multiple aspects of their claims. Without relief, Plaintiffs cannot timely authenticate these materials.

B. The Plaintiffs Require These Materials Urgently In Order To Conduct Discovery In Their Civil Case

With the discovery deadline fast approaching in the civil matter, the Plaintiffs have an urgent need for these materials. Plaintiffs have noticed the deposition of Aidan Kearney and Karen Read and require communications and device extractions to effectively for and conduct that deposition. Additionally, Plaintiffs require these materials to prepare their cases. Without such materials the Plaintiffs will suffer prejudice.

IV. REQUESTED RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Honorable Court: (1) GRANT this Motion to Compel; (2) ORDER Aidan Kearney to produce all documents and materials responsive

to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena within ten (10) days of the Court's Order; and (3) GRANT such other and further relief as this Court deems just and appropriate.

129. The Plaintiff repeats, re-alleges, and incorporates by reference as set forth hereto in their entirety, prior paragraphs of the Complaint.

130. At all relevant times, John O'Keefe II was the father of JJ.

131. John O'Keefe II learned of JJ's admission to the Hospital immediately and came upon JJ's body at the Hospital shortly thereafter.

132. Karen Read's negligence caused the death of John II's son, JJ.

133. John II suffered severe and profound emotional injuries manifesting in physical symptoms as the result of observing JJ at the Hospital and witnessing the consequences of Read's negligence.

134. Defendant Read outrageously created a false narrative.

135. John II's emotional injuries, severe physical pain, anguish, emotional distress and other harm were directly and/or proximately caused by defendant Read's negligence.

136. A reasonable person in the same position as John O'Keefe II at the time of JJ's death would have suffered severe and profound emotional distress.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff demands judgement against the defendant, Karen Read, on Count XI, plus interest, costs and any other relief or damages this Court deems appropriate.

COUNT XII

Paul O'Keefe v. Karen Read – Negligent and/or Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress

137. The Plaintiff repeats, re-alleges, and incorporates by reference as set forth hereto in their entirety, prior paragraphs of the Complaint.

138. At all relevant times, Paul O'Keefe was the brother of JJ.

139. Paul O'Keefe learned of JJ's admission to the Hospital immediately and came upon JJ's body at the Hospital shortly thereafter.

140. Karen Read's negligence caused the death of Paul's brother, JJ.

141. Paul suffered severe and profound emotional injuries manifesting in physical symptoms as the result of observing JJ at the Hospital and witnessing the consequences of Read's negligence.

142. Defendant Read outrageously created a false narrative

143. Paul's emotional injuries, severe physical pain, anguish, emotional distress and other harm were directly and/or proximately caused by defendant Read's negligence.

144. A reasonable person in the same position as Paul O'Keefe at the time of JJ's death would have suffered severe and profound emotional distress.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff demands judgement against the defendant, Karen Read, on Count XII, plus interest, costs and any other relief or damages this Court deems appropriate.

COUNT XIII

Kayley Furbush v. Karen Read – Negligent, Reckless and/or Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

145. The Plaintiff repeats, re-alleges, and incorporates by reference as set forth hereto in their entirety, prior paragraphs of the Complaint.

146. At all relevant times, Kayley was the niece of JJ. JJ was her guardian since her parents passed away.

147. Kayley learned of JJ's death or injury when defendant Read woke Kayley up at approximately 4:30 am on January 29, 2022.

148. Defendant Read knew Kayley was vulnerable, having already lost her parents at age six.

149. Nevertheless, in Kayley's presence, defendant Read spoke on speaker phone to various people between 4:30 am and 5:00 am on January 29, 2022.

150. At relevant times on January 29, 2022, Kayley heard defendant Read say "(JJ) never came home... Maybe I did something... Maybe a snow plow hit him... Maybe I had hit him.... Maybe I hit him... (we) were in an argument... Maybe he got hit by a snow plow."

151. As a result of the conversations defendant Read had in her presence, Kayley perceived the injuries caused to her guardian, uncle JJ, and perceived the injury producing event.

152. At or about 5:00 am, after waking Kayley up and informing her that something happened to JJ, defendant Read left Kayley home alone.

153. Defendant Read intentionally and/or recklessly inflicted severe emotional distress when she woke up Kayley and informed her that she hit her uncle or that a snow plow hit her uncle.

154. Defendant Read either intended to inflict emotional distress in Kayley, or knew or should have known that emotional distress was likely to result from defendant Read's conduct.

155. Defendant Read's conduct was extreme and outrageous, beyond the bounds of decency and was utterly intolerable.

156. Then, after JJ was declared dead, defendant Read came to the family house and feigned concern. Rather, it became clear that defendant Read was only there to collect her belongings and to take possession of the murder weapon.

157. The emotional distress suffered by Kayley was severe and of a nature that no reasonable person could be expected to endure it.

158. Defendant's extreme and outrageous conduct caused Kayley aggravated emotional distress manifesting in physical symptoms.

159. Kayley also suffered severe and profound emotional injuries as the result of perceiving JJ JJ's death and/or the injurious producing event, the consequences of Read's negligence.

160. Then, defendant Read outrageously created a false narrative

161. Kayley's emotional injuries, severe physical pain, anguish, emotional distress and other harm were directly and/or proximately caused by defendant Read's actions.

162. A reasonable person in the same position as Kayley Furbush at relevant times including the time of JJ's death would have suffered severe and profound emotional distress.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff demands judgement against the defendant, Karen Read, on Count XIII, plus interest, costs and any other relief or damages this Court deems appropriate.

C & C HOSPITALITY, LLC d/b/a C. F. MCCARTHY'S & others[3]

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER ON DEFENDANTS' PARTIAL MOTIONS TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO MASS. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6) (Paper Nos: 37, 37.3, 37.4)

This matter arises out of the January 29, 2022, death of John Joseph O'Keefe, III ("JJ").[4] Defendant and moving party, Karen Read ("Read"), was previously charged with several crimes in connection with JJ's death. During the pendency of Read's criminal case, plaintiffs Margaret O'Keefe ("Margaret," JJ's mother), John O'Keefe, II ("John," JJ's father), Paul O'Keefe ("Paul," JJ's brother and personal representative of JJ's estate), and Kayley Furbursh ("Kayley," JJ's niece) filed this civil lawsuit asserting claims against Read for Wrongful Death (Count III), Negligent and/or Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts X, XI, and XII), and Negligent, Reckless, and/or Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress (Count XIII).

The plaintiffs also asserted claims for Wrongful Death (Counts I and II), and Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress (Counts IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, and IX) against C&C Hospitality,

LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's, G&S Hospitality, LLC d/b/a C.F. McCarthy's (collectively, "C.F. McCarthy's") and Waterfall Bar & Grill, LTD d/b/a Waterfall Bar & Grill ("Waterfall"). These defendants are corporate entities that owned bars that allegedly served Read alcohol in the hours leading up to the events at issue.

Read filed a motion to dismiss all emotional distress claims asserted against her. C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall joined on Read's motion to dismiss, similarly seeking to dismiss the emotional distress claims asserted against them.[5] For the foregoing reasons, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to Kayley's claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

BACKGROUND

The following facts are drawn from the plaintiffs' complaint and accepted as true for purposes of this motion.[6]

On January 28, 2022, Read patronized C.F. McCarthy's from 8:51 p.m. through 10:29 p.m. She consumed seven alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Read then patronized Waterfall from 10:54 p.m. that night through 12:10 a.m. the next morning. She consumed two alcoholic drinks during that timeframe. Her blood was drawn on January 29, 2022, and testing revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

[5] C.F. McCarthy's and Waterfall's motions are technically motions for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12(c), as they previously filed answers to the plaintiffs' complaint. However, a "defendant's rule 12(c) motion is actually a motion to dismiss that argues that the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted" (quotations omitted). Jarosz v. Palmer, 436 Mass. 526, 529 (2002). Thus, the court will apply the same legal framework for C.F. McCarthy and Waterfall's motions as that used in assessing Read's motion to dismiss.

revealed that her blood alcohol content would have been between .13% and .29% after leaving Waterfall.

During the timeframe relevant to the instant lawsuit, Read and JJ were in a dating relationship. JJ was with Read that evening, and they had been arguing. After leaving Waterfall, Read got into a motor vehicle with JJ and drove to a residence at 34 Fairview Road in Canton while intoxicated. After arriving at the residence, JJ exited Read's vehicle. Read then drove her vehicle and hit JJ. JJ was knocked to the ground, suffering serious injuries that ultimately led to his death.

Read fled the scene and drove to JJ's residence at 1 Meadows Avenue in Canton. At approximately 4:30 a.m. on January 29, 2022, Read woke up JJ's niece, Kayley, who lived with JJ. Read began discussing JJ's death with Kayley and talked about striking him with her vehicle. "Kayley heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Read also called multiple people between 4:30 a.m. and 5:00 a.m. on January 29, 2022, while in Kayley's presence. At the time, Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who had previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent.

Read left JJ's residence at approximately 5:07 a.m. on January 29, 2022. She arrived at 34 Fairview Road at approximately 6:03 a.m. and discovered JJ buried in snow. JJ was pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 am. "At relevant times after 7:50 am on January 29, 2022, defendant Read went to the grieving house of JJ, feigned comfort to JJ's family, and used the opportunity to, amongst other things, remove the offending weapon, her vehicle, and/or destroy relevant evidence." Complaint, paragraph 47.

Subsequently, over the course of several years, Read made many public statements. "She knowingly and deliberately changed her story and fabricated a conspiracy knowing the same to be false. She publicly communicated this false 'narrative' thereby frustrating Justice for JJ. Such false narrative caused the Plaintiffs aggravated emotional distress." Complaint, paragraph 52.

DISCUSSION

The defendants argue that the emotional distress claims should be dismissed for multiple reasons: 1) distress claims are subsumed by the wrongful death statute; 2) the plaintiffs' claimed distress was not contemporaneous with JJ allegedly being struck by Read's vehicle; 3) there was no extreme or outrageous conduct direct towards the plaintiff that resulted in severe harm; and 4) Kayley's claims for emotional distress fail as a matter of law. The court will address each of these arguments in turn.

A. Standard of Review

To survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 12 (b)(6), a complaint must contain "factual 'allegations plausibly suggesting (not merely consistent with)' an entitlement to relief." Iannacchino v. Ford Motor Co., 451 Mass. 623, 636 (2008), quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 557 (2007). The factual allegations must be "more than labels and conclusions" and "raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Iannacchino, 451 Mass. at 636, quoting Bell Atl. Corp., 550 U.S. at 555. In assessing a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6), the court accepts as true the well-pleaded factual allegations in the complaint and draws all reasonable inferences in the claimant's favor. See Fairhaven Hous. Auth. v. Commonwealth, 493 Mass. 27, 30 (2023).

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

The extent of the court's review generally is limited to the factual allegations in the complaint and any facts contained in any attached exhibits. See Eigerman v. Putnam Invs., Inc., 450 Mass. 281, 285 n.6 (2007). However, the court also may consider matters of public record, items in the record of the case, and documents cited and relied upon in the complaint. Schaer v. Brandeis Univ., 432 Mass. 474, 477 (2000).

B. Wrongful Death Statute and Emotional Distress Claims

The defendants argue that the plaintiffs' emotional distress claims are subsumed by the Massachusetts wrongful death statute, G. L. c. 229, § 2. Among other provisions, the statute identifies the following as recoverable damages:

> "the fair monetary value of the decedent to the persons entitled to receive the damages recovered, as provided in section one, including but not limited to compensation for the loss of the reasonably expected net income, services, protection, care, assistance, society, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice of the decedent to the persons entitled to the damages recovered."

G. L. c. 229, § 2.

Thus, the wrongful death statute contemplates some degree of emotional distress arising from a decedent's death. It addresses the loss of care, assistance, companionship, comfort, guidance, counsel, and advice, all of which go to the relationship between a decedent and individuals pursuing claims under the statute.

The defendants argue that the independent emotional distress claims asserted by the plaintiffs are redundant to the plaintiffs' wrongful death assertions and consequently should be dismissed. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Cimino v. Milford Keg, Inc., 385 Mass. 323 (1982), the Supreme Judicial Court ("SJC") held:

> "The defendant's . . argument that the plaintiff's claim for emotional distress is 'preempted' by the wrongful death action (G.L. c. 229, s 2) misconstrues the common law cause of action for emotional distress. Emotional distress, as the concept has evolved in this Commonwealth, is a severe psychological shock directly resulting from

> experiencing or witnessing the effects of a defendant's conduct. . . . A claim for damages based on emotional distress does not include an administrator's claim for loss of consortium-which will be present in every wrongful death action such as this. Since emotional distress is a wrong to the plaintiff distinct from that done to [the decedent] and the statutory beneficiaries of the decedent, it is not a duplicative remedy and is not 'preempted' by the wrongful death statute." (quotations omitted).

Cimino, 385 Mass. at 334.

Here, the plaintiffs' direct emotional distress claims go beyond the mere fact that JJ died. Instead, they point to the alleged wrongs they suffered in their individual capacities. They aver that they suffered such harm in observing JJ just after his death, having Read attend family events in the immediate aftermath of JJ's death, and Read developing a public and false narrative that frustrated justice for JJ. These claims are separate from JJ's death and instead are specific to the distress the plaintiffs assert in their individual capacities, rather than their status as relatives of JJ pursuant to the wrongful death statute.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding emotional distress and the wrongful death statute.

C. Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress because their alleged distress did not occur contemporaneously with the accident giving rise to JJ's death. This argument is inconsistent with established Massachusetts case law. In Stockdale v. Bird & Son, Inc., 399 Mass. 249 (1987), the SJC stated:

> "In Dziokonski v. Babineau, 375 Mass. 555, 568 (1978), we held that 'allegations concerning a parent who sustains substantial physical harm as a result of severe mental distress over some peril or harm to his minor child caused by the defendant's negligence state a claim for which relief might be granted, where the parent either witnesses the accident or soon comes on the scene while the child is still there.' Two years later, in Ferriter v. Daniel O'Connell's Sons, 381 Mass. 507, 518, we held that the wife and children of an employee allegedly injured through his employer's negligence could maintain an action for negligent infliction of emotional distress, even though they first observed the employee in a hospital immediately after the accident. We said that '[a]

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

> plaintiff who rushes onto the accident scene and finds a loved one injured has no greater entitlement to compensation for that shock than a plaintiff who rushes instead to the hospital. So long as the shock follows closely on the heels of the accident, the two types of injury are equally foreseeable.' Id."

Stockdale, 399 Mass. at 251.

Thus, a family member is entitled to emotional distress damages when they either witness the decedent's actual injury or "come upon the injured [kin] promptly after the injury." Nancy P. v. D'Amato, 401 Mass. 516, 520 (1988).

The plaintiffs allege that Read discovered JJ buried in the snow at approximately 6:03 a.m. on January 29, 2022, and he was subsequently pronounced dead at a hospital at 7:50 a.m. that day. Margaret, John, and Paul each aver that they "learned of JJ's admission to [ ] Hospital immediately and came upon JJ's body at the Hospital shortly thereafter." Complaint, paragraphs 82, 88, 95, 102, 109, 116, 123, 131, and 139. Against this backdrop, the complaint alleges sufficient facts that JJ's parents and brother arrived promptly at the hospital upon learning of JJ's death and thus have actionable claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley's negligent infliction of emotional distress claim stands on different footing, however. She alleges that she "learned of JJ's death or injury when defendant Read woke Kayley up approximately 4:30 am on January 29, 2022." Complaint, paragraph 147. Further, Kayley alleges she "heard defendant Read say '(JJ) never came home . . . Maybe I did something . . . Maybe a snow plow hit him . . . Maybe I had hit him . . . Maybe I hit him . . . (we) were in an argument . . . Maybe he got hit by a snow plow." Complaint, paragraph 150. Lastly, Kayley states that, as a result of Read's conversations in her presence, she "perceived the injuries caused to her guardian, uncle JJ, and perceived the injury producing event." Complaint, paragraph 151.

Taken together, the complaint does not allege that Kayley learned of JJ's death or injury at 4:30 a.m., but instead learned he was maybe injured at that time. There are also no averments

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth

regarding when and the circumstances under which she first observed the deceased JJ. Her averments concern her perceptions of JJ's injuries, rather than her actual observations.

The case law cited by the parties addresses scenarios whereby a family member has observed another family member actually being injured or otherwise suffering shock after promptly encountering the injured family member. Kayley cannot make this showing. In making this assessment, the court acknowledges the following case law cited in the plaintiffs' opposition:

> "the determination whether there should be liability for the injury sustained depends on a number of factors, such as where, when, and how the injury to the third person entered into the consciousness of the claimant, and what degree there was of familial or other relationship between the claimant and the third person" (emphasis in original).

Dziokonski, 375 Mass. at 568.

Such language is inapposite here, as the Dziokonski court's decision turned on liability for negligent infliction of emotional distress and the parameters for when a family member arrived at the scene of an accident giving rise to a relative's injury. Stockdale extended the scope of Dziokonski to family members who promptly arrive at a hospital. Neither of these cases, nor any other cases provided by the parties, creates authority to find negligent infliction of emotional distress for family members who learn of a death beyond this prompt timeframe. Thus, Dziokonski's language about when JJ's injury "entered into the consciousness of the claimant" does not support Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to Margaret, John, and Paul's claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress and ALLOWED as to Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

D. Reckless Infliction of Emotional Distress

The defendants argue that none of the plaintiffs have actionable claims for reckless infliction of emotional distress because there was no extreme or outrageous conduct directed towards them that resulted in severe harm.[7] In the context of such claims, conduct is "extreme and outrageous" if it "goes beyond all possible bounds of decency, and is regarded as atrocious, and utterly intolerable in a civilized community" (quotations omitted). Roman v. Trustees of Tufts Coll., 461 Mass. 707, 718 (2012). The standard of extreme and outrageous conduct is a high bar. Such conduct means more than "workaday insults, annoyances, or even threats and petty oppressions . . . . It means, for example, a high order of reckless ruthlessness or deliberate malevolence that . . . is simply intolerable" (quotations omitted). Conway v. Smerling, 37 Mass. App. Ct. 1, 8 (1994).

The plaintiffs allege that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death, which caused them to suffer emotional distress. In support of their opposition to the instant motions, they have produced a search warrant affidavit, which is a matter of public record that the court may consider in assessing whether the complaint plausibly suggests an entitlement to relief.[8]

According to the search warrant materials, on January 22, 2024, Detective Lieutenant Brian Tully ("Tully") of the Massachusetts State Police applied for a warrant to seize "[a]ny

[7] With reference to the defendants' arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct, the plaintiffs' opposition frames the issue in the context of reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. In the complaint, however, Magaret, John, and Paul do not assert claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Instead, at Counts, X, XI, and XII, they assert claims against Read for negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress. Thus, in ruling upon this motion, the court does not impute an additional cause of action for Margaret, John, and Paul that is not included in the complaint. As discussed below, Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

[8] "Under our common law, judicial records are presumptively available to the public." Commonwealth v. George W. Prescott Pub. Co., LLC, 463 Mass. 258, 262 (2012). "[W]hen filed in court, search warrant materials are judicial records to which the public's presumptive right of access applies once the warrant has been returned." Id. at 263. Thus, once the warrant is returned, it becomes a public document and may be considered by a court when ruling upon a motion to dismiss. See Schaer, 432 Mass. at 477.

mobile device capable of communicating and cellphones used by Karen Read."[9] He filed a return of the search warrant on January 24, 2024.

Tully submitted an affidavit in support of the search warrant application. The affidavit comprises thirty-one pages and discusses Read's communications regarding JJ's death. Briefly stated, the affidavit largely describes actions by a local blogger, Aidan Kearney, who runs a series of social media websites under the name "Turtleboy."

The affidavit states that Kearney posted articles on social media accounts that reflected personal attacks on civilian witnesses, members of their families, and their friends. The affidavit also states that throughout various postings and videos, Kearney identified several individuals who socialized with JJ and Read, stated that they, not Read, were responsible for JJ's murder, and encouraged his social media followers to contact and harass these individuals. Additionally, the affidavit references certain comments Kearney directed to the O'Keefe family:

> "How much slack are we supposed to give you [John O'Keefe's family] . . . the time period for the grief, whatever, that we are giving you, like we are not going after you because of the grief, that is expired. It's expired because you're trying to send an innocent woman to jail for the rest of her life . . . I don't feel bad for you anymore.

Plaintiffs' Opposition, Exhibit A, paragraph 39.

Per the affidavit, Read communicated with Kearney through an intermediary, Natalie Wiweke Berhsneider. Through this intermediary, Read gave Kearney information concerning her case, some of which was potentially not available to the public, which Kearney then used in his social media postings. Read also shared personal information and pictures of many civilian individuals for whom Kearney argued were responsible for JJ's death.

[9] The court acknowledges that the substance of the search warrant affidavit is highly disputed. The court's references to such affidavit are viewed through the lens of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, which requires the court to view facts and draw inferences in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death.[10] Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had "expired" for "going after" the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard, the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress.

Primarily, the defendants' motions set forth generalized legal statements for extreme and outrageous conduct. As to a substantive argument, Read cites to Polay v. McMahon, 468 Mass. 379 (2014). Polay is arguably similarly because it dealt with "(1) filing false police reports and harassment prevention petitions against the plaintiffs; (2) verbally attacking the plaintiffs; and (3) monitoring and recording the plaintiffs' home on a continuous basis." Id. at 386. The SJC in Polay held that such action did not rise to the level of extreme and outrageous conduct. The court acknowledges that Polay shares parallels as to a dispute between individuals which escalated into allegedly harassing behaviors. However, given the extensive scope of media scrutiny and Read's relationship with Kearney, as alleged in the complaint and search warrant affidavit, the facts of this case rise above those at issue in Polay because of their public and pervasive nature.

[10] In making this assessment, the court is not ruling on whether Read's "narrative" was true or false. As with its consideration of the search warrant affidavit, the court is exercising its legal authority regarding the instant motions, which is limited to applying a plausibility standard with facts and inferences viewed in the plaintiffs' favor.

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM

Therefore, the defendants' motions are DENIED as to their arguments regarding extreme and outrageous conduct.

E. Claims Asserted by Kayley Furbush

The defendants argue that the complaint does not assert sufficient facts that Kayley suffered emotional distress, and that it does not describe which conduct applies to which claim. As discussed above, Kayley's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress must be dismissed for failure to state a viable claim. However, consistent with Margaret's, John's, and Paul's claims, Kayley was also plausibly distressed by the public and pervasive nature of Read's alleged false narrative. The alleged facts surrounding Kayley's interactions with Read in the early morning hours on January 29, 2022, can also be plausibly characterized as extreme and outrageous. Such determination supports Kayley's claim for reckless infliction of emotional distress.

Kayley is the only plaintiff who asserted a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. A claim for intentional infliction of emotion distress requires sufficient averments that Read "intended to inflict emotional distress or that [she] knew or should have known that emotional distress was the likely result of [her] conduct." Agis v. Howard Johnson Co., 371 Mass. 140, 144–145 (1976). With reference to the specific allegations of the complaint, Read's motion states that "Defendant's questioning what happened during a phone call with third parties, even if in Kayley Furbush's presence, is also not actionable conduct." This does not convey the full scope of what occurred during the early morning hours of January 29, 2022, in the manner alleged in the complaint. Instead, the complaint plausibly pleads that Read made multiple distressing calls about JJ's physical condition, namely being struck by Read's vehicle or

by a snowplow. Moreover, Read made these statements upon waking Kayley up at 4:30 a.m., which plausibly contributed to the distressing nature of that interaction.

Even if this court were to accept Read's position that she was merely engaging in telephone conversations, "[c]onduct otherwise reasonable may become tortious when directed at an individual known to be particularly susceptible to infliction of emotional distress." Boyle v. Wenk, 378 Mass. 592, 596 (1979). At time of this interaction, it can be inferred that Read knew Kayley was a vulnerable minor who previously lost both parents and lived with JJ as her surrogate parent. Given such status, Kayley would be particularly vulnerable to distress caused by an additional loss of a parental figure. Thus, based upon Kayley's vulnerability and susceptibility, Read, at a minimum, knew or should have known that her conduct would cause Kayley to suffer emotional distress. This plausibly supports a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Therefore, the defendants' motions to dismiss are DENIED as to their arguments regarding the sufficiency of Kayley's claims.

ORDER

Wherefore, the defendants' motions are ALLOWED as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim asserted by Kayley and DENIED as to their claims for reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants' motions are DENIED in all other respects.

NORFOLK, ss. SUPERIOR COURT

Order on Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order

Before the Court is Intervenor Aidan Kearney's Motion for Protective Order Regarding Sharing of Cell Phone Data. After a hearing on March 28th, 2025, and a review of the submissions related thereto, the Motion is ALLOWED in part.

The Intervenor has raised significant concerns regarding confidentiality related to the Commonwealth's prosecution of Mr. Kearney in 2382-cr-00313 - specifically, his concerns over law enforcement's use and/or dissemination of data obtained by search warrant and extracted from Mr. Kearney's cell phones. The Court deems Intervenor's concerns sufficient to warrant further Court action, however, only as it pertains to data that is being produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 order in this case [Dkt. 615] , and only as it relates to the above-captioned case (2282-cr-00117). The Court acknowledges that other investigative materials or discovery beyond that covered by this Order are already the subject of the Court's prior Order [Dkt. 555] concerning counsel's obligations. And, Intervenor Kearney has also moved for an identical Protective Order in the pending case in which he is a Defendant (2382-cr-00313); that Motion is not currently before this Court.

With regard to the data extracted from Mr. Kearney's phones and produced per the Court's March 20, 2025 Order (the "DATA"), the Court ORDERS:

1. All agents of the Commonwealth, including but not limited to any members of any law enforcement agency or agent or contractor thereof, shall maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant.

2. This protective order shall take effect when entered and shall remain in effect unless terminated by entry of a Court Order.
3. Any person who violates this Order shall be in contempt of Court.

SO ORDERED this 31st day of March 2025.

Re: Paul O'Keefe et al. v. C&C Hospitality, LLC et al., Plymouth Superior Court, Civil Action No. 2483-CV-00692

Dear Mr. Diller:

I write on behalf of the Norfolk District Attorney's Office ("NDAO") in response to the subpoena that you issued in the above-referenced action on February 25, 2026, requesting records and access to Karen Read's cell phones; records of communications, including emails by or to Karen Read and/or Aidan Kearney; and records pertaining to the prosecution of Aidan Kearney. Pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(1), this letter serves as the NDAO's written objection to the subpoena.

The NDAO objects to your requests on the grounds that they are overbroad, unduly burdensome, costly, and seek information that is publicly available. See Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (c) (for good cause shown the court should protect record holders from undue burden or expense, particularly when the material is available from some other source, duplicative, unduly cumulative, and in considering the importance of the requested material in resolving the issues); Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4) (additional considerations to the burdens of producing electronically stored data). The NDAO, a non-party record holder, emphasizes the undue burden particularly where the majority of the requests are obtainable from another source, namely defendant Karen Read. See generally Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (NDAO Notices of Discovery 34, 35, 47).

The NDAO objects to producing any information that would jeopardize pending criminal investigations; whose disclosure is proscribed by law, including grand jury materials, and documents that are sealed, impounded, subject to protective orders, or would contravene court orders, including previously raised confidentiality concerns and pending criminal cases. See Commonwealth v. Karen Read [2282CR00117] (docket entries 636, 650); Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088] (docket -00313 entries 22, 47, 61, 62, 76).[1]

Date Filed 6/30/2026 2:13 PM
Superior Court - Plymouth
Docket Number 2483CV00692

Moreover, your request no. 5 and no. 12 appear to contravene the Plymouth Superior Court's March 1, 2026 order to the "Plaintiff's Emergency Moton for Temporary Restraining Order Pursuant to Rule 65 to Prevent Release of Evidence" (Gildea, J.) as well as the Plaintiff's pending request to intervene in Commonwealth v. Aidan Kearney [2382CR00313; 2582CR00088], where the issue of access to cellphones seized from Karen Read is pending a decision of the Court (Krupp, J.).

The NDAO objects to the subpoena to the extent that it calls for the production of materials that are protected by the work-product doctrine, the attorney-client privilege, or other applicable protections, privileges, or immunities against disclosure, including but not limited to internal communications and notes containing attorney work product and/or mental impressions. The NDAO further objects to searching sources of electronically stored information that are not reasonably accessible without the investment of significant time or expense. Mass. R. Civ. P. 26 (f) (2) – (4).

Sincerely,

/s/ Laura A. McLaughlin

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO COMPEL RESPONSES TO PLAINTIFFS' SUPPLEMENTAL KEEPER OF RECORDS SUBPOENA FROM AIDAN KEARNEY

NOW COME the Plaintiffs in the above-captioned matter, and respectfully request that this Honorable Court, pursuant to Rule 45 of the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure and other relevant rules governing discovery, issue an order compelling Aidan Kearney to provide responses and documents to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026. As of the date of service, Plaintiffs have yet to receive responses, objections, or any request for extension from Kearney.

I. RELEVANT BACKGROUND

On April 21, 2026, Plaintiffs served a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena on Aidan Kearney. Responses were due by April 30, 2026. EXHIBIT A. To date, Kearney has made no effort to respond, object, or request an extension. This Subpoena is directly tied to Plaintiffs'

underlying civil action filed on August 23, 2024, against Defendants Karen Read, C.F. McCarthy's, and Waterfall Bar & Grill seeking damages arising from the death of John O'Keefe III. The Complaint asserts claims against Defendant Karen Read for wrongful death (Count III), negligent and/or reckless infliction of emotional distress (Counts X-XII), and reckless and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress (Count XIII). EXHIBIT B.

Central to Plaintiffs' emotional distress claims is the allegation that Karen Read, acting through Aidan Kearney, orchestrated a coordinated public campaign to promote a false narrative surrounding John O'Keefe's death. Kearney, a blogger operating under the pseudonym "Turtleboy," served as Read's agent, mouthpiece, and primary instrumentality in disseminating this harmful content. Communications between Read and Kearney are therefore essential to proving the emotional distress claims.

On August 12, 2025, Karen Read filed a partial motion to dismiss. In ruling on said motion, the Court found the allegations sufficiently plausible to survive dismissal, stating:

> "When applying the plausibility standard required by Rule 12(b)(6), such actions are consistent with the plaintiffs' averments that Read developed a narrative surrounding JJ's death. Kearney unquestionably took extensive efforts in publicizing information regarding the charges against Read, and the affidavit describes Read acting in concert with some of those efforts. Notably, Kearney stated that the time had 'expired' for 'going after' the O'Keefe family and that the O'Keefe family was involved in a coverup regarding JJ's death. Taken as a whole, in applying the plausibility standard the complaint and this warrant affidavit set forth sufficient facts that the extensive media attention perpetuated after JJ's death caused the plaintiffs to suffer emotional distress." EXHIBIT C.

In denying the motion to dismiss, Judge O'Shea endorsed the plausibility of the O'Keefe family's infliction-of-emotional-distress claims, finding that sufficient facts exist to support these claim. These claims remain active today and warrant full discovery.

Separate from this civil action, the Norfolk Grand Jury indicted Kearney on nine counts of witness intimidation, five counts of illegal picketing of a witness, and three counts of conspiracy

to intimidate a witness. The Norfolk District Attorney's Office has conducted criminal investigations into both Read and Kearney. Through these investigations, the NDAO obtained forensic extractions from cell phones belonging to both Read[1] and Kearney. These extractions contain the very communications between Read and Kearney that Plaintiffs require to prove their claims.

On March 31, 2025, the Court entered a Protective Order governing the sharing of Kearney's cell phone data, directing all agents of the Commonwealth to "maintain the confidentiality of the DATA and shall not share, publish, disseminate or otherwise disclose the DATA or any information concerning the DATA to anyone other than counsel of record for the Commonwealth in this matter or counsel of record for the Defendant." See EXHIBIT D.

Plaintiffs have pursued every available avenue to obtain the discoverable materials in the NDAO's possession. On February 24, 2026, Plaintiffs served the NDAO with a Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena seeking materials related to Kearney. On March 6, 2026, the NDAO objected, citing the Protective Order and confidentiality concerns as the primary impediments to production. See EXHIBIT E. Notably, the NDAO did not assert that the materials lack relevance or discoverability. On March 4, 2026, Plaintiffs filed a Motion to Intervene in Commonwealth v. Kearney for the limited purpose of expanding the Protective Order to permit production of these materials to Plaintiffs. That motion remains pending.

Despite these efforts, Plaintiffs still lack access to communications and materials. Kearney's complete failure to respond to the Keeper of Records Subpoena served on April 21, 2026, necessitates this motion.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

[1] Plaintiffs have reached an agreement with Read's counsel regarding the production and handling of the phone extraction data pertaining to Read.

Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(a)(1)(C) authorizes a subpoena commanding a non-party to produce documents. Where a non-party fails to respond, the party serving the subpoena may move for an order compelling production. Mass. R. Civ. P. 45(d)(2)(B). "Failure by any person without adequate excuse to obey a subpoena served upon that person may be deemed a contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued." Mass. R. Civ. P. 45.

In interpreting the scope of discovery under the Massachusetts Rules of Civil Procedure, the Supreme Judicial Court has followed the approach taken under the federal rules, and defined "relevant" evidence "broadly to encompass any matter that bears on, or that reasonably could lead to other matter that could bear on, any issue that is or may be in the case... discovery is not limited to issues raised by the pleadings, for discovery itself is designed to help define and clarify the issues...Nor is discovery limited to the merits of a case, for a variety of fact-oriented issues may arise during litigation that are not related to the merits." Cronin v. Strayer, 392 Mass. 525, 534 (1984), quoting Oppenheimer Fund, Inc. v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 351 (1978).

III. ARGUMENT

A. The Requested Materials Are Directly Relevant And Crucial To Plaintiffs’ Emotional Distress Claims

The materials sought through the supplemental keeper of records subpoena are directly relevant to Plaintiffs’ claims. Plaintiffs’ emotional distress claims rest on Karen Read’s coordinated campaign with Aidan Kearney to promote a false narrative and pit the Read’s against the

O'Keefe's. Publicly communicating this false narrative directly resulted in frustrating justice for John O'Keefe and caused additional harm to the already grieving O'Keefe family. Karen Read's primary vehicle for disseminating this false narrative was her relationship with Aidan Kearney, who operates under the pseudonym "Turtleboy." Aidan Kearney manages various websites and social media accounts through which he publishes the inflammatory and harmful content at Karen Read's direction and active collaboration. As part of its investigation into Aidan Kearney, the Commonwealth obtained search warrants and ultimately seized multiple electronic devices including cell phones, laptops, cameras, SD cards, etc. The Plaintiffs have a good faith basis to believe that the data contained on these electronic devices will prove Plaintiffs' allegations and multiple aspects of their claims. Without relief, Plaintiffs cannot timely authenticate these materials.

B. The Plaintiffs Require These Materials Urgently In Order To Conduct Discovery In Their Civil Case

With the discovery deadline fast approaching in the civil matter, the Plaintiffs have an urgent need for these materials. Plaintiffs have noticed the deposition of Aidan Kearney and Karen Read and require communications and device extractions to effectively for and conduct that deposition. Additionally, Plaintiffs require these materials to prepare their cases. Without such materials the Plaintiffs will suffer prejudice.

IV. REQUESTED RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Honorable Court: (1) GRANT this Motion to Compel; (2) ORDER Aidan Kearney to produce all documents and materials responsive to Plaintiffs' Supplemental Keeper of Records Subpoena within ten (10) days of the Court's Order; and (3) GRANT such other and further relief as this Court deems just and appropriate.
